At a General Meeting of the Surtees Society, held in the Castle at Durham, on the 6th of June, 1854, it was

Resolved,—"That a Volume of Wills from the Registry of York should be edited by the Rev. James Raine, Jun. M.A. as one of the Publications of the Society for the Year 1855."

JOHN PEDDER,

Secretary.

PREFACE.

THE Council of the Surtees Society has much pleasure in adding a second volume of Wills from the Registry at York to its Testamentary publications.

The present volume extends over a period of twenty-eight years, from 1429 to 1467, a generation fraught with stirring incidents, in which the county of York was especially concerned. Then it was that the houses of York and Lancaster strove together for the mastery, and the best and bravest of the chivalry of England were sacrificed to family hatred and personal ambition. In this disastrous contest Yorkshire lost some of her stoutest sons. So deeply, indeed, was this county affected by that sanguinary war that it was the intention of the Editor to have prefaced this volume with a short account of the local history of the time, as an introduction to the documents which are now presented to the public. The space, however, which this account would have required has been resigned in favour of an index to the volume of Wills from the Registry of York which the Society has already published. This index will be a valuable addition to that interesting volume.

The reader may probably observe, in the present volume, many words and phrases which set at defiance all the ordinary rules of grammar. For these the Editor cannot hold himself responsible. It has been his endeavour to give the documents as he found them, and he has only deviated from this rule in a few cases where the error has manifestly originated in the carelessness of the scribe.

The Editor may, perhaps, be blamed by some for making the notes, which illustrate the present volume, too genealogical. He has done this advisedly. It is not the object of the Society to republish matter which has already seen the light, and the Editor is confident that almost all the points which seem to require illustration are satisfactorily explained in works which are within the reach of every antiquary. In the present volume the notes are, in many cases, supplementary to the text itself, as they contain curious details and information, which, although undeserving of a more prominent position, could not be entirely omitted.

The Society is deeply indebted to the kindness of the Rev. L. G. Harcourt, the registrar of York, and to his deputies, Messrs. Hudson and Buckle, for permitting the publication of the present volume. The Editor also, individually, has great pleasure in acknowledging the courtesy which he has experienced at the hands of Messrs. Hudson and Buckle, who readily afforded him every facility during his lengthened searches among the treasures under their charge.

TESTAMENTA EBORACENSIA.

I. TESTAMENTUM ROBERTI LASCY, DOMICELLI, DE GAYTFORD.

Feb. 12, 1426. Robertus Lascy* de Gaitford—sep. in ecclesia de Brayton. Johanni Strensall vicario ecclesiæ de Brayton, et Hugoni Sherley, cantariæ presbitero de Haddelsay, duas acras terræ in quibus Willelmus Pace, vicarius ecclesiæ de Ricall, et Johannes de Rycall, capellanus, sunt feoffati in campo vocato Preestland, et duas acras terræ adjacentes, ad solvendum uni capellano idoneo et honesto divina in capella de Gaytford, durantibus nonaginta et novem annis post decessum meum, in augmentacionem salarii sui, pro anima Magistri Johannis Notyngham et animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum, celebraturo.—Ricardo Lascy, fratri meo, unum equum precii xl s. vel xl s., et omnem armaturam meam et unam togam cum furrura, videlicet, unam de skarlett. Willelmo Lascy, fratri meo, omnia terras et tenementa quæ michi hereditarie descendebant post mortem Johannis Lascy patris mei, de perquisicione sua, in villa et campis de Selby, ad totam vitam suam. Johanni filio meo unam peciam argenti stantem super tres leones, coopertam, et sex cocliaria argenti. Willelmo† filio meo unam peciam argenti cum coopertorio argenti.

* The testator may perhaps have been descended from a younger son of the great baronial family of Lacy. At all events, he was a gentleman of large estates and property. In 1584, Glover found the arms of the family in Selby Church, to which they had probably been benefactors.

The meaning of the word domicellus, which is here applied to the testator, is not quite evident. In earlier times it appears to have been the name given to the eldest son of a king, nobleman, or gentleman, who was still in his minority. In a manuscript in the library of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, there is a Papal Brief in 1356, "Johanni de Hilton, domicello," [i. e., as Rud explains it, baronis de Hilton filio primogenito.] It is dated at Avignon. The word seems to have been afterwards applied to a household servant, one however who was in the confidence of his master, and apparently in a position superior to that of the other domestics.

† William Lascy of Gaitford makes his will at Selby, February 10, 1468-9, by which he desires to be buried in the church-yard of Brayton. He mentions his wife Margaret, his son John, and his brother John.

Johannæ filiæ meæ unam peciam argenti flatt, coopertam, et sex cocliaria argenti et xx^ti marcas ad maritagium suum. Volo quod Willelmus filius habeat omnia terras et tenementa mea in Acome et Holgate post mortem Johannæ uxoris meæ.—Johannes filius meus junior—Johannæ uxori meæ ; Johanni Strensall, Hugoni Sherley, et Ricardo Lascy fratri meo, executoribus meis, omnia terras et tenementa mea in comitatibus Ebor. et Lincoln., durante minore ætate Johannis filii et heredis mei—filiæ meæ.—[Prob. 3 Dec. 1429.]

II. TESTAMENTUM WILLELMI WYVELL ARMIGERI.

In Dei nomine, Amen. In festo S. Petri ad Vincula, A.D. M.cccc.xxx., Ego Willelmus Wyvell,* armiger, de Slyngesby in Rydall, compos mentis—corpus meum ad sepeliendum in eccles. par. de Slyngby, in medio ejusdem ante crucem. Item lego optimum equum meum sellatum cum armatura pro mortuario meo. Item lego iiij lb. ceræ comburendæ circa corpus meum in die sepulturæ meæ, cum uno torto.—Fabricæ eccles. B. Petri Ebor. iij s. iiij d.—Cuilibet ordini Fratrum Ebor. ij s.—Lumini altari de Slyngby iij s. iiij d.—Cuilibet filio meo spirituali xij d. Lego Agneti uxori meæ unam domum, quæ vocatur Mason place, cum iiij. bovatis terræ, ad terminum vitæ suæ. Item lego Ricardo filio meo unam domum quæ vocatur Dowfecote place, in australi parte villæ de Slyngby. Lego Roberto filio meo unam domum in eadem villa juxta cimiterium. Johanni filio meo optimam bigam meam. Johanni Dowell alteram bigam meam. Residuum —Agnetem uxorem meam, dominum Willelmum Wyvell filium meum, dominum Edmundum rectorem de Foston et Rob. Barnard armigerum executores—supervisores dominum Ricardum Hastyng militem et Joh.† filium meum.—[Prob. 14 Aug. 1430.]

* Slingesby in Rydale was the ancient seat of the family of Wyvill, which afterwards took up its head quarters at Constable Burton, in Richmondshire. The old pedigrees of this house carry it up through a long line of knights to Sir Humphrey Wyvill of Slingesby, who came into England with the Conqueror ; but I strongly suspect their accuracy. I am inclined to think that the Robert Wyvill who laid the foundation of the Richmondshire branch, by his marriage with an heiress of Pigot, was the son, or at all events a near relative, of the testator. The family of Wyvill of Osgodby, which is now connected with the house of Slingesby, was undoubtedly the elder and for some time the more vigorous branch. It maintained its position at Osgodby for a considerable time.

† John Wyvill, of Osgodby, Esq. the testator's son, by his will, dated 17 December, 1460, desires to be buried in the choir of the chapel of Cayton, near the body of Robert Barde, Esq. He leaves for his mortuary his best horse with all his armour for his body. To the fabric of the tower of the church of Slingesby he gives 20*s.* if it may be built within three years after the date of his will, but if the parishioners will not build it within that time, he leaves the 20*s.* to his brother Sir William Wyvill, rector

III. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI NICHOLAI STRELLEY DE STRELLEY MILITIS.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Ego Nicholaus Strelley* miles, bonæ mentis et sanæ memoriæ, die Veneris proximo post festum Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, anno Domini Millesimo quadringentesimo trigesimo, condo testamentum meum in hunc modum. Inprimis, lego animam meam Deo Omnipotenti et Beatæ Mariæ et omnibus Sanctis ejus ; et corpus meum ad sepeliendum in ecclesia parochiali Omnium Sanctorum de Strelley. Item lego optimum averium, nomine principalis mei, rectori predictæ ecclesiæ. Item lego xx libras ceræ et quatuor tapers ad comburendum circa corpus meum a die sepulturæ meæ usque in diem meum septimum. Item volo quod executores mei ordinent septem capellanos statim post obitum meum ad faciendum officium de Placebo et Dirige circa corpus meum, et ad celebrandum pro anima mea et animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum per septem dies proxime sequentes, in ecclesia predicta, videlicet, quolibet die tam Placebo et Dirige, quam alias missas, videlicet, unam missam de Requiem cum nota, secundam de Sancta Maria cum nota, terciam de Sancta Trinitate, quartam de Spiritu Sancto, quintam de Omnibus Sanctis, sextam de Omnibus Angelis, et septimam de die de quo dicunt suum servicium : et quod quilibet capellanorum predictorum habeat unam nigram (togam) cum capucio ejusdem sectæ et vj s. viij d. in pecunia numerata, cum cibis et potibus de meo, predictis septem diebus durantibus. Item volo quod predicti capellani eligant quinque pauperes clericos maxime egentes ad ministrandum in ecclesia predicta per predictos septem dies : et quod quilibet eorum habeat quolibet die ij d. ; videlicet, unum denarium ad offerendum ad missam de Requiem et j d. pro tencione tortarum et unam nigram togam cum capucio ejusdem of Dalby, to be spent on the fabric of his church there. To each order of the Mendicant Friars at Scarborough, 3*s*. 4*d*. To John Wyvill his son and heir 20 ewes. To Richard his son 40*s*. He appoints Isabel his wife, and Sir William Wyvill his brother, his executors. [Pr. 11 July, 1460.]

Another John Wyvill of Osgodby, probably the son of the above, and the grandson of William Wyvill the testator, makes his will 31 March, 1466, and desires to be buried in the chapel of St. John the Baptist at Caiton. He makes Agnes his wife and Sir William Wyvill rector of Dalby his executors.

* The testator, the head of a distinguished Nottinghamshire house, married, according to the recorded pedigree of his family, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Edward Pierpoint, Knight, by whom he had two sons, (Sir) Robert and John. The number and variety of the charitable bequests render this will extremely interesting ; and the clauses against dicers and tavern-haunters, a rare denunciation in those days, bear witness to the good sense and feeling of the testator. But how was the legacy to be recovered upon a breach of promise ? On August 1, 1441, Archbishop Kempe grants permission to Robert Strelley, Esq. and Alice his wife, to have divine service celebrated in their house.

sectæ et unum novum par sotularium, et sustentacionem in cibis at potibus, ut supra. Item volo quod predictæ tortæ non illuminentur nisi tantum ad levacionem sacramenti missæ de Requiem; et, predictis septem diebus completis, predictæ xij. tortæ isto modo distribuantur, videlicet, quatuor tortæ ecclesiæ de Strelley predictæ, et duo capellæ Sanctæ Mariæ in eadem ecclesia, duo ecclesiæ de Bilburgh, duo ecclesiæ de Trowell, et duo capellæ de Shipley. Item volo quod predicti executores mei eligant quinque viduas maxime egentes vestibus albis indutas de meo, quæ dictæ viduæ quolibet die offerent quælibet illarum j d. ad missam de Sancta Maria de meo; et quælibet earum teneat quolibet die unam candelam ad predictam missam de Sancta Maria de meo; et quod quælibet earum habeat in toto xx d., et sustentacionem in cibis et potibus, predictis septem diebus durantibus. Item lego pro expensis in die sepulturæ meæ, cum sex diebus proxime sequentibus, cum stauro domus meæ, xx marcas. Item lego c s. ad distribuendum inter pauperes maxime egentes infra villatas de Strelle, Hymmesley, Nuthall, Bafford, Bilburgh, Chilwell, Adenburgh, Stapulford, Trowell, Cessall et Adesworth secundum discrecciones predictorum executorum meorum; ita semper quod nullus, qui utitur talis vel aliis jocis illicitis, aut tabernis nocturnis temporibus illicitis, habeat summam predictam, nisi voluerit facere sufficientem securitatem meis predictis executoribus quod ea omittat; et si compertum fuerit postea quod ea non omiserit tunc omnes summas predictas, sic receptas, meis prefatis executoribus restituat. Item lego x s. Fratribus Minoribus Notynghame, ad celebrandum unum trentale pro anima mea et animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum. Item lego x s. Fratribus Carmelitis Notyngham, ad celebrandum unum trentale pro anima mea, ut supra. Item lego x s. Fratribus Predicatoribus Derb' ad celebrandum unum trentale pro anima mea et animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum.—Executores meos facio Johannem Cokfeld* armigerum, Thomam Meres armigerum, Henricum Knyveton armigerum, Robertum Willughby† rectorem ecclesiæ Sancti Petri Notynghame, Nicholaum Pakker rectorem ecclesiæ de Bilburgh,

* John Cockfield, of Nuthall, co. Notts, Esq. the last male representative of his family, married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Foljambe, Esq. and left no issue. His estates passed to his sister Agnes, who married John Talboys, Esq. By his will, dated December 4, 1453, he directs his body to be buried in the church of St. Patrick at Nuthall. He constitutes Margaret his wife, Robert Clifton, and Richard Willoughby, Esqs. William Foljambe, sen. William Ford, and William Clough, his executors, and makes William Babington, Esq. his supervisor. His widow, the Lady Margaret, made her will at Wollaton, in 1462. It will be given in its proper place.

† Robert Willoughby, a younger son perhaps of the house of Wollaton, was rector of St. Peter's Nottingham, and orders himself to be buried in the chancel of that church, by his will, dated March 2, 1438-9. Mr. William Clifton, and his brother Sir John, are the residuary legatees in his will, which was proved at York, April 30, 1439.

IV. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI ROBERTI CLYFFORD VICARII DE BOSSALL.

Jan. 21, 1428-9. Ego Robertus Clyfford,† vicarius ecclesiæ parochialis de Bossall, compos mentis, tamen sentiens michi mortis periculum appropinquare, condo testamentum meum in hunc modum. Inprimis commendo animam meam Deo Omnipotenti, Beatæ Mariæ Virgini gloriosæ, totique collegio civium superiorum, et corpus meum ad sepeliendum in ecclesia predicta. Item, do et lego ecclesiæ predictæ duo vestimenta, unum, videlicet, de viridi damasc', et alterum de tarteryn, coloris murray, unum Missale, unum Manuale, unum Psalterium feriatum et unum calicem argenti. Residuum Priori ecclesiæ cathedralis Dunelmensis et Henrico Helay ‡ confratri et commonacho suo. [Pr. 12 Nov. 1430, and administration granted to brother Henry Helay, monk of Durham.]

V. TESTAMENTUM OLIVERI WODEROW, DE PAROCHIA DE WOLLEY.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Ego Oliverus Woderow,§ in festo Sancti Martini in yeme, anno Domini millesimo cccc^{mo} tricesimo, compos

* Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and a member of an illustrious Nottinghamshire family. He married the rich heiress of Martell, who brought the estate of Chilwell into his family. His will is dated on 3 October, 1454, and in it he desires to be buried in the church of the Holy Trinity at Lenton (Monasterii de Lentona), in the chapel of St. Mary, "de novo ibidem constructa." He mentions his wife Margery, who is said by Thoroton to have died in 1442, and his sons William, Robert, and Robert. [Prob. 10 Oct. 1454.]

† The incumbent of one of the Yorkshire livings which were in the gift of the prior and convent of Durham. His will is brief, but interesting ; and in it he leaves all his effects to the pious and antiquarian prior of Durham, John Wessington, who appears to have been his personal friend and patron, and to Henry Helagh, a Durham monk. As Helagh could not undertake the executorship without the permission of his superior, Clifford had previously obtained that permission, and in his licence, dated 1 April, 1427, Wessington says that he makes the concession, "ad magnam instanciam amici nostri predilecti Domini Roberti Clyfford, vicarii de Bossill." (Hist. Dunelm. Scriptores Tres, ccxv.)

‡ Henry Helagh appears to have been a man of some ability. He was evidently a favourite monk : he was bursar of the monastery for two years. In 1437 he became Prior of Holy Island, where he continued till 1441 or 1442, when he was recalled to Durham at the request of Bishop Neville. In February, 1446-7, Prior Ebchester allows him to spend a month at Finchale (gracia spaciandi). His stay there must have been prolonged, as we find him at Finchale in the following year.

§ A will with which Mr. Hunter appears to have been unacquainted when he compiled his pedigree of Woodruffe of Wolley. There is a great deal of confusion in the earlier genealogy of this family ; and it is extremely difficult to ascertain who are its present representatives. Richard Woodruffe, the last member of the family who is mentis, condo testamentum meum in hunc modum. Inprimis, lego Omnipotenti Deo, plasmatori meo, animam meam, quam scio cruore precioso redemit, et corpus meum ad sepeliendum in ecclesia de Wolley. Item lego optimum equum meum apparatum, prout decet, nomine mortuarii mei. Item volo quod quicquid acciderit Deo vel sanctæ ecclesiæ quoque modo de me in vita mea primo impleatur de bonis et catallis meis. Item lego Priori et Conventui de Munkbretton, pro decimis oblitis seu subtractis, xx s. Item lego ad summum altare ecclesiæ de Wollay unam tabulam de passione Christi, quæ est in capella mea predicta. Item lego fabricæ ecclesiæ Beati Petri Eboracensis dimidiam marcam auri. Item lego fratribus de Tykhill unum nobile pro uno trentali. Item lego Fratribus de ordine Minorum de Doncastre pro alio trentali unum nobile. Item lego Fratribus Carmelitis de Doncastre pro alio trentali vj s. viij d. Item lego Fratribus de Pontefracto pro alio trentali vj s. viij d. Item lego decem marcas auri ad exequias meas faciendum. Item lego decem marcas auri distribuendas pro anima mea pauperibus. Item lego xxj. marcas auri ad celebrandum pro anima mea per tres annos. Item lego Aliciæ Skargill ad maritagium suum decem marcas auri. Item lego Agneti Flynthill servienti meæ xl s. auri. Item lego Johanni Laverok alteri servienti meo xl s. Item lego Willelmo Pynning seniori xl s. de auro. Item lego Willelmo Pynnyng juniori xl s. auri. Item lego Olivero Gaunt quinque marcas auri. Item lego Marjoriæ Pynnyng xl s. auri. Item lego Thomæ Bank xiij s. iiij d. auri. Item lego Christoforo Pyncus, si expectaverit mecum in servicio, xlij s. iiij d. Item lego parvo Ricardo Pynnyng filio Aliciæ xx s. auri. Item lego Willelmo Westenden nuper servo meo xx s. Item lego Willelmo Hynchcliff nuper servo meo xx s. Item lego Willelmo Mirfeld meum optimum ciphum argenti deauratum cum coopertorio ejusdem. Item lego Johanni Wodrow * unum ciphum argenti recorded by Mr. Hunter, married one of the coheirs of Thomas Percy, the attainted Earl of Northumberland, and left issue behind him, the history of which, from various causes, it is now almost impossible to trace. The testator was probably the son of John Woodruffe, who makes his will on the 2nd of August, 19 Richard II. In this will he is not mentioned by name, but, as the great family estates may have been previously settled upon him, his father may have thought that he was already sufficiently provided for: at all events, when Oliver Woodruffe died, he was in possession of John Woodruffe's estates; and the interval between his death and that of his supposed father is too short to admit of another generation. John Woodruffe in his will mentions his wife Catherine, his daughters, his daughter Margaret, and his son John. Oliver Woodruffe the testator died on 20 Nov. 1430, leaving John, son of John his brother, as his heir.

* John Woodruffe, the nephew of the testator, was receiver of Edward IV. for the manors of Wakefield, Coningsbrough, and Hatfield. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Laurence Hamerton of Wigglesworth in Craven, Esq. and left issue by her. By his will, dated at "Wolnelay," Oct. 6, 1487, which was proved at York on the 20th of November following, he makes Richard Woodruffe, his son and heir, his executor; signatum cum uno liberd in capite coopertorii. Item lego eidem Johanni decem cocliaria argenti signata cum A. et V. Item lego eidem Johanni unum gladium harnysht cum argento, nuper fratris ejusdem Johannis, cum uno nowche cum lez perlez. Residuum executoribus meis, quos constituo Aliciam uxorem meam, Willelmum Mirfeld, Henricum Norththorp capellanum, Thomam Sutell * capellanum, et Johannem Laverok.—Scriptum apud Wollay. [Pr. 12 Dec. 1430.]

VI. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS NEVILLE DOMINI DE LATYMER.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Ego Johannes Neville,† dominus de Latymer, compos mentis, lego animam meam Deo omnipotenti et Beatæ Mariæ et omnibus Sanctis; et corpus meum ad sepeliendum in choro ecclesiæ Abbathiæ Beatæ Mariæ Eboracensis, ubi sepulturam meam elegi et lapidem meum apposui. Item lego summo altari predictæ Abbathiæ magnum meum Missale pro mortuario meo. Item lego duo candelabra de argento summo altari ejusdem ecclesiæ. Item lego Bibliam meam Prioratui et Conventui de Gisburn. Item lego Prioratui de Byschmede vestimentum de rubio satyn integrum. Residuumque bonorum meorum non legatorum do et concedo Thomæ Lambton‡ armigero meo, simul cum omnibus debitis meis. In cujus rei testimonium presentibus sigillum meum apposui. Datum apud Popylton, in festo Concepcionis Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, Anno Domini Millesimo cccc^{mo}. xxx^{mo}. et Regis Henrici Sexti nono. Presentibus in sigillatione testamenti hujusmodi discretis viris Stephano Ednam§ generoso, Johanne Frances, Alano Horselay. [Prob. 14 Dec. 1430.]

and he mentions Elizabeth Wentworth, his son Richard's daughter. On October 4, 1453, Archbishop Kempe grants an oratory to John Woderoff, Esq. and Elizabeth his wife.

* A Thomas Sutyll, vicar of South Kirkby, makes his will on Feb. 8, 1466-7, and directs his body to be buried in the churchyard, near the great door. He leaves to the church a gilt cross. Thomas Trigott of South Kirkby, Esq. and John Sutill, rector of Thornemanby, are his executors.

† The only son of John Lord Neville of Raby, by his second wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of William Lord Latimer. In 19 Ric. II. he was fourteen years of age; and in 5 Hen. V. he was summoned to Parliament as Lord Latimer. He married Matilda, daughter of Thomas Lord Clifford, and widow of Richard Earl of Cambridge, whose will is printed hereafter; but he left no issue. His estates and title passed on to his great-nephew, George Neville, third son of Ralph Earl of Westmerland. His will, it is to be observed, is dated at the little village of Poppleton, near York.

‡ Most probably the son and heir of William Lambton of Lambton, Esq. and his master's favourite esquire. Two years after the date of the present will he became the head of his ancient house on the death of his father. His mother lived in York during her widowhood, and was buried in the church of St. Helen-on-the-Walls in 1439. Her will occurs under that year.

§ Stephen Ednam of Appleton, by his will, dated March 13, 1450–1, desires to be buried in the church of Lastingham. He leaves Joan his wife as his executrix, and

VIII. TESTAMENTUM ROBERTI PLAYSE DE EGTON.

April 1, 1429. Ego Robertus Plays *—sep. in ecclesia mea parochiali de Lyth. Item lego optimum animal meum nomine mortuarii mei—Rectori de Croft pro decimis meis oblitis xx s.

* Robert Place of Aton, in Pickering Lyth, was the ancestor of that house of Place which afterwards settled at Halnaby and Dinsdale. Of the early history of this family there is but little known, and the present document, therefore, will be especially welcome to the genealogist. The testator, by his marriage with the rich heiress of Halnaby, became possessed of large estates in the North Riding of Yorkshire and Durham, which, at the time when he makes his will, were probably encumbered with the jointure of his mother-in-law, who seems to have been in possession of the plate of her family, and perhaps also of the manor house at Halnaby.

Four children are recorded in this will. Robert, the eldest son, who married Isabel one of the five-and-twenty children of Sir Ralph Pudsey of Bolton and Barford, by whom he left issue, William and Thomas, who died childless, and a daughter Elizabeth.

Sir William Place, Knight, the father of the testator, by a deed of gift, executed at Siggeston, "die Jovis post festum Annuntiationis, 19 Richard II." conveyed all his property to Margaret his wife and her children.

Margaret his wife, a daughter of Robert Lelom, died in the year 1400, and her will occurs in Testamenta Eboracensia, Part I.

This Sir William was the first of the family who settled at Aton. He became located there in right of his mother Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Sir William Aton. His father died before him, and his mother re-married Sir John Conyers of Sockburn, and died in York in 1402, having survived her second husband.

Rectori de Lythe pro decimis meis negligenter oblitis xx s. Domino Johanni Cleseby,* rectori de Mersk in comitatu Richmondiæ, optimum ciphum meum murram argento ligatam. Johanni Trollop unum ciphum argenti altum et coopertum pounsed et chased, in custodia dominæ Johannæ matris uxoris meæ existentem, si bene poterit adquiri extra manus suas. Roberto Cleseby consanguineo meo et filiolo meo unum alium ciphum argenti ejusdem formæ et staturæ in custodia predictæ dominæ Johannæ existentem, si bene poterit adquiri de manibus suis. Agneti uxori predicti Johannis Trollopp sex cocliaria argenti in custodia predictæ dominæ existentia, si bene poterunt adquiri de manibus suis. Radulpho Pudsay unum ciphum argenti coopertum et unum salarium argenti coopertum et intus deauratum, in custodia dictæ dominæ Johannis matris uxoris meæ. Roberto filio meo et heredi totam armaturam meam cum duobus gladiis, unus principalis, et alius pro guerra. Willelmo filio meo unum gladium trenchand, et omnia terras et tenementa mea in Holme et Spaldyngmore et Santon juxta Wighton, de quibus feoffavi predictos Robertum Cleseby, Johannem Trollopp et alios, ad terminum vitæ suæ, et tunc remaneant rectis heredibus meis. Thomæ filio meo unum gladium curtum cum capa argenti et omnia terras et tenementa mea in Cunselay, Sleghtes, Ogilwardby et Danby juxta Egton, ad terminum vitæ suæ et tunc remaneant rectis heredibus meis. Elizabethæ filiæ meæ omnia terras et tenementa mea in villa de Whitby, ad terminum vitæ suæ. Residuum Katarinæ † uxori meæ, quam cum domino Johanne Cleseby, persona de Mersk in comitatu Richmondiæ, domino Johanne Story rectore de Leysham, et Nicholao Clergenet de Richmund, executores meos constituo. [Pr. 13 Jan. 1430-1.]

* This family were owners of the estate of Marske, near Richmond. The representation of the family merged soon after this time in a younger son of the house of Conyers of Hornby, who in right of his wife became owner of Marske. The family of Cleasby of Marske was probably only a junior branch of the great house which flourished at Cleasby from the earliest times.

† Daughter and heiress of Halnath de Halnaby, her brother Acrisius de Halnaby, who had been betrothed to Elizabeth daughter of Sir John de Burgh in 19 Richard II. having died without issue, if the marriage ever took place at all. After the death of her husband, she appears to have passed her widowhood at Whitby, where her will is dated on the 13th of December, 1461. In it she is styled "Lady Katherine Place." She directs her body to be buried in the Abbey church of Whitby, where the Lady mass is daily celebrated. To Hugh, the Lord Abbot of Whitby, she leaves 20s. and a covered cup of silver, which, at his death, is to go to the use of the refectory of the monastery. To Richard Lelom, her cousin (her mother-in-law was a daughter of Robert Lelom), she leaves a covered salt-seller of silver. To her daughter Elizabeth, one cup (murram). To Margaret Plase, her saddle and bridle and a silver spoon. To Joan Plase, a spoon. She also leaves 6*s.* 8*d.* to keep up the chapel of Egton, and a similar sum to the church of Croft. The will was proved at York, 24 Feb. 1461-2.

IX. TESTAMENTUM PETRI DEL HAY NUPER DE SPALDYNGTON.

August 8, 1426. Ego Petrus del Hay* de Spaldyngton—sep. in choro ecclesiæ de Ellerton juxta corpus Elizabethæ nuper uxoris meæ defunctæ. Lego pro expensis funeralibus meis xx li. Lego ad distribuendum inter servientes meos xx li. Item lego cuidam capellano divina celebranti in capella de Spaldyngton secundum disposicionem executorum meorum xiiij li. Jacobo Cresacre ‡ unum equum. Eliza-

* The head of a Yorkshire family of some eminence and distinction. This will makes several additions to the genealogy of the De la Hays. The testator, it appears, was twice married. His first wife Elizabeth, who was probably the mother of his children, was buried in the monastery at Ellerton. To his second wife he took another Elizabeth, a daughter of John Woodruffe (of Wolley?), and widow of James Cresacre of Barnborough, who survived him, and made her will in 1434, under which year it will be found.

(Sir) Thomas De la Hay, the eldest son of the testator, married a daughter of Sir William Babthorpe of Babthorpe, by whom he left five daughters and coheirs, who carried the representation of his house into the families of Vavasour, Hildyard, Knight, and Thwaites. From the date of his own will, and the absence of his name in the present document, he probably had died just before the date of his father's will. By his will, dated July 1, 1426, in which he calls himself Thomas del Hay, son of Peter del Hay de Spaldyngton, he directs his body to be buried in the conventual church of Ellerton, near Elizabeth his mother. He mentions his brother Robert del Hay, and Joan his own wife, and his children. The wills of several other members of this family may be found in Testamenta Eboracensia, Part I. to which I must refer my readers.

† In all probability the same person who was made prebendary of Givendale, in the church of York, in 1420. He was also rector of Brantingham, where his father appears to have had considerable property, which he leaves to him in his will. Brantingham was a living in the gift of the prior and convent of Durham; and he was probably indebted for his preferment to the kind offices of his father, who may perhaps have held some office there under the monastery. He died in 1448, and administration of his effects was granted on the 8th of January, 1448-9, to Thomas Ellerbek, rector of St. Martin's Conystreet, in York, and William Crosby of Cave.

‡ Several notices of this family will occur under the will of Elizabeth del Hay, in 1434.

* Sir William Bowes of Streatlam, in the Bishopric of Durham, who married Joan, daughter of Ralph Lord Graystock. She died in the first year of their marriage; "thereon he toke moche thoght, and passed into France," where he fought long and gallantly among the chivalry of England, under the Duke of Bedford. He was but a boy himself when he married the youthful daughter of the house of Graystock; but neither lapse of time, nor change of scene, could banish from his recollection the memory of the bride whom he had lost, and the halls of Streatlam never saw a second mistress. He died at a great old age, full of years and honours.

† Son of John de Stowe of Ripon, whose will (dated in 1390) has been published in the first volume of the York Wills. The testator was a retainer in the household of the Earl of Northumberland, and his will, enumerating his curious and scattered goods and chattels, proves that he held some high office in that illustrious family. He had probably witnessed many a Border fray during his sojourn in Northumberland, and had often followed in the wake of the silver crescent.

ordino testamentum meum in hunc modum. In primis lego animam meam Deo et Beatissimæ Mariæ Virgini et Matri ac omni Curiæ Celesti, et corpus meum ad sepeliendum in ecclesia parochiali Sancti Michaelis de Berefrido Ebor., secundum disposicionem et ordinacionem rectoris ejusdem ac executorum meorum. Item volo quod duo cerei ponantur super corpus meum tempore exequiarum. Item quod uterque cereus sit de pondere x lb. ceræ. Item volo quod comburantur circa corpus meum sex torches de pura cera, ita quod quælibet torch sit de pondere xv lb. ceræ, quarum volo et ordino quod duo torches remaneant summo altari ecclesiæ Sancti Michaelis predictæ. Item sex pauperibus portantibus sex torches predictas, cuilibet unam togam de nigro panno cum capucio. Item lego fabricæ ecclesiæ Cathedralis Beati Petri Eboracensis xx s. Item lego domino Roberto Semer, rectori ecclesiæ parochialis Sancti Michaelis predicti, unum librum de Latino, vocatum Policronica, ex compilacione Fratris Ranulphi Monachi Cestriæ, et vj s. viij d. pro sepultura mea in dicta ecclesia habenda. Item lego capellano parochiali ejusdem ecclesiæ iij s. iiij d. Et cuilibet aliorum capellanorum continue ibidem celebrancium xx d. Item clerico parochiali ejusdem xij d. et subclerico vj d. Item lego Abbati de Jerovall xiij s. iiij d. Et cuilibet monacho ejusdem conventus ij s. ad bursam suam propriam. Item lego reverendissimæ dominæ Johannæ Comitissæ Westmerland* unum librum de Anglico, vocatum Gower, pro remembrancia. Item lego Magistro Johanni Carlton† Canonico Ecclesiæ Cathedralis to Thomas Morton, prebendary of North Newbald, in the Church of York, who died in 1449, and a member of the great family of Morton of Bawtry.

* Joan, daughter of John of Gaunt, and widow of Ralph Earl of Westmerland. She was probably residing in her widowhood at the castle of Sheriffhutton. If this were the case, the legacy of "Gower" is an interesting one, as that poet is said to have been born at Stittenham, which is in the parish of Sheriffhutton. At all events, the poetry which has enrolled Gower among the first of our early English poets could not have been written a long time before the date of this will, and few manuscript copies of his works could at that time be in existence. The fact, therefore, of a York gentleman bequeathing the book at so early a date to the owner of the castle of Sheriffhutton may perhaps be brought forward to confirm the tradition that Gower was connected with the ancient family of that name which was then seated at Stittenham.

† John Carlton, or Charlton, probably a Westmerland man by birth, was prebendary of Riccall, in the Church of York. His curious will is dated July 18, 1436. He orders himself to be buried before the high altar in the choir of his church at Riccall, with a marble-stone inscribed with a legend, "ut est moris." He likewise desires that his funeral be celebrated, "sine aliquali serie candelarum, Anglice herce, et sine pompa vel elacione." To the Paternoster gild in York, 13*s.* 4*d.* To my m^r Mr. Robert Gilbert, dean of York, a gilt cup covered like a chalice, with an image of the Virgin on the base, "de qua præ cæteris potare consueveram et dilectabar, ut intuitu ejusdem munusculi mei dignetur memorari." To master Thomas Wilton, doctor in medicine, for his labour betowed upon me gratuitously, my bible, which he has in his hands, and the best zone of two which I commonly used. To Elen Pykeryng a board or tabernacle for the altar, having on it the image of the blessed Virgin Mary, "de lambre;" to John Carleton, doctor of laws, the costers for my chapel in York, one vestment of "burd alisaunder," "unum osculatorium, Anglice paxbreyde," &c.

Beati Petri Eboracensis unum ciphum argenti coopertum, quem nuper habui ex legato Johannis Petyclerk.* Item lego Elenæ de Pykeryng† unum nigrum nott coopertum et deauratum cum una aquila in summitate cooperculi. Item lego Christoforo Boynton unam pipam vini rubii. Item lego pro expensis meis funeralibus honeste fiendis x li. sterlingorum. Item lego Roberto Gaytenby, consanguineo meo, unum collok pece argenti cum scriptura in cooperculo A. B. C., et decem marcas argenti. Item lego Thomæ Yonge servienti meo unum chales copp argenti et deaurati ad modum unius gripe egg cum scriptura in cooperculo Benedictus Deus, etc., et decem marcas argenti. Item lego Johanni Charleton armigero unum flatt pece planum cum scriptura in cooperculo Jhc Nazarenus, etc. Item lego Margaretæ uxori suæ unum flatt pece cum scriptura in cooperculo Drynk and fyll yytt, etc. Item lego Willelmo Alne unum ciphum planum de argento cum uno wreth in cooperculo. Item lego Johanni fratri suo unum librum scriptum manu sua propria de Gestis Romanorum, et unum firmaculum auri. Item lego Roberto Mersk servienti meo unum equum album cum sella et freno, unam togam et unum dublet et xx s. Item lego Johanni Cook unam ollam æneam, unam patellam, unam duodenam parapsidum et unam duodenam discorum de pewter, et xl s. Johanni Somersete xiij s. iiij d. Residuum executoribus meis, quos constituo Magistrum Johannem Carleton, Christoforum Boynton, Robertum Gaytenby, Thomam Yonge et Willelmum Alne—et Magistrum Ricardum Arnall‡ clericum supervisorem. [Pr. 5 Oct. 1431.]

* Citizen and vintner of York. By his will, dated 17 May, and proved 21 July, 1426, he leaves to Simon Sprotley a goblet of silver gilt. To Mr. John Carleton, clerk, junior, a psalter and a pair of knives adorned with silver. To Margaret his daughter, a zone adorned with silver, another zone broken, and a ring of gold with one unicorn. To Richard Wandesford, his wife's son, his best zone adorned with silver, my dagger and my primer. To Mr. John Carleton, senior, a silver piece with a cover gilt with one rose. To John Morton a piece of silver, after the fashion "de buttercoppes," and gilt at either end.

† In 1436, John Carleton, canon of York, leaves her "unum puff argenti pro aqua rosarum spargenda." He also mentions Mary, the wife of James Pickering, and Margaret her daughter, his god-daughter. James Pickering, Esq. is one of his executors.

‡ Richard Arnall, successively prebendary of Barnby and Langtoft, in the Church of York. He also held the office of Sub-dean from 1409 until he died. He was at the same time an official in the court at York, and held the office of auditor to the Dean and Chapter. At the visitation of the Chapter, in the year 1440, the Commissioners reported that he was unable to perform the duties of the last-mentioned office, and that he overlooked many faults and errors in the various officers in the Church. He died on the 9th of June, 1441, and was buried in the Minster. His will is dated in the same year.

XII. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS ESYNGWALD, CIVIS ET MONYMAKERR EBOR.

Nov. 15, 1431. Ego Johannes Esyngwald* de Eboraco, monymakerr—sep. in ecclesia Cathedrali Beati Petri Eboracensis coram magno crucifixo—Domino Roberto Semerr, rectori ecclesiæ meæ parochialis Sancti Michaelis de Berefrido, pro decimis et oblacionibus meis oblitis, xx s. Lego inter Magistrum meum, Commissarium Curiæ Eboracensis, et ceteros socios Consistorii, ad unum jantaculum xiij s. iiij d. Agneti Beverlay filiæ meæ xl s. XIII. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI ROBERTI HYLTON DOMINI DE SWYNE, MILITIS.

Die Mercurii in vigilia Concepcionis Beatæ Mariæ Virginis 1429. Ego Robertus Hilton‡ miles, dominus de Swyne in Holdernes, videns me infra breve temporis spacium ab hoc sæculo transiturum—sep. in australi parte cancelli ecclesiæ parochialis Beatæ Mariæ de Swyne, cum meliori cursario meo cum sibi per-

* A monyer in the celebrated mint at York. The Archbishop's mint was always of considerable importance ; and it is much to be regretted that we possess no regular treatise upon the coinage of this and other episcopal cities. With the exception of a few scanty documents in Drake's Eboracum, and some scattered and meagre notices in our public records, we have no printed evidences which throw any light upon the history of the Archiepiscopal mint at York—a mint which dates from the very earliest times. John Beverley, who appears to have been the son-in-law of the testator, inherited his office ; and his will occurs hereafter.

† Pennyworth. In denariis et denariatis may be rendered by the ordinary phrase, "in penny and pennyworth."

‡ The head of the younger branch of the great family of Hilton of Hilton, which was seated at Swine, in Holderness, a branch hardly less powerful and magnificent than the stately tree from which it sprang. The testator dying without male issue, the heirship general of his family vested in his two daughters and coheirs, of whom some notice will be found appended to the will of his wife, the Lady Joan, which occurs hereafter. Sir Robert's brother, Sir Godfrey Hilton, Knight, married a lady who eventually became the heiress of the rich family of Lutterel, in Lincolnshire; but this line also, in a couple of descents, ran into female representation. A most interesting account of the Hilton Chapel, in Swine Church, which is now, unhappily, in a most dilapidated condition, and of the rich tombs with which it was formerly crowded, will be found in Poulson's History of Holderness. From their position, and Lady Joan's desire to be buried "infra hostium chori ex parte boriali," it may be inferred that the cancellum which Sir Robert mentions is his own family choir, screened as it was from the remainder of the church.

XIV. TESTAMENTUM NICHOLAI BLAKBURN SENIORIS CIVIS ET MERCATORIS EBOR.

Feb. 20, 1431-2. Ego Nicholaus Blakburn* senior, civis et mercator Eboracensis—sep. in ecclesia Cathedrali Beati Petri Eboracensis, in australi parte, coram ymagine Dominæ nostræ

* Nicholas Blackburn senior, citizen of York, one of the wealthiest, and certainly the most munificent, of the merchants of that great commercial city. I am induced to think that he was a Lancashire man by birth, and that he resided for some length of time at Richmond before he settled in York. His arrival at York was the origin of his rapid increase in wealth and influence, an increase corresponding in size and strength to the flow of that fair river, the downward course of which he had been following. We find him holding the office of Lord Mayor of York in 1413 and 1429. He died in the beginning of the year 1432, and was buried in the cathedral church, on the south side, under a marble stone which he had previously prepared. Drake, in his list of the monuments in that once gorgeous temple, does not mention the tomb of the testator. In a window on the north side of the choir of All Saints, North-street, were the pictures of Blackburn and his wife in the attitude of prayer, with various inscriptions.

The name of Blackburn's wife has not been ascertained, but her most interesting will occurs after a lapse of a few years. He appears to have had by her three sons and two daughters. John, who died before him childless, Nicholas, who left a large family, and William. Of his two daughters, Isabella became the wife of Brian Sandford, of Thorp Salvin, Esq., and Alice married John Bolton, a citizen of York. Some further notices of each of these children and their families are appended to the present will. It is not improbable that the Blackburns returned into Richmondshire soon after the death of the present testator, as they disappear altogether from the municipal annals of York, and a respectable family of that name occurs shortly afterwards in the vicinity of Richmond.

Few men have made a more pious or more charitable use of their wealth than Blackburn. He founded a chantry in the chapel of St. Anne in Fossegate, York, and he was probably connected with, if he was not the founder of, four others in York, of which, as he tells us in his will, he was the patron. He leaves the munificent sum of

* Of Thorpe Salvin, Esq. The family of Sandford ended during the reign of Elizabeth, in the three daughters and coheirs of Hercy Sandford, Esq. For these I must refer my readers to the History of South Yorkshire, i. 310. Brian Sandford was probably the first of his name who came from Westmerland into Yorkshire. This change of residence was in all probability caused by his marriage.

† Nicholas Blackburn was an alderman, citizen, and merchant of York. He was also sheriff for that city in 1438. In his will, dated 7th Feb. 1447-8, he desires to be buried in the church of All Saints, North-street. Margaret, his wife, is the only relative he mentions.

‡ Citizen and merchant of York. Sheriff in 1420, and mayor in 1431, and M.P. for the city in the 6th and 7th Henry VI. In his will, dated on the 10th, and proved on the 16th of August, 1445, he desires to be buried in St. Saviour's, York. He leaves all his effects to Alice his wife, and his unmarried sons and daughters.

* By her will, dated at York 1st August, 1446, she directs her body to be buried in the choir of All Saints, Peaseholme. To Sir Thomas Berwyk she leaves her best maser, with the image of the Holy Trinity. To her maid Joan Gray she bequeaths her primer, a St. John's head with all its appendages. To Sissote her maid she leaves "unum febill kirtill et unam togam lynett cum bukasyn." To Joan Bowes a pair of beads of coral and jet.

† John Blackburn, the testator's son, was a citizen and merchant of York, and was M.P. for the city 5th Henry V. His will was made on the Festival of St. Martin, in the winter 1426, and was proved on the 17th of March following. He desires to be buried in the church of the Blessed Mary in Castlegate, near his wife Catherine and his boys. He appoints Joan his wife, Nicholas Blackburn, and John Bolton, his brothers, his executors. To his brother Nicholas he leaves his sword, and to his brother-in-law, John Bolton, he bequeaths "catastam suam depictatam." The inscription on the monument, which was erected in the memory of him and of his first wife in the chancel of St. Mary's, Castlegate, is recorded by Drake.

‡ Citizen and alderman of York. Sheriff 1415, mayor in 1425 and 1433, M.P. for the city, 9th Henry V., 4th and 9th Henry VI. By his will, dated Oct. 31st, 1435, he directs his body to be buried in the church of the Holy Trinity in Curia Regis, before the altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary, near the body of Joan his wife. He leaves to each of the unmarried children of Nicholas Blakburn, alderman of York, and of John and Alice Bolton, his cousins, 20*s*. By codicil, dated Sept. 16th, 1437, he leaves to Nicholas Blakburn, alderman of York, a zone adorned with silver, with a scripture in English. To Thomas Gare, alderman, a zone, worked with eight bars of silver enamelled. To John Karr, his son, a zone, and a baslard adorned with silver. To Nicholas Wyspyngton, alderman, a sword, with the pomel and hilt adorned with silver. To Thomas Karr, junior, a smaller baslard adorned with silver. To Nicholas, son of Nicholas Wyspyngton, a dagger, with a handle of horn adorned with silver. To John Fell, his cousin, a zone of black "tusshewe," adorned with certain round bars of silver, with a dagger.

§ A citizen and merchant of York. Sheriff for the city in 1422, mayor in 1427, and M.P. in the 3rd and 7th of Henry VI.

‖ His interesting will occurs hereafter.

* This is a valuable addition to the information which we possess about the old bridge of Catterick, on one of the principal thoroughfares in the north of England. The contract for the rebuilding of the old bridge in 1421 is in the possession of Sir William Lawson, of Brough, and has been printed in the proceedings of the Archæological Institute. In that document the name of Nicholas Blackburn appears at the head of the contracting parties, and it is stated that the proposed work was to be completed in three years. Whether this contract was acted upon or not I cannot ascertain ; but it seems probable that, at the date of the present will, the work had either not been executed at all, or left incomplete, probably from want of funds. Margaret Blackburn, the widow of the testator, who died in 1435, mentions her husband's bequest towards Catterick Bridge, and sets apart the specific sum of 100*l.* for the fulfilment of it. Finally, on the 9th of June, 1446, the Archbishop of York grants an indulgence of 100 days "ad reparacionem seu novam constructionem pontis de Catrik ultra aquam de Swale." I am inclined to think that the original contract had not been completed. If the new bridge, which is generally supposed to have been built in 1421, had been carried away by some flood, it is probable, I think, that this circumstance would have been alluded to in the indulgence. Kexby and Thornton bridges were situated upon two most important thoroughfares, and crossed the Derwent and the Swale respectively. Kexby Bridge received 100*l.* out of the testator's bequest, as specified in the will of his widow. Sketebridge, or Skipbridge, crosses the Nid about eight miles distance from York. The causeway from the bridge towards Hessay Moor is three miles in length ; and Leland says of it in his Itinerary, "The causeway by Skypbridge towards Yorke hathe nineteen small bridges in it, for avoiding and overpassinge carres cumming out of the mores therby. One Blackburn, who was twys mair of Yorke, made this cawsey; and another without the suburb of Yorke."

† A member of the very respectable and ancient family of Kighley. By will, dated on the 9th of June, and proved on the 16th of October, 1432, Gilbert Kighley, of Cawod, knight, directs his body to be buried in the church of St. Andrew at Kighlay. To Thomas, his son, he leaves all his ordinary apparel, with two swords. The rest of his goods he leaves to his executors, John Paslewe, Hugh Kyghley, Walter Coupland, vicar of Stillingflete, John Wilde, and John Nornand. Sir John Kighley, knight, his brother, is the supervisor.

* Nicholas Clyff, of York, chaplain, by his will, dated 3rd Sept. 1456, desires to be buried in the church of All Saints, North-street. He leaves a vestment of red silk, pictured with stars, to the altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary in the chapel of St. William, upon Ouse Bridge; and to the same altar he gives another black vestment, and another vestment damaged "cum orphrais nigris." To Isabella his servant he leaves a zone of black silk adorned with silver; and to the church of All Saints his Antiphonar. [Prob. 7 Sept. 1456.]

† An inhabitant of Tickhill, who tells us that he is about to become a pilgrim to foreign lands. He makes his will before he leaves his native village, to which, in all probability, he never returned. Pilgrimages were now of ordinary occurrence, and they are more than once mentioned in the present volume. In 1435, John Waynflete, vicar of Darthington, leaves all his goods to be spent "pro salute animæ meæ et omnium benefactorum meorum ad Sanctam Terram, Anglicè, ye Haly Land."

XVIII. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNÆ NUPER UXORIS DOMINI ROBERTI HILTON NUPER DE SWYNE MILITIS DEFUNCTI.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Ego Johanna,* nuper uxor Roberti Hilton de Swyne militis, compos mentis et in fide catholica existens, octavo die Augusti, Anno Domini 1432, condo testa-

* The widow of Sir Robert Hilton, knight, whose will has already been given. She appears to have been the daughter of Sir Robert, and the sister of Sir Marmaduke Constable, of Flambrough, who married Catherine, daughter of Sir Robert Cumberworth, of Lincolnshire, and heiress of her brother, Sir Thomas Cumberworth. There is some doubt, in the Visitation of 1584, as to her maiden name, but this doubt is, I think, now removed. She could not be a Cumberworth, as her issue did not become heirs of that family. The testatrix did not long survive her husband, by whom she left two daughters and coheirs, both of them mentioned in the present will,—Isabel, who married into the family of Hildyard, and Elizabeth, who became the wife of Sir John Melton, knight.

mentum meum in hunc modum. Item lego Margaretæ uxori ejus unam crucem de auro. Item lego Isabellæ et Elizabethæ filiabus meis medietatem mapparum, towels, sanapes et napkyns, quæ cotidie utuntur, omnibus aliis principalibus michi et executoribus meis reservatis. Item lego eisdem Isabellæ et Elizabethæ medietatem omnium vasorum meorum de pewter et messyng apud Swyne. Item lego eisdem Isabellæ et Elizabethæ medietatem omnium lectorum meorum superius et inferius non legatorum. Item lego Margaretæ, filiæ Roberti Constable fratris mei, xiij li. vj s. viij d. Item lego eidem Margaretæ unam togam de sangwyn furratam. Item lego eidem Margaretæ unum lectum de rubeo et nigro cum curtinis, unum matres, unum par linthiaminum, unum par blanketts, et unum canwas. Item lego eidem Margaretæ unum librum de Romanse de Septem Sages. Item lego Roberto Constable fratri meo, principali executori meo, lxvj s. viij d. Item lego Johanni Benyngton, uni alio executori meo, pro labore suo xl s. Item lego eidem Johanni unam togam de skarlett. Item lego Marionæ de Flete, uni executorum meorum, pro labore suo xl s. Item lego eidem Marjoriæ unum lectum de blod cum libardhedes, videlicet unum coopertorium, unam tapetem, unum selor cum duobus qwyrtyns de carde, unum matres, unum par linthiaminum. * The family of Darell of Sessay was one of the most considerable of the Yorkshire houses. On the death of Sir Thomas Darell, who died childless in 1505, his great possessions passed to his sister Joan, the wife of Sir Guy Dawnay, of Cowick. In this ancient and illustrious family they still remain, and it is at present represented by the munificent Viscount Downe.

* This lady was the daughter, and eventually (after the death of Thomas Cumberworth, her brother, who was living in 1441) the heiress, of Sir Robert Cumberworth, of Lincolnshire, by Sibel, daughter and coheir of Sir William Erghum. She became the wife of Sir Marmaduke Constable, of Flamburgh, and thus she was sister-in-law to the testatrix. After the death of her husband, in 1404, she appears to have resumed her maiden name. Other instances of this may be pointed out. Her legacy is an extremely interesting one.

† The head of the house of Sessay. He married Isabella Etton, and his will, which is dated on the 6th of September, 1436, was proved at York, on the 5th of July, in the following year. In it he desires to be buried in the church of Sessay, and he appoints his wife Isabel and Sir Wm. Trafford, knight, his executors. The present bell at Sessay was given to the church by Sir Edmund and his wife.

Par Statutorum Veterum, unum basenett, cum una lorica, et uno gladio. Item lego Elenæ uxori predicti Willelmi Barry, filiæ meæ, et heredibus de corpore ipsius Elenæ legitime procreatis, unam peciam argenti coopertam cum armis meis tam in pecia quam in coopertorio ejusdem depictis, optimam mappam meam, duo manutergia de una secta, unam pelvim cum uno lavatorio, uno dorsorio cum armis meis. Residuum executoribus meis, quos constituo Thomam Baxby, filium Johannis Baxby, et Laurencium Baxby fratrem suum.—Edmundus Darell miles dominus de Seszay supervisor. [Pr. 2 July, 1433.]

XXII. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI JOHANNIS RAVENTHORP, DE EBOR. CAPELLANI.

In Dei nomine, Amen. 26 Jan. 1432. Ego dominus Johannes Raventhorpe,* sacerdos de capella Sancti Martini in Aldwerk, incertus de hora mortis meæ, condo testamentum meum in hunc modum. In primis, lego animam meam Deo et Beatæ Mariæ et Omnibus Sanctis ; et corpus meum ad sepeliendum in ecclesia Sancti Salvatoris nostri. Item lego quinque libras ceræ ad igniendum circa corpus meum die sepulturæ meæ, et in eadem ecclesia offerendum. Item lego optimum vestimentum meum ad summum altare dictæ ecclesiæ. Item lego Psalterium meum predictæ ecclesiæ ad chori servicium ibidem imperpetuum reservandum, cum Martilegio, et ymagine Pietatis de alabastro. Item lego ecclesiæ Sancti Johannis Baptistæ in Marisco de Hundgate, et parochiæ ejusdem, scilicet Ricardo Russell et omnibus aliis parochianis, presentibus seu futuris, magnum Portiforium meum cum duobus pannis sanctificatis et corporali et coopertorio ; ut ibi maneant ad altare Beatæ Mariæ ad servicium Omnipotentis Dei et matris ejus, et Sancti Johannis, eternitaliter. Item lego Thomæ Bracebrigg* calicem sanctificatam cum patena et cocliari eidem calici pertinente. Item lego eidem Thomæ tabulam depictam cum crucifixo, Beata Maria, et Sancto Johanne. Item lego eidem Thomæ duos pannos sanctificatos ad altare cum superaltari et corporali cum coopertorio. Item lego eidem Thomæ unum vestimentum cum angelis depictum et Missale. Post mortem predicti Thomæ, volo, quod dicta calix cum patena, cocliari et Missali remaneat dicto altari Beatæ Marie Virginis prefatæ ecclesiæ Sancti Johannis in Hundgate. Item lego Inetæ, uxori predicti Thomæ, ymaginem beatæ Annæ. Item lego aliud vestimentum cum altari ligneo prædictæ capellæ Sancti Martini in Aldwerk, si ad usum sacerdotalem steterit et duraverit; sin autem, maneat dictum vestimentum ad altare Beatæ Mariæ ecclesiæ Sancti Johannis in Hundgate præscriptæ. Item lego Johanni West Donatum cum Bibliotheca et Primario. Item lego domino Johanni Clerk† librum Evangeliorum et Sermonum cum armilansa mea et optima toga mea. Item lego arbis (sic) Fratribus, preciosum librum Grammaticæ secundum Alphabetum de Catholicon. Item lego Johanni Evenwodd clerico librum secundum Alphabetum de Hugucione. Item lego Agneti de Celayne, servienti michi per multos annos, librum Angliæ de Fabulis et Narracionibus, et omnia utensilia et vasa lignea terrea et ænea et omnia quæ ad lectum pertinent, cum omnibus residuis vestibus et omnia ad ignem pertinentia, quæ in domo mea sunt, cum tabula depicta cum coronacione Beatæ Virginis Mariæ. Residuum vero bonorum meorum et librorum ex illis libris tractatis non legatorum, do et lego disposicioni executorum meorum, ut ipsi eos dividant devotis sacerdotibus et clericis secundum optimam disposicionem suam. [Prob. 27 July, 1433.]

* A York merchant, who was one of the sheriffs for the city in 1416 and Lord Mayor in 1424. His will is dated on September 4, 1436, and in it he desires to be buried in St. Saviour's church before the image of the crucifixion of our Lord. It contains many charitable bequests, and is of a considerable length.

† Chaplain of the chapel of St. Mary Magdalene, between Clifton and Boothom. His will, which has a curious inventory attached to it, occurs in 1451.

XXIII. TESTAMENTUM RADULPHI ADIRLEY DE COLWIK, ARMIGERI.

Feb. 2, 1429. Radulphus Adirlay de Colwik Nowers:* sep. infra cimiterium vel ecclesiam parochialem de Colwyk, circa parentes meos ibidem; uxor mea Elizabetha,† executrix.

Codicillus, 7 Feb. 1429. Alano de Cranwell capellano parvum Missale et alium librum quondam Johannis Frere infrascripti, cum Pety Caton et Graunt Catton, Equivox (sic), et cum diversis aliis scriptis. Item lego Elizabethæ uxori meæ unum par de trussyng coffres, et unum annulum de auro duplicatum, et optimam bursam de cerico. Item lego Agneti Slore filiæ meæ unum annulum de auro cum uno safer in dicto annulo, et unam bonam bursam de cerico. Item lego Thomæ Slore unum longum cofforum bene cum ferro ligatum, et Primarium meum rubrum. Item lego Willelmo de Cranwell unum rubrum Psalterium ad orandum pro anima mea. Item volo quod Fratres Minores de Notyngham habeant xs. et Fratres Carmelitæ de eadem vj s. viij d., sic quod ambo ordines veniant ad manerium meum de Colwik et ad ecclesiam parochialem ejusdem exequias meas ibidem implendo in vigiliis meis et missa, quousque corpus meum humatum fuerit. Item volo quod Elizabeth uxor mea habeat calicem, vestimentum cum duobus candelabris de laton et parvum Missale, cum omnibus aliis ornamentis pertinentibus capellæ meæ. [Pr. 18 Aug. 1433.]

XXIV. TESTAMENTUM THOMÆ PALMES DE NABURN ARMIGERI.

August 11, 1433. Thomas Palmes de Naburn, armiger;‡ corpus ad sepeliendum in ecclesia mea parochiali Sancti Georgii in Fisshergate in Eboraco, juxta corpus Francisci patris mei.—

* The will of another Nottinghamshire gentleman, of whose family there is but little known.

† Elizabeth, his widow, by her will, dated October 6, 1435, desires to be buried in the church of St. John Baptist de Colwyk, near her husband. She mentions her sons William and Sir Alan de Cranwell. [Prob. 26 Feb. seq.]

‡ Thomas Palmes, of Naburn, Esq., married Alice daughter of John Pickering, of Ellerton, Esq., and had issue by her William Palmes, of Naburn, Esq., who succeeded his father. He married Ellen daughter of Guy Rocliffe, Baron of the Exchequer, and made his will December 3, 1478, in which he desires to be buried in the church of St. George the Martyr in York. He directs his feoffees Brian and Thomas Rocliffe to give to Ellen, Elizabeth, and Catherine, his daughters, 20*l.* each; to Guy (his second son, afterwards a serjeant-at-law), 20s. a-year, to be increased to 10*l.* if he be promoted to any ecclesiastical benefice; to Brian his son (afterwards Chief Justice of the Common Pleas), all his array for war, "ad guerram;" to Brian Rocliffe, a gray colt, "pullum;" to Thomas Rocliffe, a mare with her foal. The residue he leaves to Ellen his wife, and he makes Thomas Rocliffe and James Charleton his executors. [Prob. 1478-9.] This ancient family, the history of which receives considerable additions from these two wills, is still flourishing in the male line.

Capellæ Sancti Nicholai in Naburn vj s. viij d.; Georgio Palmes, fratri meo, unam vaccam nigram; Nicholao Palmes, fratri meo, xl s.; Nicholao Symson, servienti meo, unum dublett coopertum cum bukskynnes; Nicholao Nelson unum pilium straminis; Dominæ Johannæ Pykering,* moniali de Munkton, vj s. viij d. Residuum, Aliciæ uxori meæ et liberis meis equaliter dividendum. Executores meos facio Aliciam uxorem meam, Robertum Rudstane de Hayton armigerum, Petrum Cawodd de Cawod armigerum et Thomam Horney vicarium de Tycastre.

Codicil, at Naburn 3 Sep. 1433. Considerans quod Alicia uxor mea viam universæ carnis ante me est ingressa; liberi mei habeant residuum,—Priorissæ et Conventui de Nonmonkton xx s. Georgio Palmes, fratri meo, unum pullanum grisii coloris depascentem in parco de Snayth, et Aliciæ uxori ejus unam suem. [Prob. 17 Sep. seq.]

XXV. TESTAMENTUM WILLELMI ELYOT, LUTER DOMINI DUCIS BEDFORD.

Oct. 10, 1433. Ego Willelmus Elyott,† luter, serviens excellentissimi principis et domini Ducis Bedford, Regentis regni Franciæ, corpus meum ecclesiasticæ sepulturæ ubi Deus ex sua gratia speciali disposuerit. Fabricæ ecclesiæ parochialis Sancti Dionisii Bakchirche London, iij s. iiij d. sterlingorum. Item volo quod expensæ funerales circa sepulturam meam faciendæ fiant per ordinacionem et disposicionem executoris mei subscripti. Residuum omnium bonorum et catallorum ac debitorum meorum, ubicunque existencium, et tam in partibus transmarinis quam cismarinis, do et lego Willelmo Spenser, harpour, socio meo. [Prob. ante Alan Kyrketon decretorum doctorem decanum capellæ serenissimi principis, Domini Regentis Regni Franciæ, Ducis Bedford, 20 Nov. 1433.]

* Probably the testator's sister-in-law and own sister to Sir Richard Pickering, of Oswaldkirk.

† A musician in the household of John Duke of Bedford, the celebrated Regent of France. He seems to have had some property within the province of York, which obliged his executor to prove his will there. In Archbishop Kempe's register there are several denunciations against the King's enemies in France on behalf of the Duke of Bedford. It also contains some indulgences for the ransom of Englishmen who had been made prisoners during the same war. A specimen or two may be interesting:—Jan. 20, 1443-4. An indulgence to Elizabeth wife of Sir John Holt, knight, who had been taken prisoner in Normandy and carried to Mount St. Michael, "Michell." Jan. 4, 1442-3. An indulgence for the relief of James Raynes, master of a ship called the Trinity; John Speton, of York, merchant; John Thomlynson and William Duram, mariners, who had been taken, with their ship, by pirates on the high seas and carried to Bologn, in Picardy: to raise 23*l.* for their ransom. Feb. 28, 1442-3. An indulgence of twenty-eight days to raise 50*l.*, required for the "ransome of Bichard Botiler, of Shropshire, who has been taken captive by the rebels in France, to be paid either to him or to Elizabeth his wife."

XXVI. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS SHAKESPERE DE DONCASTRE.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Ultimo die mensis Octobris, Anno Domini millesimo CCCC^mo^.xxxiij^o^. Ego Johannes Shakespere* de Doncastre, chapman, condo testamentum meum in hunc modum. In primis lego animam meam Deo Omnipotenti, Beatæ Mariæ Virgini, et omnibus Sanctis celi; corpusque meum ad sepeliendum in cimiterio Sancti Georgii de Doncastre. Item lego optimum animal meum nomine mortuarii mei. Item lego iij lb. ceræ ad comburendum circa corpus meum die sepulturæ meæ. Item lego vicario meo iiij d. Et cuilibet capellano existenti ad exequias meas ij d. Et clericis parochialibus, utrique, j d. Item lego fabricæ ecclesiæ Cath. Ebor. xix d. ob. Item lego utrique domui Fratrum de Doncastre, xij d. Residuum vero omnium bonorum meorum superius non legatorum, debitis meis et expensis solutis, do Johannæ uxori meæ sine aliqua condicione; et ipsam Johannam et Willelmum Bramwith de Doncastre ordino et constituo executores meos, ad perimplendum voluntatem meam supradictam. Item lego eidem Willelmo pro labore suo vj s. viij d. si voluerit recipere administracionem. Hiis testibus, Roberto White de Tykhill, et Radulpho Glover de Doncastre, et aliis. Datum apud Doncastre die et anno Domini supradictis. [Prob. 29 Nov. 1433.]

XXVII. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI JOHANNIS WYNDHILL RECTORIS ECCLESIÆ PAROCHIALIS DE ARNECLIFFE.

Sep. 16, 1431. Ego Johannes Wyndhill,† rector ecclesiæ de Arnecliffe in Craven—corpus meum ad sepeliendum infra ecclesiam monasterii Beatæ Mariæ de Alnewyk. Item do et lego xl. libras ceræ in cereis conficiendis ad comburendum circa corpus meum in exequiis meis et missa die sepulturæ meæ. Item volo et lego ad distribuendum pauperibus et egenis die sepulturæ meæ c s. pro anima mea, parentum, et benefactorum meorum. Item do et lego Abbati de Alnewyk missam celebranti die sepulturæ

* A will which will excite some little interest and speculation. The testator appears to have been in humble circumstances, and, with the exception of his wife, he mentions no relations whatever. His profession, I may observe, was a migratory one, and it is curious that the name of the great dramatist's father was also John, and that his profession likewise was but little different from that of the testator. Yorkshire might indeed be proud, if, in addition to her long and honourable list of early poets, she could claim kinship with William Shakespere.

† A vicar of Arncliffe, in Craven, to which he was presented by the Earl of Northumberland in 1394. His bequests to the churches in Alnwick prove that he had not always lived among the wilds of Craven.

meæ vj s. viij d. Item do et lego cuilibet capellano sive monacho, canonico seu fratri, interessenti ad exequias meas et ad missam die sepulturæ meæ, xij d. Item do et ordino unum capellanum celebraturum per duos annos post mortem meam ad ecclesiam meam de Arnecliffe, divina officia in dicta ecclesia interessentem, et orantem pro anima mea, parentum et omnium benefactorum meorum, et pro quibus aliquo modo teneor orare. Item volo et ordino unum capellanum ydoneum celebraturum in capella Sancti Michaelis in Alnewyke per tres annos pro anima mea, ita videlicet, quod dictus capellanus non absentabit se, sed erit presens in omnibus divinis serviciis factis in dicta capella, nisi necessitas se impediat. Item do et lego ad reparacionem ecclesiæ meæ de Arnecliffe, et ad distribuendum inter parochianos meos pauperes, per visum sex vel octo hominum fidedignorum de dicta parochia juratorum ad hoc electorum per ordinarium Archiepiscopi et parochianos ibidem, xx li. in moneta. Item do et lego Abbati et Conventui Beatæ Mariæ de Alnewyk unum vestimentum de cereco blodio et deauratum cum leonibus super leȝ orfrays. Item do et lego summo altari Beati Michaelis de Alnewyk predicta unum vestimentum de rubio cereco et unum magnum Missale. Item do et lego ecclesiæ meæ de Arnecliffe unum vestimentum rubeum et deauratum. Item do et lego ecclesiæ de Calverley infra Comitatum Ebor. unum vestimentum rubeum biss' cum volucribus albis. Item do et lego Domino Comiti Northumbriæ* unum ciphum argenti coopertum chasedd. Item do et lego Radulpho Percy,† filio dicti Domini Comitis, omnia terras et tenementa mea quæ habeo infra comitatum Ebor. et Northumbriæ. Item do et lego Agneti, filiæ Roberti de Nonwykthornes, unum

* Henry second earl of Northumberland, the son of the famous Hotspur. He was killed at the battle of St. Alban's on the 22nd of May, 33 Henry VI., ex parte regis, and was buried in the abbey church there. William Essyngwald administered to his effects at York, to the use and at the request of the Lady Eleanor, the widow of the deceased earl. The house of Percy had no peer among the noble families of England for valour and magnificence, but it paid most dearly for that coveted pre-eminence. The famous crescent set, as it arose, in blood. Henry the first Earl of Northumberland was killed at Bramham Moor, 8 Henry IV. His brother, Thomas Percy Earl of Worcester, had been beheaded at Shrewsbury five years previously. Hotspur, the first earl's son, was killed at Shrewsbury, 3 Henry IV.; and Sir Ralph Percy, his brother, was slain at Newcastle, 12 Richard II. Henry the second earl fell at the battle of St. Alban's, 33 Henry VI. Henry the third earl was slain at Towton Field in 38 Henry VI.; and his brothers, Sir Thomas and Sir Ralph Percy, fell at Northampton and Hedgelymoor. Henry the fourth earl was murdered at Coxlodge, near Thirsk, in 1489. Henry the fifth earl died a natural death; but his son, Sir Thomas Percy, was executed at Tyburn, 29 Henry VIII. for his share in Aske's rebellion; and his grandson, Thomas the seventh earl, one of the leaders of the rising in the North, died on the scaffold at York, in 1572. Henry the eighth earl shot himself in the Tower, 29 Elizabeth.

† Sir Ralph Percy, the fourth son of the second Earl of Northumberland, adopted, with his father and brother, the cause of Henry VI., and was killed in the battle at Hedgelymoor, "saving the bird in his bosom."

* Eleanor daughter of Ralph Earl of Westmerland, and widow of Richard Lord Despenser.

† The family of Scargill is one of great antiquity. It seems to have lived in considerable retirement, as we find it but rarely mentioned in local history. Lede Grange, where the Scargills resided, is in the parish of Ryther, and in the immediate vicinity of Towton Field. Joan Scargill, the wife of the testator, died in 1421, and I must refer my readers to the first volume of the York Wills for some extracts from her will. John Scargyll, of Ledys (probably the testator's son), by his will, dated 22nd Dec. 1472, and proved on the 3rd of January following, desires to be buried in the choir of the Holy Trinity, in the church of the blessed Peter at Leades. Alice, his wife, and Henry Rokelay are the executors as well as the residuary legatees mentioned in that document.

* John Brockholes became prebendary of Bole, in the cathedral church of York, 13th July, 1424. In 1434 he exchanged his canonry in the church of Wells, his prebend of Combe Septima, and his rectory of "Tenebegh" with Mr. John Blodewell for the rectory of Stretton in the Clay. In 1444 he resigns his canonry in the church of York, and in the following year the Archbishop of York allows him to resign his living of Stretton, granting him a retiring pension of 20*l.* a-year for life. He was at that time, as he tells us himself, aged and infirm, and almost blind.

† A Yorkshire gentleman, who makes his will in London. Of the family of Santon there is but little known. Richard Santon, of North Cave, Esq. the father of the testator, by his will, dated Dec. 10, 1432, and proved on the 29th of January following, desires to be buried in the church of All Saints at North Cave, before the altar of St. Thomas. He leaves money for a priest to pray for his soul, and for those of Agnes and Isabel his wives, and Richard Santon his father. He makes Isabel his wife and Peter his son his executors, and John Ellerker his supervisor.

* Elizabeth, daughter of John Woodruffe (of Wolley), and successively widow of James Cresacre, of Barnebro', and Peter de la Hay, of Spaldington. This will makes several additions to the pedigree of Cresacre, which is given in Mr. Hunter's "South Yorkshire," and suggests one or two alterations in it. The family of Cresacre had been seated at Barnborough from a very early date. The first will of any member of it that has as yet occurred to me is that of John Cresacre, the father-in-law of the testatrix, which is made on the Wednesday after the feast of St. Matthew the Apostle, in 1408. He directs himself to be buried at Barnborough, and mentions Sibil his wife and James his son.

† The family of Cresacre seems to have had some connection with the parish of Campsall, where the testatrix appears to have passed her widowhood. An inscription, formerly in a window in the church, requested the prayers of the worshippers for the souls of John Cresacre and Elizabeth, his wife, who had piously erected the window which contained the request.

‡ The eldest son of the testatrix. Mr. Hunter gives a most interesting account of his tomb in the church of Barnborough, and I rejoice to be able to give the date of its erection. By his will, dated on the 19th of January, 1476-7, and which was proved at York on the 2nd of February following, he desires to be buried in the church of St. Peter at Barneburgh, near the tomb of Alice Cresacre his wife. He leaves 40*s.* to inclose with a stone wall (cum petris) the cemetery of his parish church; and he also leaves five marks to repair the tower of the same edifice. To Catherine Cresacre he bequeaths 20*l.* towards her marriage; and he makes his sons John and Mr. Edward Cresacre (sub-dean of York,) with others, his executors.

children, a son and a daughter. Ralph Lord Cromwell was found to be heir to his grandmother, at her death in 1420. He was then 16 years of age. He married Margaret, the daughter and coheiress of William, son of John Lord Deincourt, but he had no surviving issue by her. He died in 1455, and a full account of this great nobleman, and his pious and charitable works will be found appended to his will, which occurs hereafter. As he died without issue, the representation and the vast estates of his lordly house passed away to his only sister Maud, the second wife of Sir Richard Stanhope, of Rampton, to whom she was married in the 12th of Henry IV.

* Sir Richard Stanhope of Rampton, co. Notts, was twice married. By Elizabeth, his first wife, he left issue male. His second wife was the wealthy heiress of the noble house of Cromwell, by whom he had a son and two daughters. The son, Henry Stanhope, died without issue, 31 Henry VI., leaving his two sisters coheirs to their mother's estates. Of these Joan, who appears to have been the elder sister, married Humphrey Bourchier. Maud, the younger sister, married into three illustrious houses. Her first husband was Robert Lord Willoughby of Eresby; her second was Sir Thomas Neville, to whom we find her married in 1446-7; and her third was Sir Gervase Clifton of Clifton, knight. The licence for the last marriage was granted by the Archbishop of York 10th August, 1461. By none of these husbands did she leave any issue, and at her death, in the 13th of Henry VII., her estates reverted to Sir William Knyvett and William Fitzwilliam, Esq. the representatives of two of her great aunts, Elizabeth Cromwell, who had married Sir John Clifton, and Maud Cromwell, the wife of Sir William Fitzwilliam.

XXXIV. TESTAMENTUM WILLELMI ALCOK DE KYNGESTON SUPER HULL.

In Festo Conceptionis Sanctæ Mariæ Virginis, 1434. Ego Willelmus Alcok * de Kyngeston super Hull, mercator—sep. in cimiterio ecclesiæ Sanctæ Trinitatis ante crucem ibidem, cum optima toga mea nomine mortuarii mei. Fratribus Augustinianis villæ prædictæ, existentibus ad exequias et missas celebrandas pro anima mea, die sepulturæ meæ et septimo die, scilicet, vj s. viij d. Fratribus Carmelitis ejusdem villæ vj s. viij d. existentibus ad exequias et missas prædictas diebus prædictis. Fabricæ ecclesiæ parochialis de Southmuskham prope Newerk vj s. viij d. Johannæ uxori meæ omnia terras et tenementa mea. Residuum dictæ Johannæ, ad acquietandum omnia debita mea ac eciam ad exhibendum et gubernandum omnes pueros meos.—Executores constituo uxorem meam et Thomam Alcok filium meum. [Prob. 13 Jan. 1434–5, by the widow.]

* A wealthy merchant, and the father of the pious and munificent Bishop Alcock. John Alcock, Bishop of Ely, is said by Leland to have been born at Beverley. His father's will, we may observe, is dated at Hull, but, in addition to the manifold contingencies to which traders are subject, there seems to have been a large migration from Beverley to Hull about this period, and Alcock may perhaps have shared in it. John Alcock appears to have been a younger son. He was admitted to the order of subdeacon by John Bishop of Philippolis, the suffragan of the Archbishop of York, on the 8th of March, 1448-9, the abbey of Thornton, in Lincolnshire, of which house he may perhaps have been an inmate, giving him a title. He became deacon on the 29th of March, 1449, and priest on the 12th of April following. After this he probably began his residence at Cambridge, of which university he became so distinguished an ornament and patron. His first benefice was the rectory of St. Margaret's in Fish Street, London, to which he was presented by Thomas Kempe, Bishop of London, in 1461. Kempe was nephew to the Archbishop of York, and had himself held several lucrative offices, to which his uncle had presented him, and he was probably acquainted with Alcock before he had removed to London. After this Alcock's progress was rapid, but as it is so intimately connected with the history of the time it need not be recapitulated here. Suffice it to say, that he was successively Bishop of Rochester, Worcester, and Ely, whilst the important and responsible offices of Ambassador to the Court of Castille, the Mastership of the Rolls, the Presidency of Wales, and the Lord High Chancellorship of England, were the rewards of his services to the state. But it is not on his civil and ecclesiastical preferments alone, great though they be, that the fame of John Alcock rests: Jesus College, in Cambridge, is a living monument of his energy and munificence, and the Grammar School and the Chantry which he founded at Hull prove that he had not forgotten the scenes of his earlier days. He died at Wisbeach Castle on the 1st of October, 1500, and was buried in a gorgeous chapel which he had himself erected at the east end of his Cathedral at Ely, which, like his brother's plate, was resplendent with cocks, the punning arms of his family. Robert Alcock, the Bishop's brother, followed the profession of his father, and was a merchant at Hull. His will, which was made at Worcester on the 14th of August, 1483, probably at the instigation and under the superintendence of his brother, was proved at York on the 10th of July following. In it he mentions Thomas Alcock, his brother, and he bequeaths to John Alcock, his brother Thomas's son, the fourth part of a ship called the George. He leaves to his son-in-law John Dalton, the husband of his daughter Katharine, 69*l.* which was the marriage portion of his wife. To Robert Alcock his son he leaves his large cup "cum gallis consignatum," his own signet, and all his zones, "quæ cum gallis consignantur." The residue is left to Catherine his wife.

XXXV. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI JOHANNIS DENE, CANONICI IN ECCLESIA COLLEGIATA BEATI PETRI RIPON.

* Sir Thomas Surtees, of Dinsdale, in the county of Durham, knight. He was 20 weeks old at the death of Alexander Surtees, his father, in the 4th of Richard II. We find him sheriff of Northumberland, 10th Henry V., an office to which he was elected in right of the lands which he inherited from his mother, who appears to have been a Northumberland heiress. He seems to have been a man of considerable weight and position in the county. It would be curious to ascertain what induced the knight of Dinsdale to desert his fair inheritance on the Tees. He may have had a winter residence in York, of which he was the occupant when his last illness overtook him. He may, perhaps, have gone thither for change of air and medical advice; but if he left health behind him on the fair isle of Dinsdale, he could scarcely expect to recover it beneath the shadow of St. Peter. He may perchance have been on a visit to his Yorkshire kinsmen, and have died ere he could return to his own home. He died on the same day on which his will is dated, and his bones rest not beside those of Goscelinus and his fore-elders in their small but picturesque church, which overhangs the Tees, but in that of St. Nicholas in Walmgate, in the suburbs of the city of York, which is now destroyed. His wife was a daughter of Sir Ralph Eure, of Wilton Castle. By her he left a daughter, Elizabeth, of whom we have no further notice, and a son, Thomas, who became his heir. He was 20 years of age at his father's death, and he died on Christmas Day, 22 Henry VI. For a full and ample account of this illustrious family I need only refer my readers to the great work of that distinguished antiquary who bore their name if he did not inherit their blood. The badge of the Society which was founded to do honour to his memory is an exact copy of the seal which was used by the testator, Sir Thomas Surtees.

Willelmo Scott famulo meo unum lectum ut supra, unam togam de sangwyn penulatam cum capucio, et unam tunicam de nigro panno penulatam. Aliciæ Rughede unam sellam cum freno pro muliere ordinatam, et Ceciliæ Rughede unum lectum, ut supra, cum tribus parvis dorsoriis de blodio et rubeo. Et volo quod unus capellanus celebret pro anima mea in dicta ecclesia dicti Nicholai per unum annum proxime post decessum meam, si bona mea ad hoc sufficere poterunt. Residuum, Elizabethe filiæ meæ. Executores meos facio Robertum Constable fratrem meum, Thomam Surteys filium et heredem meum, et Henricum Tailboys de Hurworth. [Prob. 19 April, 1435.]

* The widow of Nicholas Blackburn senior, citizen and twice Lord Mayor of York. His will has been already printed, and the present document forms an appropriate sequel to it. I print it almost entire, and it will be read with great interest. I can add nothing to the genealogical and historical notices which are appended to Nicholas Blackburn's will.

XL. TESTAMENTUM RICARDI RUSSELL CIVIS ET MERCATORIS EBOR.

Decemb. 1, 1435. Ego Ricardus Russell, civis et mercator Eboracensis‡—corpus meum sepeliendum in ecclesia mea paro-

* Of Holme Pierrepoint, co. Notts, the head of a great and wealthy family, of which Thoroton gives a somewhat obscure pedigree. He died without a will, and on the 3rd of November, 1453, Margaret his widow and John his son administered to his effects.

† Another money-maker. The will of his father-in-law, John Esyngwald, has been already given, and the testator in all probability succeeded him in his place. The family of Beverley arose to some wealth and eminence in York. The pieces of plate which the testator mentions were probably the work of his own hands.

‡ The will of this great merchant gives us a fair, and at the same time a very favourable, picture of the wealth of the metropolitan city of the north at the time. Commerce, which has since enriched the towns of Leeds, Bradford, Halifax, and Sheffield, at this time of comparatively little importance, was now seated at York, chiali Sancti Johannis Baptistæ in Hundgate in Eboraco. Rectori dictæ ecclesiæ meæ parochialis prædictæ pro mortuario meo optimum pannum meum cum capucio pro corpore meo talliato. Et eidem rectori ad orandum pro anima mea c s. Et volo quod campanile ecclesiæ Sancti Johannis Baptistæ perficiatur, secundum quod opus inde incipiatur, de expensis meis, per supervisum Johannis Cotom cementarii. Et volo quod Johannes Bolron carpentarius faciat unum ostium, unam scalam, et totum meremium pro campanis pendendis in campanili prædicto, et quod campanæ sint pendentes in campanili predicto. Et quod dicta ecclesia sit ornata infra, secundum quod in æstate proxima futura convenit ecclesiæ prædictæ. Et quod unum altare fiat bene et effectualiter de tabulis, in parte boriali dictæ ecclesiæ, coram ymaginibus Beatæ Mariæ et Sanctæ Annæ, et subtus idem altare unum almarriolum pro libris et vestimentis eidem altari pertinentibus fideliter conservandis. Et quod unum aliud altare fiat sufficienter ex parte australi dictæ ecclesiæ, coram ymaginibus Sanctarum Katerinæ et Mariæ Magdalenæ, secundum formam alterius altaris supradicti. Et quod tres fenestræ novæ lapideæ in ecclesia predicta sint vitriatæ et perimpletæ in æstate proxima futura, meliori modo quo poterint, secundum discrecionem executorum meorum. Et lego custodibus fabricæ dictæ ecclesiæ et successoribus suis, ad deserviendum in dicta ecclesia Sancti Johannis Baptistæ predictæ imperpetuum, unum chesable, unum alb de gris fustiane steyned cum signis, et unum chesable, duas tunaklis de nigro arras pulverizatas cum auro de Luke, et unam sectam cum le3 tunaklis, duos chesables, et unam capam pulverizatam cum stellis aureis cum uno frontello et uno panno pro

Beverley, and Hull, and at no place perhaps was it in a more thriving state than in York. Few ancient cities could, at this time, show a larger number of companies and gilds for the advancement of trade, and in few cities was there a closer union between commerce and religion. York in the olden days was rich beyond description in churches and in religious and charitable institutions, for which she was principally indebted to the piety and munificence of her merchants. The testator, who appears to have taken a high place among the merchant princes of the city, was brought up in his youth in the monastery at Durham, and the legacy which he leaves to it in his will shows that he still remembered the place of his nurture. From one or two notices in his will we may infer that his wealth was derived from the sale of wool, and he was probably connected with that great company of merchants who formed the staple at Calais, and who were so intimately connected with the city of York. In 1412 he was one of the sheriffs for the city, and in the years 1421 and 1430 he was elected to the office of mayor. He lived in Hungate, and was buried in the church of St. John in that street. The church of St. John, of which we have such valuable notices in the will before us, is now entirely destroyed. It was probably pulled down in 1586, when the Act of Demolition, which was passed in the first year of Edward VI., was carried into effect. The district belonging to it, together with that of St. Andrew's, was then united to St. Saviour's. The chantry, which was founded in this church by the testator, was afterwards augmented by the piety of another wealthy merchant, who was apparently related to its founder, John Thirsk. The yearly value of the chantry at the Dissolution was 6*l.* per annum.

altari ejusdem sectæ, cum duobus aliis altarclothes et duobus meis corpraxis, et unum aliud nigrum vestimentum de rubio de auro de Cipres, videlicet, unum chesable, duos tunacles et unam capam cum pertinentiis; et unam magnam Antiphonariam notatam, quæ incipit tercio folio Seph nuncia; et unam Legendam in duobus libris secundum usum et ordinale Ecclesiæ Cathedralis Beati Petri Eboracensis, quorum primus liber incipit secundo folio, per aliter fieri; et secundus liber incipit tercio folio mittit servicio: et duo Gradalia notata, quorum unum majus, quod incipit tercio folio, Quem Joseph; et aliud minus, quod incipit tercio folio Intende qui. Et unum aliud novum Gradale notatum quod incipit tercio folio potenciam; et unum librum notatum de Invitatoriis cum Versibus et Collectis cum Processionario in eodem pro festis principalibus; et unum magnum Missale pro summo altari, quod incipit secundo folio post kalendare, meus egressus; et unum calicem cum patena, et unum cocliar argentatum et deauratum cum duabus phiolis argenteis, sub hac condicione, videlicet, quod capellanus parochialis, qui pro tempore ibidem fuerit, oret specialiter et oneret omnes parochianos ibidem singulis diebus dominicis, tempore precum, specialiter ad orandum pro anima mea, ac anima Petronillæ* nuper uxoris meæ, parentum, benefactorum meorum, et omnium fidelium defunctorum, in pulpito dictæ ecclesiæ imperpetuum. Et lego custodibus fabricæ ecclesiæ parochialis Sancti Salvatoris in Civitate predicta c s. Et lego xl lb. ceræ in tribus cereis conficiendis et circa corpus meum comburendis die sepulturæ meæ tempore exequiarum mearum. Et xlviij s. ad emendum duodecim torch, precii cujuslibet iiij s. ad ardendum ad hujusmodi exequias. Et volo quod octo eorum incombusti dentur summo altari, duo altari Beatæ Mariæ, et duo altari Sanctæ Katerinæ in ecclesia mea parochiali predicta, ad ardendum ibidem tempore elevacionis Corporis Christi. Et lx s. ad emendum pannum pro pauperibus, tenentibus torch tempore exequiarum mearum. Et ad distribuendum pauperibus et egenis de tempore decessus mei antequam corpus meum fuerit humatum xx marcas.

* Petronilla, the wife of the testator, made her will 25th March, 1434, and ordered her body to be buried in the church of St. John in the Marsh (of Hungate). She leaves to the nuns of the house of Marrick, viz. to Dame Agnes Wensley, 20*s.*; to the Prioress, 2*s.*; to Dame Joan Colvell, 6*s.* 8*d.*; to Dame Joan Blaxton, 6*s.* 8*d.*; and to the other sisters of the said house, 12*d.* each; to her cousin (consanguineæ) De la Ryver, 6*s.* 8*d.*; to the church of Brompton, four torches of the value of 40*s.*; to Petronilla Thresk, her goddaughter, one chaplet "de perill" and her best beads of coral, with gaudes of gold. She also mentions her sister Elizabeth Birkhede, and makes her master and spouse, Richard Russell, her executor. [Prob. 12 July, 1435.] From one or two notices in this will, as well as in that of her husband, the Russells seem to have been connected with Richmondshire, and it is rather singular that the Blackburns appear to have migrated to York from the same district.

* John Russell, citizen and merchant, of York, makes his will 3rd October, 1443, and leaves his body to be buried in the church of St. Mary the Elder, near the tomb of Joan Russell, his mother. He leaves four marks to buy two large candlesticks of laton for the use of the said church; to Margaret Gascogn, daughter of John Bolton, alderman, a new coverlet. He also gives full power to Philip Best, of Calais, merchant, and Richard Lematon, citizen and merchant of York, to sell all the goods and merchandise which he has at Calais.

† Christiana wife of John Thresk, who was probably a sister of the testator, made her will 5th July, 1434. She leaves to her sister, Elizabeth Gamyll, her gown of murray, with fur "de grayn;" to Joan, her husband's sister, her gown of "sadbukeshorn grene;" and to Emmot Sheffeld a kirtle of "mustardevelers."

‡ His will is dated die Veneris before the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, 1446. He directs himself to be buried in the church of St. Saviour's, York, before the image of St. Thomas the Martyr.

XLIV. TESTAMENTUM MAGISTRI THOMÆ DAUTREE DE EBORACO CLERICI.

In Dei nomine, Patris, Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, Amen. Ego Thomas de Alta Ripa,† clericus Eboracensis, sanus composque mentis et corporis, benedicto Altissimo, existens, ac perpendens statum condicionis humanæ fragilem et caducam, volensque propterea periculis et dispendiis verisimilibus instantis temporis plus solito imminentibus prout michi datum fuerit desuper caucius precavere, et animæ meæ saluti consultius providere; et quamdiu

* The porter at the gate of St. Mary's Abbey. There is no show about his will, and nothing can be more simple than its arrangements. His piety dictates the bequest to the monastery, and the sacrist, who probably makes his will, receives 6*s.* 8*d.* for his burial fee. To the neighbouring church of St. Olave's he leaves 20*d.*; the rest, with the exception of a friendly legacy to the convent, is left to his wife. The old gatehouse of the abbey is still standing: it retains its ancient form, but it is now occupied as a private dwelling-house. The present state of the ruins of the abbey does the greatest credit to the inhabitants of York.

† Of the parentage of this learned and accomplished gentleman I am completely ignorant. He was evidently a lawyer by profession; but, in addition to that learning and research which are necessary to secure a high legal fame, he seems to have made some advance in the gentler, and then rarely trodden, paths of literature and taste. This will is, without doubt, the composition of the testator himself, and the whole document, especially the preamble, reflects the greatest credit upon his good feeling and piety. It must be read with the will of his son John Dautre, which was made in 1458, and the two form a pair more really interesting and valuable than any perhaps that I have met with. Robert de Alta Ripa, a brother of the testator, was chantry priest at the altar of the Blessed Virgin in the church of the Holy Trinity, in Goodramgate, York. By his will, dated on the 7th of May, and proved on the 5th of November, 1429, he desires to be buried at the threshold of the porch of his parish church. He mentions his brother Mr. Thomas De Alta Ripa (the testator).

in corpore meo viget quies, ac racio mentem gubernat, inevitabile mortis debitum prevenire, et de bonis michi a Deo collatis pro me et meorum salute et remedio animarum salubriter providere, antequam mors ipsa rabida, quæ nemini mortalium parcit, me subtrahat ab hac luce; invocata Spiritus Sancti gratia, testamentum meum sive meam ultimam voluntatem condo et facio in hunc modum. Inprimis lego et commendo animam meam Deo Omnipotenti, Creatori et Redemptori meo, sub proteccione gloriosæ Virginis Mariæ ejusdem genetricis; corpusque sive cadaver putridum pulvere sepeliendum in ecclesia mea parochiali coram altari Sanctæ Trinitatis supra corpus Isabellæ* uxoris meæ.—Item lego unam peciam coopertam, vocatam le collok, ecclesiæ meæ parochiali, ad inde faciendum unam coupam sive pixidem pro corpore Christi supra summum altare ponendam et honesto modo deaurandam.—Item lego Petronillæ† sorori meæ optimam togam meam penulatam post mortuarium meum, et decem marcas argenti, et unam peciam coopertam debiliorem cum armis meis in summitate ejusdem. Item lego unam peciam coopertam, dudum legatam per uxorem meam, in cujus summitate scribitur hoc nomen IHC domui Cartusianæ de Hull; et volo quod dicta pecia honestissimo modo mundetur et circa cooperculum ejusdem scribantur hæc verba deaurata, Orate pro animabus Magistri Thomæ Dautre et Isabellæ consortis suæ. Item lego Hugoni Gill unam togam penulatam pro equitatura ordinatam, et collobum meum. Item lego Agneti sorori meæ unam togam meam mustardevilers penulatam, et xiij s. iiij d. Item lego Elizabethæ nepti meæ unam togam de nigro penulatam. Item lego domino Johanni Midelton unum librum meum vocatum Chebham. Item lego Johannæ sorori meæ unam togam viridem penulatam, ac unum bonum coverlectum, et xx s. Item lego domino Willelmo Betson capellano unum librum de Viciis et Virtutibus, et zonam meam stipatam, cum parvo ensiculo meo. Item lego eidem domino Willelmo xx s. ad disponendum pro salute animæ meæ, prout alias intencionem meam eidem plenius declaravi; ac unam pixidem de cupro. Item lego altari Sanctæ Trinitatis in ecclesia mea predicta unum vestimentum, quod de novo emi, una cum alba, amita, stolis, ac pannis quos alias de antiquo ordinavi pro dicto altari, pro animabus mei et uxoris meæ ibidem pro perpetuo remansuris. Item lego Johanni Dautree filio meo dilecto, melius lectum meum, unam tapetem cum coopertorio in qua scripta est una aquila. Item lego eidem Johanni librum meum Bonaventuræ, et librum meum de Gestis Trojanorum, meliorem librum de Gestis Alexandri, quaternam meam de Cronicis, librum parvum vocatum Scropp, librum de Arte Kalendarii et Psalterium meum; cistam meam meliorem cum ferro ligatam et lectum meum cum sole, unam furruram, quæ fuit uxoris meæ, et quam ipsa rogabat me uti pro amore suo. Item lego Margaretæ filiæ meæ unum uche de auro, et lectum meum de cerico, ac Primarium meum, et optimam murram meam coopertam. Item lego generoso Alexandro filio meo unum coller deauratum de corrodio Domini Regis. Item lego tria maseria dividenda inter Willelmum, Eustachium et Isabellam, filios meos, ita quod Isabella habeat meliorem maser. Item Johanni Saxton clerico meo tria registra, videlicet C. D. F. et unum librum de Bello Trojanorum et unam parvam peciam planam. Item lego Willelmo Bernyngham, nuper clerico meo, unum registrum D. et alium librum vocatum Francisci Petrarcæ laureati, et unum par precularium de lambre, ac eidem remitto debitum quod michi debet.—Item volo quod liber meus vocatus Pupilla Oculi cum cathena ferrea fortiter affigatur in stallo quo sedere solebam pro expedicione omnium capellanorum.—Item volo et exhortor in visceribus Jhesu Christi et benediccione mea quod Johannes filius meus dilectus illa tenementa, quæ habui ex dono et feoffamento Johannis Dodyngton, vendat, et quod illa pecunia disponatur discrete pro anima mea, et anima Isabellæ uxoris meæ, et aliorum quibus maxime teneor.—Johannes filius meus, dominus Robertus Semer camerarius, et magister Johannes Saxton clericus meus, executores. * A tradesman of York, whose will contains some interesting bequests and words.

† Margaret, widow of John Beckwith of Tolleston, in the parish of Newton Kyme. The widely branching family of Beckwith has had more than one kindred spirit to compile its annals, and few houses have had their genealogy more carefully elaborated than that of Beckwith. John Beckwith of Tolleston, the husband of the testatrix, by his will, dated October 6, 1434, left his wife Margaret his executrix, and Guy Fairfax (the lawyer) the supervisor of his will.

Katerinæ Rocliff unum par precularium de gete. Ecclesiæ de Newton Kyeme unum Missall et unam calicem, unum vestimentum cum pertinentiis. Residuum Guydoni Farefaxe et Johanni Russell capellano, quos constituo executores meos. [Pr. 9 June, 1438.]

* The connection of the house of Conyers of Ormesby with the two powerful families of that name at Sockburn and Hornby has never been correctly ascertained. This will, however, furnishes much interesting information to the genealogist.

The testator, who administered to his father Sir Robert Conyers's effects 18 July, 1432, was the grandson of another Sir Robert Conyers of Ormesby, in right of his wife Juliana, the daughter and heiress of William Percy of Ormesby, Esq. He married, according to some memoranda in the handwriting of an early member of the Bowes family, Isabella, daughter of Sir Ralph Eure. His children were—Robert, who is mentioned with his wife in the present will. He died soon after his father, and John Fentres of Gisburn has a grant of the administration of his goods 18 June, 1439. Anne, daughter and heiress of Robert Conyers of Ormesby became the wife of James Strangeways. The names of two other of Sir John's children have occurred to me, Christopher and Henry. On the 10th of June, 1452, the administration of their effects is granted by the Archbishop of York to Sir William Eure, Knight, Robert Eure, Esq. Sir John Asfordby, master of the hospital in Bootham, and Hugh Forster of Witton in Weardale.

† Christopher Conyers of Hornby, the father of some twenty-five children who spread the name of Conyers through the counties of York and Durham, was, I am

Horneby et Johannem Moubray de Eseby. Hiis testibus, Cuthberto vicario de Ormesby, etc. [Pr. 14 July, 1438.]

XLIX. TESTAMENTUM ALIANORÆ ROOS DE EBOR.

July 17, 1438. Ego Alienora* Roos—sep. in ecclesia conventuali Beatæ Mariæ Virginis in Monte Graciæ. Item lego Priorissæ et Conventui ejusdem unam peciam argenti coopertam. Item lego Roberto Roos † chivalero unum Psalterium, et unum annulum auri, sub condicione quod ipse solvat, vel solvi faciat, executoribus meis illas sex marcas xj s. et ix d. quos michi debet; et lego de summa predicta septem domibus Ordinis Cartusiani in Anglia septem nobilia equis porcionibus. Item uxori predicti Roberti Roos, unum librum Anglicum vocatum librum primum Magistri Walteri. Item lego dompnæ Elizabethæ Wodcok unum annulum aureum sanctificatum. Item lego Isabellæ Roos unum Primarium de Sancto Spiritu. Item lego dompnæ Agneti Roos unum par precularium de laumbre. Item Aliciæ Laton unum par precularium de laumbre cum uno crucifixo argenti. Item lego Roberto Roos ‡ unum librum de Passione Domini. Item uxori ejusdem Roberti unum librum de Credo in Deum. Item Isabellæ Man, famulæ meæ, lectum meum in quo jaceo cum omnibus pertinenciis, quinque cocliaria argenti, unum annulum auri persuaded, the first cousin to the testator. His father Sir John, the founder of the lordly house of Hornby, was, I believe, a son of the elder Sir Robert Conyers of Ormesby, the grandfather of the testator. The relationship between the houses at Sockburne and Hornby is still an open question.

* A daughter of Sir Robert Roos of Ingmanthorp, who died in 1393. She is mentioned in his will, and in that of her brother Thomas. The house of Roos of Ingmanthorp is generally supposed to have been an offshoot from the great baronial line of Hamlake and Belvoir ; and, although this offshoot grew into a powerful and distinguished family, we are but little acquainted with its history. The present will, however, with the notes appended to it, will to a certain extent supply this want.

† Sir Robert Roos of Ingmanthorp, knight, the nephew of the testatrix, died in 1451, and Robert, his son and heir, administers to his effects on the 30th of October in that year. On the 8th of December, 1448, his daughter Alienor received licence from the Archbishop of York to marry Humphrey son of John Lord Dudley. They were related to each other in the fourth degree of consanguinity.

‡ Robert Roos of Ingmanthorp, Esq. son of Sir Robert Roos. and great-nephew to the testatrix. I append a translation in full of his will:—"In the name of God, Amen. Jan. 26, 1474-5. I, Robert Roos of Ingmanthorp, Esq.—to be buried in the parish church of Southdighton, before the altar of the Blessed Mary the Virgin in the choir, on the north side of the church. Also I bequeath one horse or oxe for my mortuary. To my parish church 13*s.* 4*d.* To the high altar of the same church 20*s.* for forgotten tithes. * Daughter of Ralph first Earl of Westmerland, and widow of Peter Lord de Mauley the eighth. After his death she is said to have remarried Sir Francis Goddard, and to have had by him a daughter Anne, who became the wife of Sir Brian Stapleton. Peter Lord Mauley the eighth was the last male representative of his illustrious family. He died in 1414, leaving no issue behind him to inherit the lands and honours of the lordly house of Mauley. His will, which has been printed in the first volume of the Testamenta Eboracensia, is dated at Mulgrave Castle, on the 5th of September, 3 Henry V., and in it he desires to be buried in the church of St. John at Bridlington. The vast possessions of his family passed away to his two aunts, Constance, who married Sir John Bigod of Settrington, and Elizabeth, the wife of Sir John Salvin of North Duffield. A third co-heir, Isabel, is mentioned in the Visitation as the wife of Richard Lindsey, but she must have died childless before the date of the present will. The cruel death of the youthful Arthur will in all probability be a lasting blot upon the scutcheon of the Mauleys. Be the tradition true or false, it is a somewhat singular fact that the descendants of the so-called murderer allied themselves by marriage with the noblest baronial houses in England. It is hardly credible that those princely barons who had striven so vigorously against the tyranny of their master would give their daughters to his minion, who was also the perpetrator of a crime which they regarded with so much abhorrence.

† Wife of Sir John Bigod of Settrington. She survived her husband, and made her will on January 1, 1449–50, in which she directs herself to be buried in the chancel of All Saints at Settrington. Her best animal (averium) for her mortuary to the rector of Birdsall. Another to the rector of Settrington. She leaves twenty pounds of wax to be burnt around her body. To the vicar of Grimston 20*s*. To the fabric of the Blessed Mary "in Charnell de Maltone" one zone worked (stipatam) with silver gilt. Another zone worked (stipatam) with silver and gilt to the fabric of the Blessed Mary at Doncaster. To Matilda Holand her maid 20*s*. For trentals to be celebrated for her soul by the brothers of the several orders 46*s*. 8*d*. To the fabric of Saint John at Bridlington 20*s*. The rest to Ralph Bigod her son.

* A younger son of Sir William Plumpton of Plumpton, knight, who was put to death for his share in his uncle Archbishop Scrope's rebellion. By his will, dated in 1443, he leaves his body to be buried in the church of the house of Saint Robert. To Master George Plumpton, his brother, he leaves a pyx of silver gilt, his little Psalter, a pair of knives called "karving knyves," and a pair of silver forcipes. He then bequeaths his black cloak furred with martins and a coverlet of red satin, and a canopy of white silk, to be sold, and the price to be distributed "pro salute venerabilis dominæ, dominæ Matildis de Malolacu." To Ellen Crosse his gold ring with a sapphire, a Primer covered with red satin, and ten beads, five of gold in the form of baskets, and five of agate. To Robert Crosse a silvered girdle. To Dame Elizabeth Plumpton his niece a gold crucifix. To Elizabeth Hothom a gold ring with an emerald. To Dame Isabel de Bukton a capital gold ring with two images. To Catherine his sister a gold cross. To Dame Elizabeth Hathom, recluse, 12*d*.—Plumpton Correspondence, xxiii. xxxiv.

† The Hothams were descended from a second son of an early Lord de Mauley, who took his name from the place at which he had taken up his residence. The gentleman, therefore, who is here mentioned, was probably a distant cousin of the family.

LI. TESTAMENTUM BEATRICIS LASCY DE HEDON IN HOLDERNES.

Jan. 24, 1438-9. Beatrix nuper uxor Willelmi Lascy † de Hedon in Holdernes—sep. in capella Sancti Augustini de Hedon. Johanni Benyngton de Hedon, Willelmo Molsecroft et Willelmo Henrison de eadem, mesuagium in villa de Hedon in via Sancti Augustini pro uno annuali obitu in capella Sancti Augustini predicti, pro anima mea et animabus Willelmi Lascy, nuper viri mei, Roberti Wyntryngham, nuper patris mei, et Katerinæ, nuper matris meæ.—Katerinæ, filiæ Adæ Wyntryngham de Hedon,

* A younger son of Sir William Plumpton, and brother of Richard Plumpton, Lady de Mauley's esquire. He was a bachelor-at-law, and was ordained sub-deacon by the Bishop of Ely in 1417. In 1438-9 he became rector of Grasmere in Cumberland, and in 1447 he was presented by Sir Thomas Chaworth to the rectory of Bingham in Nottinghamshire, which he held for two or three years, and then resigned it on account of his age and increasing infirmities. The remainder of his life was passed in the fair and secluded monastery of Bolton, and in 1459 he obtained permission from the Archbishop of York to have service celebrated for the use of himself and his servants within the walls of that monastery.

† A family of some importance in the early history of the little corporate town of Hedon, in Holderness. William Lacy, the husband of the testatrix, was for many years one of the bailiffs of that place, and his will is dated there, on the 20th of April, 1438. He directs himself to be buried in the chapel of St. Augustine in Hedon. He mentions his cousins, John Sturmy, William son of William Yveson and Isabel Esthorp. To Richard Lascy, clerk, his brother (probably vicar of Kayingham, in Holderness, who died in 1464-5) he leaves his best zone, harnest with silver, and a covered cup of silver. To John, his brother, he leaves a gown "de ray," striped "penulatam," with a new hood "de ray." To John Elwyn, a goblet of silver, covered. To Beatrix, his wife, he leaves all his tenements in Hedon. [Prob. 16 July, 1438].

unum par precularium argenti cum omnibus jocalibus per eas pendentibus.—Margaretæ, nuper famulæ Roberti Preston, unam zonam harnizatam cum argento nuper Johannis Preston, et unum par precularium de curall cum omnibus jocalibus per eas pendentibus. LII. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS ELLERKERR DE PAROCHIA DE ROULEY.

Die Lunæ post Festum Sanctæ Trinitatis, 1438. Ego Johannes Ellerker, senior.* — Item lego in expensis circa me faciendis xl marcas. Item lego ad distribuendum pauperibus xx marcas. Item lego xl li. presbiteris ad celebrandum pro anima mea et pro animabus Thomæ nuper Ducis Clarenciæ, Johannis Hothome militis senioris, Johannis Hothome militis junioris, patris et matris meæ, Elenæ Mar . . . sororis meæ, Johannis Rosselyn et Johannis Waghen.—Item lego, post obitum Isabellæ uxoris meæ, capellæ de Ellerkerr unum vestimentum de albo serico et unam calicem argenti et deauratam.—Item lego xl marcas ad faciendum restitucionem illis qui sufficienter poterunt probare aliquam injuriam sive extorcionem per me sibi esse factam et illatam. Item volo quod xx li. sint positæ in Prioratu de Chartrehouse, juxta Kyngeston super Hull, et ibidem essendæ per quinque annos proximos post obitum meum, ad intencionem quod si aliquis filiorum meorum sit vexatus et implicitatus per aliquos, durantibus dictis quinque annis, de aliqua parcella terrarum et tenementorum meorum per me prius perquisitorum, quod tunc detur illi et illis, sic necessitatem habentibus, parcella dictarum xx li. secundum discrecionem Prioris Prioratus predicti et executorum meorum.—Residuum—Isabellæ uxori meæ, Johanni et Willelmo filiis meis, quos facio executores meos.—Testes, Johannes Portyngton† serviens ad legem, Thomas Santon, Edwardus Portyngton, Johannes Gowere, etc. [Prob. 24 March, 1438–39.]

LIII. TESTAMENTUM WILLELMI BOWES, CIVIS ET MERCATORIS EBOR.

In Festo Pentecostis, 1437. Ego Willelmus Bowes,‡ senior, civis et mercator Eboracensis—sep. in ecclesia mea parochiali

* This will adds another generation to the received pedigree of the family of Ellerker of Ellerker. The testator would seem to have been a lawyer, and the gentlemen who witness his will appear to have been of the same profession. He mentions some distinguished clients and patrons.

† Afterwards Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas. He is not infrequently mentioned as a supervisor, or friend, in the wills of the Yorkshire gentry.

‡ A wealthy citizen of York. He was Sheriff for the city in 1402, Lord Mayor in 1417 and 1428, and M.P. for the city in 3rd Henry V., and in the 1st, 4th, and Sancti Cuthberti in Peseholme.—Lego xij tortis vulgariter vocatos torches circa corpus meum comburendos.—Willelmo Bowes,* filio meo, omnia mea utensilia mea in capitali mesuagio meo in Peseholme, exceptis quæ do Willelmo filio dicti Willelmi.—Willelmo filio Willelmi filii mei unum gladium trenchand et unum baslardum argento ornatum ac unam cincturam rubeam argento stipatam. Item lego prefato Willelmo Bowes duas integras armaturas de optimis, videlicet duos basynettez, vmbras et rerebrace, gloves de plaite et pannce de plaite, cum le leggeharnes eisdem pertinente, unam loricam de optimis, et optimum batelax, ac unum gladium de Burdeux argento ornatum.—Agneti Hexham cognatæ meæ xx s. LIV. TESTAMENTUM THOMÆ LYNDLEY DE LYNDLEY ARMIGERI.

July 11, 1439. Ego Thomas Lyndley de Lyndley juxta Otteley gentilman†—sep. in cimiterio ecclesiæ parochialis de Otteley.—Percivallo‡ filio meo et heredi diversa jocalia mea subscripta, videlicet, duas pecias argenti standyng de una secta cum 9th years of Henry VI. He was buried, as he desired, in the church of St. Cuthbert's Peaseholme Green, and his epitaph may be found in Drake's Eboracum. His wife Isabel was buried in the same place, dying before her husband, 25 July, 1436. It would be difficult to connect him with the Durham family of Bowes, although it is by no means improbable that he had some connection with that ancient house. He had an illustrious descendant in Sir Martin Bowes, who was Lord Mayor of London, and jeweller to Queen Elizabeth. Sir Martin was born in York, and gave a most munificent sum to charitable purposes in his native city.

* William Bowes, junior, was Sheriff for the city in 1432, Mayor in 1443, and M.P. 13 Henry VI.

† The head of an ancient and very respectable Yorkshire family, of the history of which there is but little known. He appears to have held some patent office at Hexham, under the Archbishop of York. A branch of his family was at this time settled at Scutterskelf in Cleveland, in right of an heiress of the family of Gower, who had married into the family. Some notices of them will be given hereafter.

‡ Percival Lindley of Lindley, Esq., by his will, dated August 13, 1495, desires to be buried in the churchyard of Otley, at the east end of the choir. To Thomas Lindley, his son and heir, he leaves all the plate which his father had bequeathed to uno coopertorio ad easdem, duas etiam pecias argenti planas et flatt neutra cooperta, duas murras argentatas et deauratas, duo salsaria argenti unius sectæ standyng cum uno coopertorio ad eadem, unum powderboxx argenti et xij cocliaria argenti mea optima, necnon totam armaturam meam, quæ jam exstat infra novam turrim de Hexham, cum uno boresperr ibidem existente. Item lego tribus filiabus meis, videlicet Johannæ, Aliciæ et Margaretæ, cuilibet earum ad maritagium suum xl li. Roberto Lyndley fratri meo decem marcas.—Item volo quod Johannes Brig capellanus celebret pro salute animæ meæ, antecessorum et amicorum meorum, in capella de Harowgate per tres annos, percipiendo pro salario suo xij li. argenti—et quod Willelmus Wilson, capellanus cantariæ Beatæ Mariæ Virginis in ecclesia parochiali de Otteley, habeat in subvencionem stipendii sui sex marcas.—Residuum Katerinæ uxori meæ [Prob. 14 Aug. 1439.]

LV. TESTAMENTUM RICARDI TORALD DE EBOR. ARMIGERI.

Aug. 6, 1439. Ego Ricardus Torald * Armiger—sep. in ecclesia mea parochiali Beatæ Mariæ Veteris super Bisshophill—Agneti Mirfeld, sorori meæ, xx. marcas, sub hac tamen condicione, quod predicta Agnes expectaverit cum Elizabetha uxore mea, quamdiu ipsa Elizabetha prefatam Agnetem desideraverit. Volo quod Johannes Myrfeld et Johannes Hoberd, qui sunt feoffati in omnibus terris et tenementis meis in comitatibus Lincolne, Notinghame, seu alibi, faciant feoffamentum Elizabethæ uxori meæ et Willelmo Torald filio meo. Et volo quod quidam pannus vocatus cloth of gold, existens in ecclesia de Merston, ibidem permaneat inperpetuum.—Residuum Elizabethæ uxori meæ, quam cum Johanne Mirfeld fratre suo constituo executores meos. Datum Ebor.—Proviso semper quod, si Deus disposuerit me et Willelmum filium meum et heredem obire de ista nunc infirmitate, tunc volo quod prefati Johannes Mirfeld et Johannes Hobard faciant feoffamentum Marionæ sorori meæ de manerio meo de Ryngesthorp. [Pr. 15 Aug. 1439.]

him. To his three daughters he leaves 20*s.* each. To his sons, John, Richard, and Percival, 26*s.* 8*d.* each. The residue he leaves to Isabel his wife, William Lindley his son, and William Lindley of Leithley. [Prob. 28 May, 1499.]

* A Lincolnshire gentleman, of large possessions and distinguished family. His will appears to have been made during the prevalence of one of those epidemics which were then so numerous and fatal. He was then residing in York. His wife was a daughter of the Yorkshire house of Mirfield, an ancient and respectable family, which will be noticed in the present volume.

LVI. TESTAMENTUM DOMINÆ ELIZABETHÆ LAMBTON.

August 27, 1439. Ego Elizabeth Lambton *—sep. in ecclesia Sanctæ Elenæ super Muros juxta fontem.—Roberto, filio meo, principalem meam peciam coopertam stantem cum pedibus longioribus. Thomæ filio meo alteram peciam meam argenti coopertam stantem cum pedibus, cum condicione ista quod si idem Thomas vendicet seu clamet unum goblett argenti cum coopertorio, tunc habeat Willelmus filius meus illam peciam stantem, quam prefato Thomæ legavi. Item lego Johanni filio meo, militi, unam peciam argenti largam et unam aliam peciam deauratam. Item lego predicto Willelmo filio meo duas pecias singulares argenti et gobblett predictum, unam murram et decem marcas argenti. Item lego Elizabethæ filiæ meæ duas pecias argenti singulares. Item lego Aliciæ filiæ meæ xx. marcas in pecunia cum zonis, preculis, clitellis, flammeolis, indumentis, superlectilibus, Primario et ceteris utensilibus sibi congruentibus, et duas ollas argenti pro vino, duo salsaria argenti, duas pixides pro speciebus, xij. cocliaria argenti et quatuor pecias argenti singulares cum duobus coopertoriis et meam sellam. Item lego Elizabethæ Wales juniori unam peciam singularem argenti, et decem marcas ad maritagium suum. Item lego uni capellano ydoneo et honesto pro anima mea et anima Willelmi Lambton, nuper mariti mei, celebraturo per unum annum integrum v li. Item lego predicto Thomæ filio meo sex cocliaria argenti de illis xij. cocliaribus principalibus in custodia sua existentibus. Et lego predicto Willelmo filio meo alia sex cocliaria de eisdem xij. cocliaribus. Item remitto predicto Thomæ filio meo xx. marcas de illa majori summa quam michi debet. Et Roberto Lambton fratri suo x li. Et predicto Johanni Lambton militi xl s. Et Elizabethæ Wales seniori xl s. Residuum Aliciæ filiæ meæ ad maritagium suum. —Willelmus Lambton filius meus et Alicia Lambton filia mea executores, Robertus Lambton et Thomas Lambton filii mei supervisores. [Pr. 13 Oct. 1439.]

* The widow of William Lambton of Lambton, in the Bishoprick of Durham, Esq., the head of the ancient and honourable house of Lambton. She survived her husband above six years, and she appears to have made York her chief place of residence during her widowhood. Thomas Lambton her son has been previously mentioned in the will of John Lord Latimer, whose esquire he was. I can add nothing to the admirable pedigree which Mr. Surtees has given of the family, and can only refer my readers to the third volume of his History of Durham, p. 174, where they will find a most interesting description of Lambton and its lords.

LVII. TESTAMENTUM ALVEREDI MANSTON ARMIGERI PAROCHIÆ DE WHITKIRK.

June 6, 1439. Ego Alveredus Manston,* Armiger—sep. in cancello Beatæ Mariæ de Whitkirke. Item do et lego meum optimum animal nomine mortuarii mei cum apparatu meo, prout decet. Item volo quod unus capellanus celebret in capella de Manston, si contingat Elizabetham uxorem meam in vita existere et ibidem moram trahere, alioquin in ecclesia de Whitkirk. Item do et lego iiij li. ad inveniendum dictum capellanum ad divina pro anima mea et animabus Roberti patris mei et Aliciæ matris meæ et anima Johannis Tethford, nuper vicarii ecclesiæ predictæ, et animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum, per unum annum integrum celebraturum. Item volo quod centum missæ celebrentur pro anima mea, Roberti patris et Aliciæ matris meæ, et Willelmi Gascoigne, et animabus omnium fidelium defunctorum, sub forma quæ sequitur, videlicet xxv. de Benedicta Trinitate, et xxv. de Spiritu Sancto, xxv. de gloriosa Virgine Maria, matre Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, et xxv. de Requiem, cum tot Placebo et Dirige, et hoc cum festinacione qua post mortem meam racionabiliter fieri poterit, solvendo pro qualibet Missa et Placebo iiij d. Item do et lego Elizabethæ uxori Ricardi Tempest, filiæ meæ, unum ciphum argenti et deauratum vocatum le Tun. Item lego Elizabethæ Northfolk xiij s. iiij d. Item do et lego Johanni filio meo unum ciphum argenti et deauratum, et ei perdono iiij li. quas michi debet. Item do et lego cuilibet filiorum meorum, videlicet, Roberto, Thomæ, et Alexandro, unum ciphum argenti, et hoc per discrecionem Elizabethæ uxoris meæ, et cuilibet eorum xl s. Item lego summo altari ecclesiæ predictæ, pro decimis oblitis, si quæ fuerint, vj s. viij d. Et fabricæ ecclesiæ de Whitkirk xl s. Et hoc per discrecionem Elizabethæ uxoris meæ expendendum. Item volo et ordino quod quolibet die Passenæ (Parasceues ?) in honore Domini nostri Jhesu Christi et quinque vulnerum ejus, ordinentur quinque libræ ceræ in candelis ad ardendum ante sepulcrum in ecclesia predicta, et xv d. ad solvendum eodem die pauperibus, et hoc pro termino quinque annorum proxime post mortem meam sequencium. Item lego Alveredo Northfolk xiij s. iiij d. Item lego Elizabethæ Denny vj s. viij d.

* Of the family of Manston there is but little known. The present will, however, throws some light upon its history. The testator was a near relative, probably a nephew, of Chief Justice Gascoigne; and in the last will of that dignitary he has 40*l.* and a silver cup gilt bequeathed to him. He is also mentioned in the will of Richard Gascoigne of Hunslet, a younger brother of Sir William. According to Glover, there was in Harewood church a monument to the memory of Alfred Manston and Elizabeth his wife.

Et Roberto Northfolk xiij s. iiij d. Henrico Thomlynson xiij s. iiij d. cum una toga. Item do et lego cuilibet sacerdoti venienti ad exequias meas vj d. Et cuilibet clerico ibidem ministranti ij d. Item volo in die sepulturæ meæ quod distribuantur pauperibus iiij li. Residuum Elizabethæ uxori meæ, utensilibus coquinæ, et bruerii, necnon ornamentis capellæ omnino exceptis. Item do et lego Elizabethæ uxori meæ medietatem omnium predictorum utensilium et ornamentorum ad usum proprium, et, si ceperit virum, quod tunc proximus heres meus immediate habeat medietatem et omnia ornamenta capellæ et libros, præter magnum Missale.—Henricus Thomlynson et Johannes Alesby executores—Willelmus Gascoigne miles supervisor—His testibus, Johanne Gascoyne, Johanne Nevill, Johanne Grenefeld. [Pr. 26 Jan. 1439-40.]

* Widow of Thomas Catterick of York, mercer, who makes his will June 20, 1433. He orders his body to be buried in his parish church of St. Sampson's. He mentions Alice his wife, John, William, and Robert, his sons, John son of his son William, and Thomas Catterick his brother's son. To Joan his daughter he leaves a silver piece, called "standard pece."

Robert Catterick his son, by his will, dated at York December 3, 1438, directs his body to be buried at St. Sampson's. He leaves legacies to Alice his mother, John Catterick his cousin, Sissota Eland his cousin, and Margaret Burgh. The Cattericks, who were second-class merchants in York, were perhaps the ancestors of the family of that name which, in the next century, was seated at Stanwick and Carleton, in Richmondshire.

Johannis Baptistæ in cooperculo ejusdem et x li. argenti. Agneti Eland togam meam nigram penulatam cum myse. Aliciæ Maldson unam togam de russeto penulatam cum rigeȝ et coombes. Matildi Barton cognatæ meæ vj s. viij d. Residuum Willelmo filio meo. [Pr. 20 May, 1440.]

* The family of Sherburne of Stonyhurst, which is now extinct, was for many generations one of the most distinguished in Lancashire. The testator, who was the head of that ancient house, was born at Stonyhurst, on the feast of St. Wilfrid, 5 Richard II. and was baptized at Mitton. His wife was Agnes daughter of Sir William Stanley of Hooton, co. Pal. Chester, Esq. and by her, whose will occurs hereafter, he left several children, some of whom are new to the genealogist. He was buried before the altar of St. Nicholas at Mitton on Ascension Day, 1440. His will is a valuable addition to our old English documents. The Chapel of St. Nicholas, of which the testator appears to have been the founder, became the family burying place. It contains a most interesting series of monuments, several of which were erected at the same time by Sir Nicholas Sherburne, who, as his epitaph tells us, "set his neighbourhood a spinning of Jersey wool, and did a vast deal of good to that north side of Ribble." He died in 1717.

LX. TESTAMENTUM DOMINÆ ALEISÆ MYTON PAROCHIÆ DE AGHTON.

April 16, 1440. Ego domina Aleisa Myton*—sep. ubi Deus disposuerit. Abbathiæ de Ellerton unam cuppam argenti coopertam et deauratam pro sacramento altaris conservando. Domino Roberto Pall septem marcas annuatim ad celebrandum pro anima mea, quousque Ricardus Aske† fecerit eum habere competens beneficium vel cantariam. Item lego ad fabricam ecclesiæ Omnium Sanctorum de Aghton quinque marcas argenti. Margaretæ Aske unum craterem argenti coopertum et deauratum, unum circulatum. Ricardo Aske unam cistam cum contentis, etc. Johanni Malton, vicario de Aghton, vj s. viij d. Johannæ Hawnserd,‡ sorori meæ, unam mantilet cum quatuor barbys et duobus forhedes. Katerinæ Thornyff unum mantilett. Domino Roberto Pall, Portiforium meum. Aleisæ Thwaits unum Primarium cum signaculis deauratis. Matildi Ughtred § x marcas de debitis meis, quæ sunt in manibus patris ejus. Matildi Landall unum par precaminum et xl s., quæ sunt in manibus viri sui. Executores meos

* This lady, who seems to have been a widow of the ancient house of Myton of Myton, was, I believe, a daughter of John Aske of Ousethorpe, Esq. the Seneschal of the Bishop of Durham for Howdenshire, who died in 1397. Of the family of Myton there is but little known, and the testatrix makes no additions to our scanty stock of information. Her will is made at Aughton, the then residence of the family of Aske.

† Richard Aske of Aughton, Esq. was little more than 20 years of age at the date of the present will. He died in 1460, leaving a large family behind him. His wife, who is mentioned in the present will, was Margaret, a daughter of Sir Robert Ughtred of Kexby. Her will is dated in the year 1466. It will occur in its proper place, and many other notices of the family of Aske will be found appended to it.

‡ Joan, a daughter of John Aske of Ousethorpe, married, as the old pedigrees of the family allege, Sir Richard Haunsard of Lincolnshire, by whom she had issue.

§ There was a double connection between the families of Aske and Ughtred.

constituo Ricardum Aske, Johannem Salvayn, armigeros, Robertum Pall et Thomam Wilkynson. Datum apud Aghton. [Pr. 22 July, 1440.]

LXI. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNÆ FITLYNG.

Johanna Fitlyng—2 Aug. M.cccc.xl.—sep. in choro australi coram altare S. * An unrecorded member of the family of Salvin of Newbiggin, in the vicinity of Whitby. Sir John Salvin, the then head of the house of Newbiggin, was his cousin. The testator held the office of "armiger" in the wealthy monastery of Whitby. For an account of the duties of this officer I must refer my readers to Dr. Rock's "Church of our Fathers," a work worthy of the highest praise.

† Joan, the wife of Sir John Salvin, was a daughter of Sir Thomas Grey of Heton, by Alice daughter of Ralph Lord Neville of Raby.

‡ Sir John Salvin, the head of a distinguished Yorkshire family of Salvin which was seated at Newbiggin, near Whitby. His will is dated on the 26th of April, 1469, and was proved at York on the 11th of January following. He desires to be buried in the choir of the monastery of St. Peter and St. Hilda, at Whitby, before the high altar, in a place to be marked out by the Abbot. He gives his best horse, with his saddle, bridle, and arms, for a mortuary. To Thomas, his son (and heir), he bequeaths a basin and ewer of silver, and his best covered cup. To Joan his wife a goblet gilt, with a cover. To Margaret his daughter 200 marks for her marriage, if she stand or abide by the advice of his executors in getting her a husband. To William his son, and his heirs, all his lands and tenements within the lordship of Egton and the town of Whitby. He appoints as his executors Sir Thomas Pykeryng, Abbot of Whitby, and Sir John Smallwood, Rector of Baynton. Henry Thwats, gentleman, is made the supervisor of his will, and is to have 100*s.* for his pains. William Salvyn of Newbygyng, Esq. occurs among the witnesses.

* An officer in the ecclesiastical court of York, and a person of some influence and importance. His library appears to have been a most valuable one.

† A Yorkshireman by birth, who followed in the train of Dean Langley when he was promoted to the see of Durham. His advance in the diocese of Durham was rapid, and at his death in 1435 he was Rector of Meldon, Dean of the Collegiate Church of Auckland, Chancellor of the Diocese, and Examining Chaplain to his patron Cardinal Langley. His will is printed in the Durham Wills and Inventories, p. 82, to which several notices of him are appended. He was connected with some of the best of the Yorkshire families. and he seems to have been a man of some learning and taste. Robert Alne, the testator, was a devisee in his will and also one of his executors.

and curiosities in his way, and, as he generally wrote his own will, we have the most accurate description of them. The testator would seem to have sprung from Lancashire or Cheshire. A Humphrey Baguley, two centuries afterwards, was Domestic Chaplain to the great Earl of Derby.

* The sauce-makers were rather a numerous fraternity in York about this time.

† The head of the illustrious house of Constable, of Flambrough. He married Agnes, a daughter of Lord Chief Justice Gascoigne, by whom he had a large family. The wills of his father and grandfather have been printed in the first volume of the York Wills.

* Her will is dated at Beverley on the 7th of January, 1466-7, and it was proved at York on the 5th of February following. In it she directs her body to be buried in the choir of St. Edmund the King and Martyr, in Flamborough Church. She makes her son William Constable and Joan Welles her daughter her residuary legatees.

† William Constable, a younger son of Sir Robert, became Sub-Dean of York, Prebendary of Norton in the church of Lincoln, and Archdeacon of Cleveland. He died in the month of September, 1485.

‡ Sir Thomas Cumberworth was High Sheriff of Lincolnshire in the 3rd of Henry V. and the 9th of Henry VI. He was also M.P. for the county in 1420, 1421, and 1424. In the Topographer and Genealogist there are a few extracts from his will, which is dated February 15th, 1450-1. He desires to be buried "in a chitte with owte any kiste in the north yle of the parych kirke of Someresby be my wyfe." He then makes the following most remarkable direction: "I wylll my body ly still, my mowth opyn, untill xxiiij. owrys, and after laid on bere with owtyn any thyng ther upon to cover it bot a sheit and a blak cloth, with a white crose of cloth of gold; bot I wyl my kyste be made and stande by and at my bereall giff it to hym that fillis my grave." I am sorry that the extracts go no further, as the will might have thrown some light upon the connection between the family of Cumberworth and several Yorkshire houses which at present is rather obscure. Catherine Cumberworth, the sister of Sir Thomas, was the testator's mother. Sir Thomas's will is taken from the registry at Lincoln. Few antiquaries have any idea of the testamentary treasures which are contained in the magnificent registers of the Bishops of Lincoln.

LXIX. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI JOHANNIS BULMER RECTORIS DE BULMER.

Nov. 19, 1441. Ego dominus Johannes Bulmer,† rector ecclesiæ parochialis de Bulmer—sep. in choro ecclesiæ Sancti Martini

* A name of which there is but little known. The will of an earlier member of the family is printed in Test. Ebor. I. p. 53. The widow of the testator, by licence from the Archbishop of York, dated 2nd June, 1445, remarried Henry Banaster. There was a family of Pickering of some rank and consideration seated at Ellerton at this time. Several notices of the name will occur hereafter.

† A scion of the great house of Bulmer of Wilton, and probably a son of Sir William Bulmer, by a daughter of the house of Eure. He held one of the livings which were in the gift of his wealthy family. The house of Bulmer was perhaps unrivalled for power and magnificence among the Yorkshire families; yet this greatness was counterbalanced by no small share of calamity. the insurgents, and was attainted, with the loss of all his lands. Sir Ralph his son regained his father's position, but he left no male heirs to enjoy it. He seems to have been a man of a peculiar disposition, as we find that, although he left behind him no less than seven reputed daughters and coheirs, three alone of these were acknowledged by him as his children. The younger branch of the family, which settled at Tursdale, in the County of Durham, was equally unfortunate. They were implicated in the Rising in the North, and in the succeeding generation the family estates were squandered away by the reckless extravagance of Sir Bertram Bulmer and his family.

* Sir Ralph Bulmer, Knight, whom I suppose to be a brother of the testator, died in 1444, and administration of his effects was granted to William Lambert, chaplain, 1st May, 1444.

† One of the last of an ancient and powerful family, who were for several centuries the mesne Lords of Barmston in Holderness. She was the daughter of . . . Manfield. John Monceux, of Barmston, Esq. her husband, by his will, dated on the 11th of August, 1426, which was proved at York on the 16th of the same month, desires to be buried in the church of All Saints, Bernston, in the aisle of the Blessed Mary, before her altar. The issue of this marriage were—a son, William Monceux, Esq. who married Margaret, daughter of Walter Fauconberge, Esq. by whom, at the date of the present will, he had a daughter Joan; she, however, must have died in childhood. His will is dated at Barneston on the 23rd of August, and it was proved at York on the 1st of September following; he directs his body to be buried in the church of Barneston within the choir—a daughter, Matilda, who on the death of her brother became the sole heiress of her family. She married Brian de la See, of Hollym, Esq. and her granddaughter carried the rich estates of the Monceux into the family of Boynton, in whose possession they still remain.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Cum omnis homo ad Dei voluntatem habet persolvere debitum naturæ, idcirco, penultimo die mensis Maii, 1442, Ego Johannes Carleton,† legum doctor et advocatus

1445. After directing herself to be buried in the churchyard of the Blessed Mary in Castlegate, she leaves to Agnes her daughter a "messyn basyn cum lavacro." To the gild of the dyers one board cloth and a towell, to pray for and put the names of John Pudsay and Emma his wife in the book of the fraternity of the said gild, otherwise not. To Thomas Hirste a little maser adorned with silver and gold. To her vicar "unum codd broudyd with ymyges." [Prob. 6 June, 1445.]

* The testator, who bears a North-country name, was, I imagine, a retainer of the Nevilles at Sheriffhutton Castle: he was probably a member of the Westmerland family of his name. A Crackenthorpe of Newbiggin was at this time in the service of the Nevilles.

† An advocate in the Consistory Court at York. Some extracts from the will of his kinsman, John Carleton, who was a canon in the Cathedral church of York, have been already given. The testator was one of his executors. The preamble to the present document has been elaborately drawn up by the testator himself. A namecuriæ Eboracensis, in meæ mentis sanitate perfecta notorie existens, infirmitate tamen corporali graviter detentus, hujusmodi meæ mortis horam disposicione saltem testamentaria deliberavi preveniendo, de bonis michi a Deo collatis eulogium atque meam ultimam voluntatem condo, ordino et declaro in hunc modum. Imprimis, animam meam commendo in manus misericordissimi Redemptoris Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, Beatissimæque Virginis Mariæ, ac Omnium Sanctorum; et lego corpus meum sepeliendum in navi Ecclesiæ Cathedralis Petri Eboracensis, infra processionem, cum una petra marmorea sculpta ad disposicionem executorum meorum. Item lego duos cerios ponderis decem librarum ceræ comburendos circa corpus meum in exequiis meis. Item lego ecclesiæ meæ de Hoton Bussell unam calicem argenti et unum Missale. Item lego ecclesiæ parochiali Sancti Johannis del Pike duas fiolas argenti et unum paxborde deauratum.—Roberto Smeton unum Psalterium per ipsum diu desideratum. Jacobo filio ejus unum parvum Primarium meum. Isabellæ uxori ejusdem unam togam de muterdevelers de liberatura Magistri Roberti Gilbert, dudum decani Ecclesiæ Eboracensis.—Executores meos facio magistrum Johannem Marchall, canonicum Ecclesiæ Eboracensis, dominum Ricardum Ulneskelf et Thomam Farleton. Et lego magistro Johanni Marchall pro labore suo unam peciam deauratam cum sole et rosa in coopertorio, vel, si voluerit, aliam peciam deauratam cum armis in cooperculo, ita quod de istis duabus peciis unam tantum eligat et quam spreverit ipsam lego domino Ricardo Ulneskelf. Item lego magistro Thomæ Farleton unam peciam deauratam coopertam, Anglice, a chales cope. [Pr. 3 Nov. 1442.]

LXXV. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS RILLESTON NUPER DE RILLESTON IN CRAVEN DEFUNCTI.

October 8, 1442. Ego Johannes de Rilleston,* armiger—sep. in ecclesia Beatæ Mariæ de Rillestom infra chorum ex parte aussake of the testator, John Carleton, of York, Esq. makes his will on the 22nd of January, 1438–9. In it he desires to be buried in the church of St. John in Marisco. To the fabric of the church of Riccal he leaves 10*s*. He mentions James and Thomas his sons, Ellen his daughter, and Margaret his wife.

* The head of a very ancient Craven family, which had been seated at Rilston from Saxon times. The testator by Joan his wife had two sons. John, his son and heir, died before him, and his will, from which extracts have been given in The York Wills, Vol. I., is dated on April 6, 1418. Robert, the testator's second son, is mentioned in his elder brother's will, and also in the present document. He would appear to have died without issue. The estates and representation of the family finally rested in Isabel, daughter and heiress of John de Rilleston (sister to the testator?) who became the wife of Miles Radclyffe, of Threshfield, Esq. She was trali ejusdem ecclesiæ, coram ymagine Beatæ Mariæ Pietatis ibidem. Item do et lego rectori ecclesiæ de Burnesall optimum animal meum pro mortuario meo. Item do et lego Elizabethæ filiæ Willelmi Langdall unum ciphum argenti, nominatum Thoresby, et unum librum vocatum Prymer. Item do et lego Johanni filio ejusdem Willelmi unum ciphum argenti vocatum nutt. Nicholao filio ejusdem Willelmi unam vaccam. Johannæ filiæ ejusdem Willelmi duo catalla biennia. Roberto de Rilleston filio meo unum ciphum argenteum cum coopertorio argenti, qui quondam fuit Hugonis de Mitton, et unam placeam meam edificatam infra civitatem Ebor. in quodam vico vocato Waterlane, quæ quondam fuit Thomæ de Mitton. Willelmo Rilleston fratri meo septem animalia vocata twynternawt. Ranaldo Gibson servienti meo quatuor catalla nominata stirknawte, et unum equum subrufidum. Willelmo heredi meo unum ciphum argenti cum coopertorio ejusdem, et duo verna. [Pr. 30 March, 1443.]

LXXVI. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI WILLELMI DUFFELDE CAPELLANI EBOR.

April 6, 1443. Ego dominus Willelmus Duffeld, capellanus cantariæ Sancti Thomæ Cantuarensis in ecclesia parochiali Omnium Sanctorum super Pavimentum in Ebor.—sep. in choro predictæ ecclesiæ. Lego omnes libros, qui quondam fuerunt domini Thomæ Corbrig,* Archiepiscopi Eboracensis, executoribus meis ad disponendum pro salute animæ meæ et animæ predicti domini Thomæ. Altari ecclesiæ meæ unum longum manutergium de twill. Johannæ Threpland meam zonam nigram argenteam. Uxori Roberti Sallay unum candelabrum pendens de laton cum quatuor gargons. Domino Ricardo Kirkeby, subcantatori vicariorum Ecclesiæ Eboracensis, unam parvam peciam argenti pounesed sine coopertorio. Domino Johanni Crake, vicario ecclesiæ predictæ, unam bursam vocatam gipsiane. Domino Roberto Crokelyne unam albam bursam de Burdeux. Domino perhaps a daughter of the testator, but it is somewhat singular, if it were so, that she is not mentioned either by her father or by her brother. The family of Rilston was for several generations most intimately connected with the great house of Clifford, under the shadow of whose lordly castle they were so long resident. The father of the testator was the "cher compagnon" of Roger Lord Clifford, and in a document appended to the present will his son makes a deed of gift of all his lands to Thomas (son of Roger) Lord Clifford and Wm. de Rilleston, his brother. I need not refer to the beautiful legend which has graced this lonely spot, or to the equally beautiful verse in which that legend has been clothed. The White Doe of Rilston is too well known to require any advertisement here.

* Thomas de Corbridge, Archbishop of York from 1299, died in 1303, and was buried in Southwell Minster.

Thomæ Mosse, capellano, meum optimum rubium capucium. Domino Willelmo Swerd, capellano, unum par cultellorum cum manubrio de evire. Domino Johanni Wotton, capellano, unum par cultellorum cum manubrio de dugion. Domino Henrico Hobshort unum hawkebag de panno lineo. Nicholao Duffeld meam togam penulatam cum croppes. Filiæ seniori dicti Nicholai unum par linthiaminum cum uno cervicali cum cruce nigra existente in medio. Uxori Johannis Bridlyngton unam bursam rubiam de satan. Domino Thomæ Sarle, capellano, meam zonam rubeam argentatam et meam togam penulatam cum bevers. Domino Willelmo Day, capellano parochiali de Catton, unum par hawkbag ryngges. [Pr. 24 April, 1443.]

* Another proctor in the Court of York, and one who had evidently thriven in his lucrative profession. Several notices of the family have previously occurred, and I only add another or two. The will of John Esyngwald, citizen and merchant of York, dated Feb. 19, 1439-40, who desires to be buried in the church of the Augustine Friars, at York, near the bodies of his father and his brothers. To Mr. Robert Esyngwald (the testator above) he leaves 20s. To Dame Alice E. of York, a ring of gold. To John his son his sword and baslard ornamented with silver. To Joan his wife his share of his three best silver standing pieces. [Pr. 26 Feb. seq.] He was Sheriff for the city in 1432. The testator was probably indebted for his position to the good offices of Master Roger Esyngwald, who was Commissary General of the Court at York, and Vicar of Burneston in Richmondshire. He died in 1438, and on the 15th of August in that year John Bolton, alderman of York, and Mr. William Langton, clerk, notary public, administer to his effects.

† William Langton, rector of St. Michael, Ousebridge, made his will Dec. 13, 1464, and in it he desires to be buried in the choir of his parish church, between the high altar and the lavatory. He leaves to his church his Missal, Manual, chalice, and three clerico meo, xl s. et omnes quaternos meos de Practicis Curiæ, videlicet, Libellorum, Posicionum, Articulorum, Excepcionum, et aliorum, et eidem unum parvum lavacrum pendibile, j flatt bowe, et j defensorium argento ornatum. Et magistro Roberto Stillington* legum doctori, filiolo meo, unum librum vocatum Clement, et alium librum vocatum Raymond, ac librum vocatum Innocenc'. Et lego filiolis meis, viz. Mariæ Magd. in Bowthom ibidem, deserviturum in festis B. M. Magd. quamdiu durare valeat. Et Priori et Conventui de Novo Burgo maximam meam ollam eneam. Et Priori ac Conventui Sanctæ Trinitatis Ebor. j magnum ciphum murreum et vestments. To the making (ad fabricam) of the new bells in the said church 100*s*. To Margaret Ecop, my cousin, "craterem bassum," covered and gilt and marked with swans. To Master William her son "librum Bartholomei super SS nono," the sixth book of Decretals, with the Three Doctors. To my brother Sir Thomas Langton my Portiforium. To Alice del Hay, my sister, a bed couched — my brother Richard —. To Simon del Hay my sword, to each of his daughters, towards their marriage, 100*s*. and to each of his sons five marks. To the ministers of the Court at York, for their entertainment, 26*s*. 8*d*. To Sir John Knapton my beads of amber and one faulden spoon. The residue to Sir Thomas Holbren, of York, and my brother Thomas Langton, of Hesilwood. [Pr. 14 Aug. 1466.]

* Master Robert Stillington, Doctor of Laws, the godson of the testator, was a distinguished man. In 1448 he was appointed to the prebend of Givendale in the church of Ripon, to a prebend in the chapel of the Blessed Virgin and the Holy Angels at York, and to the rectory of the church of St. Michael on Ousebridge. In 1450-1 he exchanged his canonry of St. Decumanus in the church of Wells with John Bradston for the stall of Fenton in the church of York. In 1459 he resigned all these benefices, together with the stall of Oxton-cum-Crophill in the church of York, to which he had been presented in the interim, for the prebend of Wetwang. His advance was now rapid: he became successively Archdeacon of Taunton, Keeper of the Privy Seal, Bishop of Bath and Wells, and Lord High Chancellor of England. His political career, though marked by considerable ability, was nevertheless an unfortunate one. He took a leading part in the many intrigues of that eventful period, and he did not escape from the misfortunes which intriguers frequently entail upon themselves. He adopted the cause of Lambert Simnel, for which he was imprisoned at Windsor, and he died in captivity in 1491.

† This word appears to be a clerical and Anglicized version of jentaculum. The clerks of the Court of York must frequently have held high festival in old times, as we not unfrequently meet with a bequest for their "recreation." May not jonkrey be the parent of our word junketing?

‡ John Marshall was registrar of the Court at York, as well as receiver to the Archbishop. In 1438 he was appointed to the prebend of Barnby, in the church of York, which he resigned in 1443 for that of Wighton. He was also prebendary of Normanton, in the church of Southwell, and vicar of Osbaldwicke. He died in 1461.

xl s. sterl. ita quod celebrent obitum meum die sepulturæ cum debita pulsacione campanarum.—Constituo executores meos dominos Georgium Thweng, Thomam Holbryn, et Will. Burn, capellanos. [Prob. penult. die Dec.]

LXXXI. TESTAMENTUM THOMÆ CARR NUPER CIVIS ET DRAPOR EBOR.

April 28, 1444. Thomas Karr,* civis et drapor Ebor.—Item lego c s. ad emendum duas cathenas aurias, unam, videlicet, ad ponendum circa collum yemaginis Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, stantis ad altare ejusdem Virginis Mariæ, post summum altare ecclesiæ Cathedralis Beati Petri Eboracensis ; et alteram ad ponendum circa collum Filii yemaginis predictæ, in brachiis ejusdem existentis. Item lego unum annulum aureum, precii xiii s. iiij d., ad ponendum et cathenandum circa collum yemaginis Beatæ Mariæ predictæ.—Item lego xx marcas ad edificacionem lateris borialis ecclesiæ meæ parochialis Sancti Sampsonis in Ebor. cum gabulo ejusdem ; ita quod parochiani ejusdem ecclesiæ illud edificari faciant infra tres vel quatuor annos proximos post decessum meum in forma qua latus australe ejusdem modo edificatur, secundum declaracionem executorum meorum eisdem parochianis viva voce inde notificandam.

LXXXII. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS RADCLYFF, CIVIS ET MERCATORIS EBOR.

May 15, 1444. Ego Johannes Radclyff,† civis et mercator Eboracensis—sep. in ecclesia mea parochiali Sanctæ Crucis in Fossegate, in choro Beatæ Mariæ Virginis ibidem.—Item lego x li. dandas capellano ad proficiendum peregre' pro me ad Curiam Romanam, et ad celebrandum in Scala Celi unum trentale missarum pro anima mea et parentum meorum, et pro animabus Katerinæ‡ uxoris meæ, Johannis filii mei et Aliciæ uxoris suæ,

* A wealthy tradesman of York, who was one of the sheriffs for the city in 1428. The architectural information that his will contains is valuable.

† A rich and pious merchant of York. The friends and kinsmen for whom he desires the prayers of the faithful are numerous. A pilgrimage to Rome was at this time by no means uncommon. There were several colleges and hospices in Rome for the reception of the English pilgrims, and the registers of the Archbishops of York contain several most valuable briefs in English in their behalf. A list of the pilgrims from England for a short period has been printed in the Collectanea Topographica.

‡ Catherine Radclyff, the widow of the testator, by her will dated 19 July, 1458, desires to be buried in the church of St. Crux in Fossegate, in the choir of the Blessed Virgin Mary, in the tomb of her husband. She mentions her daughter Agnes Holgate, deceased. She leaves to the high altar of the church "unum osculatorium vocatum paxbrede" of silver and gilt. To the fabric of the chapel of Gosner, where she was born, she leaves 20*s*.

Nicholai filii mei et Agnetis uxoris suæ, Hugonis fratris mei et Agnetis uxoris suæ, et Thomæ filii mei ; ac pro animabus Roberti Skirmer, Thomæ Skirmer et Henrici Skirmir, ac Ricardi Radclyf, Johannis Radclyf et Roberti Radclif, filiorum meorum, ac Katerinæ Radclyf, Elenæ Radclyf, Dionisiæ Radclyffe, Johannæ Radclyff et Ceciliæ Radclyff, filiarum mearum, necnon pro animabus Ricardi Thoresby et Agnetis uxoris suæ, Johannis Raskell et Aviciæ uxoris suæ, Nicholai Blakburn senioris, magistri Thomæ Tesedale, Johannis Malton clerici, Willelmi Woderall senioris, Willelmi Woderall junioris, Thomæ Loversall, et Roberti Feriby ac omnium fidelium defunctorum.—Item lego facturæ octo fenestrarum vitrearum in ecclesia mea parochiali de novo faciendarum xv li.

LXXXIII. TESTAMENTUM WILLELMI GYRLYNGTON NUPER CIVIS ET DRAPER EBOR.

May 20, 1444. Ego Willelmus Girlyngton,* civis et draper Ebor.—corpus meum in ecclesiastica sepultura sepeliendum. Item lego pro mortuario meo optimam meam togam pro corpore meo talliatam. Item lego fabricæ ecclesiæ Cathedralis Eboracensis xl s. Item lego quatuor ordinibus Fratrum Mendicancium Ebor. viij li. argenti, videlicet cuilibet ordini xl s. Item lego prisonariis domini Archiepiscopi Eboracensis, in victualibus sibi liberandis, xiij s. iiij d. Item lego prisonariis in les Kidcotes, modo consimili, x s. Item lego cuilibet anachoritæ Eboracensi x s. Item lego pro decimis et oblacionibus meis

* A younger son of the family of Girlington of Girlington, in Richmondshire. The Girlingtons had for some time been in the possession of property in York, which appears to have been inherited by the testator. He seems to have realised a large fortune by his profession, and his shop probably supplied him with the means of making some most useful and charitable legacies. He leaves 100 beds each furnished with a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a coverlet, and 100 pairs of shoes to as many poor people. These liberal bequests show that the testator was a man of substance. He was also of no little consideration in York, as we find him holding the office of sheriff for the City in 1427, mayor in 1440, and M.P. in 20 Henry VI. The new genealogical information which this will discloses does not tally with any pedigree of the family that I am acquainted with.

Stephen de Gryllington (Girlington) of York, "lyttester," an ancestor of the testator, in his will dated June 18, 1394, desires to be buried in the church of St. John the Evangelist on Ousebridge. He leaves to Margaret Clarevaux three ells of linen cloth, and to Agnes his wife, whom he appoints his executrix, all his lands in York. [Pr. 21 Oct. 1394.]

oblitis xx s. Item lego ad salarium duorum capellanorum pro anima mea et anima Elenæ, quondam uxoris meæ, parentumque nostrorum, et omnium fidelium defunctorum, in ecclesia mea parochiali Sancti Andreæ Ebor. celebraturorum, in ecclesia Sancti Martini in Conyngstrete in Eboraco, per tres annos proxime post decessum meum, xxj. marcas, capientium per annum vij. marcas. Item lego et dispono ad v^{xx} lectos in forma sequenti ordinandos, videlicet, v^{xx} coverlettes, precii cujuslibet iij s. iiij d., xxv. marcas; item v^{xx} paria linthiaminum, quolibet pari continente octo ulnas, precii cujuslibet paris ij s. iiij d., xx. marcas; et v^{xx} paria lodicium, quolibet pari continente quatuor ulnas, precii cujuslibet paris iij s. iiij d., xxv. marcas, et v^{xx} pauperibus personis penes discrecionem executorum meorum ministrandos et erogandos, quam cito post mortem meam commodius fieri poterit. Item lego ad v^{xx} paria calciamentorum et caligarum emendum, et v^{xx}. pauperibus personis erogandis pro anima mea et animabus antedictis v li. xvj s. viij d., precii cujuslibet paris xiiij d. Item lego Henrico Girlyngton consanguineo meo quatuor ulnas panni nigri ad unam togam. Item lego ad maritagium filiæ dicti Henrici decem marcas, si ipse vixerit tempore mortis meæ, aliter non. Item lego Willelmo et Johannæ, liberis Johannis Girlyngton, fratris mei defuncti, decem marcas equaliter dividendas. Item lego Roberto et Willelmo, filiis bastardis Johannis Girlyngton avunculi mei, quatuor libras inter eos equaliter dividendas. Item lego Aliciæ, filiæ ejusdem Johannis Girlyngton, xl s. Item lego uxori Nicholai Girlyngton,* consanguinei mei, unum ciphum argenti precii quatuor marcarum. Item lego Katerinæ Dalton et Aliciæ sorori suæ, seu earum alteri superviventi, xx s. Item lego Willelmo Freman, clerico, xx s. Item lego Willelmo Blenkarn et Margaretæ uxori suæ quinque marcas. Item lego Roberto Siggeswick, consanguineo meo, xl s. Item lego ad reparacionem pontis de Caterik vj li. Item lego ad reparacionem pontis de Kirkham iiij li. Item remitto et condono omnibus pauperibus debitoribus meis, qui commode solvere non possint, omnia illa debita quæ michi debent. Item do et lego Johannæ† uxori meæ

* Nicholas Girlington of York, the testator's cousin, makes his will September 17, 1464, and in it he desires to be buried either in St. Mary's Abbey or in the house of the Holy Trinity in York. He leaves 40*l.* to a chaplain to pray for his soul, and those of William and Nicholas Girlington, his parents, children, brothers, sisters, and benefactors' souls. He makes his wife Elizabeth his executrix and the guardian of his children. [Pr. 22 Sept. seq.]

† After her husband's death she remarried . . . Deyne, whom she survived, and by her will, dated at York July 19, 1457, she directs her body to be buried in the high choir of the church of St. Andrew's, York, in the tomb of William Girlington, her late husband. To her cousin Nicholas Girlington she leaves a silver cup gilt in the shape of a nut. To Elizabeth his wife she gives a salt of silver, covered and parcel gilt. To Nicholas Girlington his son, and Elizabeth his wife, a great pair of iron andirons. To Margaret Girlington, sister of the said Nicholas Girlington junior, her best bowl.

LXXXV. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS BROMPTON DE BEVERLACO NUPER DEFUNCTI.

In Dei nomine, Amen. In nomine Summæ et Individuæ Trinitatis, Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, Amen. Nono die mensis Julii, Anno Domini Millesimo quadringentesimo quadragesimo quarto, Ego Johannes Brompton de Beverlaco,‡ mercator, compos mentis et in bona memoria mea existens, condo, ordino et dispono testamentum meum in hunc modum. In primis, transiturus ab hoc mundo, Pater, in manus tuas commendo spiritum meum, redimisti me, Domine Deus veritatis, et si non meis meritis, qui homo peccator sum, spero tamen quod sinus Abrahæ me suscipiet redempcione passionis Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, et meritis et suffragiis precelsæ Genetricis Dei Mariæ, Sanctorum Michaelis, Gabrielis, Raphaelis, et omnium Angelorum et Archangelorum, Sanctorum Johannis Baptistæ et Patriarcharum Omnium, Sanctorum Petri et Pauli, Andreæ, Jacobi, Johannis et

* Thomas St. Quintin, Esq. the eldest son and heir of the testator, married Elizabeth, or Agnes, daughter of Sir John Constable of Halsham, Knight. Sir John Constable in his will mentions his daughter Elizabeth St. Quintin ; but, on the 24th of July, 1445, the administration to the effects of Thomas St. Quintin, Esq. is granted to Agnes his widow, Sir John Constable being a bondsman. He died without issue, and his estates passed to his second brother William. His widow remarried Sir William Skipwith.

† See his will under the year 1455.

‡ The will of a most opulent merchant at Beverley, which gives us a striking picture of the wealth and commercial greatness which formerly centred in that place. Few towns have had a greater downfall ; but even now, in the midst of its decay, we may still meet with traces of its ancient prosperity. The stately Minster, which would be an ornament to any town in Europe, is a living witness of the munificence which bade it rise above the plain, and it answers more decisively than any words could do the assertions of those who would say that beauty and taste are in their very nature incompatible with commerce, and that the merchant must necessarily make his merchandize his God. The testator makes his bequests on a scale of princely magnificence, and there is hardly a church or a religious establishment in Beverley or its neighbourhood that is omitted by him. The preamble to his will is drawn up in a strain of earnest and touching piety.

Apostolorum, Omnium Sanctorum, Georgii, Dionisii, Thomæ, Albani et Omnium Sanctorum Martirum, Sanctorum Edwardi, Remigii, Nicholai, Johannis de Beverlaco, Johannis de Bridlyngton et omnium Confessorum, Sanctarum Annæ, Magdalenæ, et Brigidæ, matronarum Venefridæ, Katerinæ, Barbaræ, Etheldredæ, Ursulæ et Undecim Millium, ac omnium Sanctarum Virginum, et tocius celestis curiæ. Item devote commendo Summi Salvatoris clemenciæ summæ fidem, spem et caritatem. Item lego corpus meum ad sepeliendum in ecclesia collegiata Beati Johannis Beverlaci, juxta corpus Elenæ uxoris meæ. * Nearly the whole of the early wills at York are neatly transcribed into registers, all of which have an ample margin. Whenever there is a bequest to the fabric of the Cathedral, there is a small cross in the margin, followed by "fabricæ Petri." The representatives of the various testators probably paid the amount of this legacy into the hands of the registrar; and he, for he was generally an officer of the church himself, found this notification of great service when he turned over his books before rendering up his accounts to the proper authorities. There are few wills which do not contain some bequest to the fabric of St. Peter. Glorious indeed and vast though that temple be, it will rise still vaster and more glorious before our eyes if we but remember that it is a monument of praise and adoration which has been raised by ten thousand hands.

[Prob. 30 Nov. 1444.]

is great doubt and confusion in the family genealogy about this period, but I imagine that these two wills will remove several difficulties. It has been affirmed by some that the testatrix was not a daughter of Sir William Stanley; the present document however rather militates against this statement, and confirms the account in the visitation. It makes not only several additions to the received pedigrees of the family, but it is also a valuable specimen of the English of the period.

* The wife of Sir John Tempest of Bracewell. Sir John's will occurs hereafter.

* Margaret, daughter of Sir Wm. Eure, by Maud, daughter of Henry Lord Fitzhugh, became the wife of Sir John Pudsey, of Bolton, Knight. She survived her husband, and seems to have retired to pass her widowhood at Beverley. Few families could boast of two such beautiful residences as Bolton and Barford. The first, although it is in the wild district of Craven, "standeth," as Dodsworth tells us, "very pleasantly, among sweet woods and fruitful hills." The second, a later acquisition, lies in a sheltered position above the Tees, and it is still preserved from the destroyer's hand. The ruins of a very picturesque chapel, crowning the hill which overhangs the mansion house, can be seen far into the Bishoprick. Barford was properly the dowager house of the family of Pudsey, but the testatrix seems to have preferred to pass the remainder of her days at Beverley, where she had some friends and kinsfolk.

XC. TESTAMENTUM AGNETIS DALTON RELICTÆ WILLELMI DALTON DE EBOR. DEFUNCTI.

Sep. 24, 1445. Ego Agnes, uxor nuper Willelmi Dalton,‡ nuper civis et marcatoris Ebor.—sep. in principali choro ecclesiæ meæ parochialis Sancti Martini in Conyngstrete. Agneti,§ uxori Johannis Bedford, de Kyngeston super Hull, unam peciam argenti coopertam cum tribus leonibus deauratis in fundo et cum scriptura in fundo Drede Gode moste oure all thyng; et Johanni Dalton, filio ejusdem Agnetis, unam bursam de albo cerico contextam, cum nominibus Jhc et Maria intextis. Et Johanni Hill, filio meo, optimam peciam meam argenti deauratam. Et Willelmo Wright de Eboraco, tailior, unam zonam argenti

* His will follows, in the year 1447.

† Sir James Strangeways married Elizabeth daughter and co-heir of Philip Lord Darcy and Meinill, who died under age 1418, and in right of her held the manor of Whorlton of the Archbishops of York, "by the tenure of serving the Archbishop with the cup in which he should drink on the day of his consecration." His son Richard married a co-heiress of William Neville Lord Fauconberg, and his son James, Anne daughter and heir of Robert Conyers of Ormesby. Sir James was Speaker of the House of Commons in the 1st of Edward IV. and Chief Justice of the County Palatine of Durham under Bishops Langley and Neville. He was a man of great talent and ability, and he laid the foundation of that greatness in wealth and position for which the house of Strangeways was especially distinguished.

‡ A respectable mercantile family in York, where they had been settled for some time. William Dalton, citizen of York, who was probably the father-in-law of the testatrix, died in 1400, and his wife Joan administers to his effects on the 21st of July in that year. I am inclined to think that the Daltons of Hull, a Visitation family, migrated from York, but I shall have occasion to refer to this subject hereafter. William Dalton, the husband of the testatrix, did not long survive her death. On the 5th of November, 1445, Mr. John Kirkby, Wm. Swayne, and Wm. Wright administer to his effects.

§ Her will, together with some interesting extracts from that of her husband, will be given hereafter.

* John Kirkby was own brother to the testatrix. He was a son of John Kirkby, citizen and litster of York, who died in 1428. His will is dated in that year, in which he leaves to his daughter Agnes 100 marks.

† The head of an illustrious Lincolnshire family, the history of which, as is unfortunately the case with many other houses in that neglected county, is almost entirely unknown. The testator Sir Giles Daubeny was a son of another Sir Giles, who died in the 12th of Richard II., and a grandson of Ralph Daubeny. He was in his minority when his father died, and as his son and heir he became the possessor of the large estates of his family, which were considerably extended by the accession of the fortune of his brother John Daubeny and by the wealth with which his wives were dowered. Sir Giles was thrice married. By Joan his first wife he had William his son and heir, who, at his father's death, in the 24th of Henry VI., was twenty-two years of age. Mary his second wife was the eldest of the three daughters and coheirs of Simon Leeke of Cotham, co. Notts, Esq. She brought, as her dower, the manors of Cotham and Houghton by Newark, which descended at her death to Joan her only daughter, who became the wife of Sir Robert Markham of Cotham, in right of his wife. Mary Leeke died on the 17th of February, 1442-3, and was buried in the church of Peverton, in Somerset. By his third wife, Alice, who survived him, Sir Giles had, I believe, three daughters—Amise, Isabell, and Alianor, who were heiresses to their mother. Sir Giles died at Barrington on the 11th of January, in the 24th of Henry VI., the same day on which the codicil to his will is dated. "The Inquisition after his death was taken at the Castle of Lincoln before John St. Paul, escheator, on the Friday next before the feast of St. Valentine, in the 24th of Henry VI. The jurors find that at his death he held the manor of South Ingleby, but the lands however were then of little worth, being at that time overflowed with the water which is called Tylle ; and that he had lands dependent on that manor in Saxilby and Brodholme, which he held by knight's service of the Lord Roos of Belvoir. They find also, that William Daubeny, who is of the age of twenty-two years and more, is the son and lawful heir to Sir Giles. The jurors also say that the said Sir Giles died seised of two bovates of land, as tenant per legem Angliæ, at Stupton in the said county, in right of inheritance of Mary, late his wife, and two bovates of land in Cleypole, both held of Robert Elys, Esq. in socage, pertaining to the manor of Cottam co. Notts, and that Joan, daughter of the said Giles and Mary, is next heir of the said Mary, and of the age of five years and more ; and that the said Sir Giles held no other lands or tenements in the said county."—J. * By letters, that is, of fraternity. This adoption, as it were, into the society of some monastic establishment, was especially sought after by pious and wealthy laymen. The letter of fraternity secured to the possessor "all the prayers, suffrages, and benefits" of the religious house during his life, and, upon his death, the letter was returned to the house with which he had connected himself, and he was entitled ever afterwards to the prayers of the brotherhood. These letters of fraternity were granted with no sparing hand. Some of my readers may perhaps be interested by the following letter, which was granted by the prior and convent of Durham to the Earl of Northumberland and his Countess in 1527. I give it in its original form, as a specimen of its class.

Litera fraternitatis concessa Comiti Northumbriæ et consorti suæ.

testator's uncle was an officer in the church of York, and several notices of him have been already given.

* A will of the deepest interest and value. The testator has not infrequently been mentioned in the wills of the citizens of York. He was a man evidently possessed of great taste and accomplishments, and his will is little more than a splendid inventory of the choicest and the rarest treasures. The miracle plays which he mentions are worthy of our especial consideration. The Towneley Mysteries, one of the earliest publications of the Surtees Society, give us a fair specimen of these literary curiosities ; and it is a somewhat singular circumstance that the plays which that interesting volume contains are supposed to have been acted as well as written in Yorkshire. The city of York was always celebrated for its miracle plays, and many of them were in Drake's time in existence among the municipal archives. It is much to be regretted that they are now lost. Drake in the Appendix to his Eboracum gives us a most curious and valuable account of the share which each craft was to take in the Corpus Christi play for 1415, prefaced by a commendatory letter in favour of that then popular pastime ; but the subject has been more amply illustrated in the Appendix to York Records of the Fifteenth Century, by Robert Davies, F.S.A., 1843, 8vo. The testator, who appears to have been much interested in these plays, has not only the manuscripts themselves, of which he was perhaps the author, but he had also in his keeping some of the banners and ornaments which accompanied them. The clergy no doubt thought that they were advancing their cause by popularizing as it were Christianity, and by bringing as visible and actual incidents before their spectators the principal occurrences in Scripture and tradition. In 1455 Robert Lasingby "clericus parochialis S. Dionisii Ebor." leaves to the fabric of his parish church for his burial "unam mappam de twill et ludum oreginale (sic) Sancti Dionisii." This play would be an important addition to the literature of the vestry, although the parishioners were in all probability well acquainted with its subject.

* A young scholar, who in all probability was an offshoot from the family of Hunter of Medomsley. It is to the same family that we are indebted for one of the most industrious of our many northern antiquaries, Christopher Hunter. He was a physician in Durham from the beginning to the middle of the eighteenth century, and he combined his taste for antiquities with an immoderate love of coffee. Several of his laborious volumes, which are in the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, still bear the stains which were caused by the favourite beverage of their compiler. The testator appears to have been of the same family, and this is rendered more probable from his mother having married an Elrington, a family which lived in the immediate neighbourhood of Medomsley, and also from the fact that the commission for the administration of his goods is directed to Roland Hardgill, vicar of Haltwhistle in Northumberland.

† Roland Hardgill afterwards became Dean of the Collegiate Church of Lanchester in the Bishoprick of Durham.

‡ A will which throws some light upon national history as well as upon the annals of a princely house. The testatrix was the daughter of Thomas Lord Clifford, by Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Lord Roos of Hamlake. She became the second wife of Richard Plantagenet, ordinarily known as Richard of Coningsbrough, Earl of Cambridge. He was grandson to Edward III. and his own grandchild sat upon the throne of England as Edward IV. His first wife became heiress in blood to Lionel Duke of Clarence, and hence arose the claim of the house of York to the throne of England. Soon after the accession of Henry V. the animosity which Richard of Coningsbrough had been cherishing against the house of Lancaster broke out into a conspiracy against the ruling power. This was discovered, and before the king departed to France, Richard, with the Lord Scrope of Masham, and Sir Thomas Grey of Heton, his brother-conspirators, had died upon the scaffold. This left the testatrix a widow, and there is no direct evidence to show that she ever took to herself a second husband. She is said by Dodsworth to have married John Neville Lord Latimer. I have stated this in a note to that nobleman's will, which is dated in 1430; but it is a somewhat singular fact that in that document the name of the testatrix is never once mentioned. The omission is certainly a remarkable one. The testatrix had no children herself, and her affections seem to have been entirely alienated from the issue which her husband left by his former wife. She never mentions them in her will, and there is nothing to show that she ever had any intercourse with them. With the Cliffords, however, her own family, she maintained the closest intimacy. Her widowhood was principally spent at the Castle of Coningsbrough, which she seems to have held in dower. She had also a residence at Turnham Hall, in the vicinity of Selby, and another at Sandal Castle. At Coningsbrough she appears to have maintained queen-like splendour, and Mr. Hunter gives us a specimen of her charters, beginning with the royal "Nos." The castle where she held her court was indeed worthy of a royal tenant; but it was perhaps more suited for a Harold or an Athelstan than for a granddaughter of Edward III. Here she had her train of esquires and yeomen; yet, with all this grandeur, we cannot but think that she would willingly have resigned it all, and forgotten the past, for her maiden name and a quiet home in the halls of Skipton. The past was fraught with bitter recollections to her; she had worn her widow's weeds for a long time. More than thirty years had elapsed since the violent death of her first husband; and, if she ever had a second, he had been dead for more than fifteen years. In the fortunes of her stepchildren she had no lot nor part, and her very dislike to the Duke of York tended to make her more favourably disposed towards the monarch of the day, who was still the son of him who had murdered her lord. It is easy therefore to conceive how bitterly in her declining years she would feel her loneliness and desolation, and we may then imagine what her pleasure would be in calling around her the youthful scions of the house of Clifford, and in reverting to earlier scenes and bygone days, in a home of which she might say, as Penelope did of the mansion of her absent, and as she feared departed, Lord—

Τοῦ πότε μεμνήσεσθαι ὀΐομαι ἐνπέρ ὀνείρῳ.

The Countess did not long survive the making of her will. It is dated on the 15th of August, 1446, and the died on the 26th of the same month. She was buried in the monastery of Roche, to which she had been so munificent a benefactress. The tomb, however, which commemorated her is no longer to be found among the fair ruins of that once magnificent abbey. I append to my account of the testatrix two letters of hers to the Prior of Durham. They refer merely to a stall in the Collegiate Church of Hemingbrough, which was in the patronage of the Prior and Convent, but they are still interesting.

* Thomas Lord Clifford, the nephew of the testatrix, was born on the Monday before the Assumption of the Virgin, in the 2nd of Henry V. He married Joan, daughter of Thomas Lord Dacre, by whom he had several children. Lord Clifford appears to have lived on terms of great intimacy with his aunt. His private accounts, which are preserved among the muniments at Skipton, tell us that in the year 1437, he and his family lived for some time in Coningsbrough Castle, and paid too for their board. Two successive Masters of Clifford (I translate the roll literally) were born there, and to the second of them, who was the survivor, the Countess herself stood godmother. Lord Clifford, although he was a wary and prudent man, was unable to remain neutral when that civil war arose which was so disastrous to Yorkshire and himself. Henry was probably made acquainted with the hatred with which Clifford and his aunt regarded the Duke of York, and a well-timed and munificent pension secured him their good wishes and co operation. Clifford therefore adopted the cause of the house of Lancaster, and fell at St. Alban's, 33 Henry VI. with his uncle, the powerful Earl of Northumberland. He was then in the 41st year of his age.

† Sir Robert Babthorpe of Babthorpe, Knight, one of the executors to King Henry V., died on the 22nd of August, 1486, and was buried in the Church of Hemingbrough. His first wife was Eleanor, daughter and heir of John de Waterton of Waterton in Lincolnshire, and after her death he remarried Bridget Pilkington, a daughter of the Lancashire family. Ralph Babthorpe his son and heir and his grandson, another Ralph, were slain at the disastrous battle of St. Alban's, in 1455, fighting for the house of Lancaster.

‡ John, afterwards Lord Clifford, the godson of the testatrix, was born at Coningsbrough Castle, in 1430. He is better known by the name of black-faced Clifford, from his many deeds of ferocious cruelty, as well as from his stern and uncompromising hostility to the house of York. He did not enjoy his title long, for he was slain near Ferrybridge, on the day before the sanguinary battle of Towton. His name has descended to us in no favourable light, and if we could now form any correct opinion of the part he took in the events of that troubled period, we probably should come to the conclusion that he disgraced the honour of his princely house by an inhuman thirst for blood, and by a spirit of revenge which have hardly ever been paralleled.

§ Matilda Clifford, the goddaughter of the testatrix, was probably a sister of the John Clifford who has just been mentioned.

* A gentlewoman in the service of the Countess, who became the second wife of Edmund Fitzwilliam of Wadworth, Esq. Her maiden name was Welles, and her arms, which were impaled by her husband in the church at Coningsbrough, were, Sable, three firebrands or. She died on the 11th March, 1477–8, and was buried, not under her husband's stately tomb in the church of Wadworth, but at Coningsbrough, near the home of her old mistress. Her will, dated on the 6th of March, in the year preceding her death, lies before me, but it must be given, as it deserves, at full length in its proper place.

† A daughter of Nicholas Blackburn, Lord Mayor of York. She had probably been one of the Countess's gentlewomen, and this legacy is therefore an affectionate remembrance of her services. Some notices of her family have been already given.

‡ No doubt one of the gentlewomen of the testatrix. She was probably a daughter of William Amyas of Sandal, where the Countess occasionally resided. In his will, dated on the day of St. Julian, 1434, he mentions his sons John and Robert, his wife Joan, and his daughters Elizabeth, Agnes, and Margaret. To Margaret his daughter, he leaves a pair of gold beads, and to the high altar of his parish church "unum gausipe." In 1469, John Amyas, the son of William, desires to be buried in the porch of St. Ellen at Sandal, and he leaves the residue of his goods to Catherine his wife.

* The Garths were retainers of the Cliffords at Skipton. On the 10th of July, 17 Henry VI. William del Garth, Esq. of Skipton, executes a deed of gift of all his effects to Thomas del Garth his grandson, Joan his wife, and Richard del Rane, rector of Marton in Craven. Thomas Garth became keeper of the King's woods, at Bolton Canons, a patent office which he transmitted to his descendants.

† Alesia, daughter and heiress of Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, and wife of Richard Neville Earl of Warwick, the father of the Kingmaker. Lord Warwick's will occurs hereafter. As the testatrix mentions her as her cousin, the relationship might possibly originate through Lord Latimer.

‡ Can this be William Scargill, Esq. of Whitkirk, sen. who died in 1459? On the 12th of May in that year Robert Neville, Esq. and Robert Hall of Selby, administer to his effects. He seems to have been a retainer of the Countess. Other members of his family have occurred to me as located in the Deanery of Doncaster.

§ Edward Fitzwilliam of Wadworth, Esq. a descendant of the house of Spotbrough. He was in the service of the testatrix, and he married, to his second wife, one of the gentlewomen of her train. He and his wife were benefactors to the church of Coningsboro'. He died on the 24th of December, 1465, and was buried under a splendid altar-tomb, which is still remaining in the church of Wadworth. Sir Richard Fitzwilliam of Aldwark, who married the wealthy heiress of Clarel, was his son.

XCVIII. TESTAMENTUM GUIDONIS FAYREFAX NUPER DE WALTON ARMIGERI DEFUNCTI.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Quinto die mensis Octobris, anno Domini Millesimo cccc quadragesimo sexto, Reverendus et discretus vir Guydo Fayrfax† de Walton, armiger, compos mentis

* Probably Thomas Wentworth, Esq. a younger son of the house of Wentworth, of North Elmsal. He lived at Doncaster, and by his will dated there on the 19th March, 1449-50, he desires to be buried in the chancel of St. Lawrence, within the church of St. George at Doncaster. After the death of Catherine his wife, whom he appoints his executrix, he leaves his best gown of scarlet, his gold chain, his best zone and baslard, to be sold to make or finish a certain new work in the chancel of St. Lawrence, according to a plan and intention by him in his lifetime made and known. To Agnes wife of Robert Constable of Flambro' he bequeathes "unum librum vocatum Lucidary scriptum in lingua Francisca." (This will was proved by an officer of the Court at Doncaster, 29 April, 1450, whilst he was on his way to the Synod at Southwell.) The testatrix was intimately connected with the Wentworths, and was a trustee for their lands. Richard Wentworth of Everton, to whom she conveyed a moiety of the manor of West Bretton, was a brother of Thomas.

† A will short and concise as the emergency required. The testator was a younger son of an illustrious house—a house that for learning and valour had no peer among the noble families of Yorkshire. I have reason to believe that he was a lawyer, and it was to him probably that his nephew, Sir Guy Fairfax, who became a justice of the King's Bench, was indebted for his name and learning. Yorkshire may indeed be proud of the many and great lawyers that she produced during the 15th century—men who advanced the boundaries of the English law and were not afraid of vindicating its dignity.

* A Yorkshire family, with the history of which I am unacquainted. Joan, the widow of the testator, did not long survive him. By her will, dated on the 3rd of April, 1447, she desires to be buried in the city of York, in the church of St. Mary Bishophill senior. To the fabric of the Cathedral church she leaves a pair of beads of coral. To Emmot Cavell of Wilberfosse, a black horse ambling. To the hospital of the Holy Trinity in Beverley a pair of beads of gold.

CI. TESTAMENTUM EDMUNDI POLE DE EBOR.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Anno Domini Millesimo quadringentesimo quadragesimo quinto, octavo die mensis Augusti, Ego Edmundus de la Pole* de Eboraco, armiger.—Inprimis commendo animam meam Deo Omnipotenti gloriosæque Virgini Mariæ matri Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, Sanctæ Annæ, Sancto Antonio, Sancto Martino, Sancto Ricardo Scrope, et Omnibus Sanctis Dei, ad impetrandum graciam et misericordiam a Deo pro salvacione animæ meæ, corpusque meum terræ, ut cadaver, ubicunque Deo placuerit; sed si poterit esse in ecclesia Sancti Martini in Conyngstrete in Eboraco, ibidem sub petra marmorea ubi sepultus fuit Johannes Brathewayt. Item volo ut inveniatur unus capellanus idoneus ad celebrandum in eadem ecclesia per duos annos integros ad orandum pro animabus Johannis Brathwat et Marionæ uxoris ejus, et pro anima mea et pro anima Aliciæ †

* A gentleman of honourable descent and a member of an ancient house. He was, I believe, the youngest son of Sir John de la Pole of Newborough, Knight, by Cecily, sister and heir of Sir William de Wakebridge. His elder brother, Peter de la Pole, of Radborne, Esq. married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir John Lawton, by Alianore, sister and sole heir of the celebrated Sir John Chandos, K.G. From him descended the family of de la Pole of Hartington, co. Notts. Some account of this family may be found in the Topographer and Genealogist, II. 176. Another Edmund Pole, of the parish of Cramham, by his will, dated on the 31st of January, 1445–6, which was proved at York on the 1st of January following, desires to be buried in the monastery of Kirkham. He mentions his son Thomas. To his wife he leaves all his jewels. To John Pole, living with Sir Edmund Hastings, Knight, "siccam argentatam ye pomell and hylts de perro." He mentions Robert Willoughby, his former servant, and his son Edmund Willoughby his godson.

† Alice de la Pole, the widow of the testator, makes her will at York, Jan. 10, 1451–2. In it she directs her body to be buried in the choir of St. Thomas of Canterbury, in her parish church of St. Martin in Conyngstrete, York, near the bodies of her parents and of Edmund her husband. For her mortuary she leaves her best gown and hood taken by tally. To Thomas de la Pole her son she bequeaths a cup of uxoris meæ, accipiendo quolibet anno pro salario suo centum solidos argenti. Item ad solvendum pro debitis Johannis Roghton, filii Aliciæ uxoris meæ, ne forte non ministravi sufficienter bona sua ubi majus necesse fuerit, xl s. Item ad distribuendum pro animabus Johannis de la Pole militis, patris mei, et dominæ Ceciliæ, matris meæ, et Radulphi,* fratris mei, quinque marcas. Item Aliciæ uxori meæ, et Thomæ † filio nostro, meam partem de vasis argenteis. Item Agneti Stirtivaunt servienti meæ vj s. viij d. Item Margaretæ et Johannæ Smyth, filiæ meæ (sic), cuilibet iij s. iiij d. Item ad emendum quatuor torcheas ad comburendum circa corpus meum in prima die obitus mei apud Dirige, et postea ad Missam, et postea secundo die in eadem forma, quarum volo ut tres remaneant summo altari et quarta altari ubi sepultus fuero, ad comburendum circa corpus Domini. Ad distribuendum pro anima mea die sepulturæ meæ et die octavo sequenti, ordinandum pro pauperibus in pane et cervisia et carnibus, quolibet die, xl s. Item ad emendum duos cerges, ponderis quilibet v lb., ad ardendum circa corpus meum. Item volo quod tres optimæ togæ post mortuarium meum vendantur ad perimplendum omnia antedicta, et omnes baslardi mei cum zonis eadem forma. Residuum—Aliciæ uxori meæ et Thomæ filio nostro.—Lego magistro Garnethorp iij s. iiij d [Prob. xv. Mar. 1447-8.]

To Joan her maid 6s. 8d. in utensils. The residue she gives to have masses celebrated for the good of her soul. To Brian Metcalfe she bequeaths a long chest bound with iron. [Pr. 15 March, 1451-2.]

* Ralph de la Pole, Esq. Sir John's second son, was the ancestor of the de la Poles of Wakebridge, Syerston, Spinkhill, and Parkhall.

† The will of Thomas Pole of York, tapeter, was proved 24 Nov. 1457, and administration was granted to Alice his widow.

‡ The testator, Robert Strangeways the younger, was a son of Robert Strangeways, Esq. whose will has just been printed. Both father and son appear to have held some position in the Palatinate of Durham, for which they were indebted to the kind offices of the Prince Bishop, who was their kinsman. The testator was Master Forester under Cardinal Langley, and on the accession of Robert Neville to the see he became Chamberlain to the Bishop with a stipend of 20 marks a year. This office he held till his death.

§ The establishment of the Friars Preachers was in Micklegate in York. There are no remains of it now in existence. The family of Strangeways evidently had some connection with this house, as in the year 1500 we find Joan widow of Sir Richard Strangeways making her will whilst she was residing in that monastery. She directs her body to be buried "in the qwer of ye same Freires under the lettron wher as the rede theyr legand, and if it happen me to decesse within x myles of York yet I wyll y^t my body be broght to ye said Freires."

* Robert Neville, a son of Ralph Earl of Westmerland, by Joan Beaufort, daughter of John of Gaunt, was translated to the see of Durham from that of Salisbury upon the death of Cardinal Langley in 1437. He died in 1457, in the 20th year of his pontificate, and was buried in the chapel belonging to his family in the southern aisle of the Cathedral of Durham. A marble stone still marks his grave, but the rich brass which once adorned it is no longer there. The Bishop's will, dated on the 8th of July, 1457, is printed in the Appendix to the Three Historians, CCLV. but it does not appear that it was ever proved.

† In 1446 Thomas Strangeways and Robert his brother (the testator) had a lease of the manor of Ketton under the Prior and Convent of Durham. A family of the same name lingered in the neighbourhood until the 17th century.

‡ Henry Strangeways, Esq. a son probably of Sir James Strangeways, and, I believe, first cousin to the testator, was one of Bishop Neville's executors in 1457.

§ On the 20th of January, 1452-3, the Archbishop of York issues a license to the rector of Middleham, empowering him to marry George Strangeways, Esq. and Roberta daughter of John Melton of Holderness. The George Strangeways who was warden of Darcy's chantry at Whorlton was in all probability his first cousin.

‖ Christopher Boynton of Sedbury was the junior justice for the Palatinate of Durham during the episcopate of Bishop Neville. He was connected in many ways with the testator's family, and his wife was Jane daughter of James Strangeways of Skelton.

She was of full age on Dec. 17, 1457. She was afterwards, I believe, the wife of Conan Barton of Whenby, Esq.

† A very ancient and most respectable Nottinghamshire house. The will which the testator makes is exceedingly short and simple. The families of Bingham and Layborn were intimately connected with Sibthorp and its lords.

* Sir Hugh Willoughby of Wollaton, the head of a celebrated Nottinghamshire family which has produced several distinguished men. He was twice married, first to Isabel, daughter of . . . Foljambe, by whom, among other children, he left Richard his son and heir, who made his will in 1469. His second wife was Margaret, daughter and co-heir of Sir Baldwin Freville, by whom he had several children. This will makes several additions to the family pedigree, and is in many respects an interesting and valuable document. We may safely say that it is the composition of the testator himself, and it does him the greatest credit. Few houses in England could show a more splendid array of family plate than that of Willoughby, and few, if any, of the English gentry could at that time draw up such a description as that for which we have to thank the testator. The will is followed by a long uninteresting codicil, which contains the settlement of the testator's estate. The executors were released, according to a memorandum in the Register, without exhibiting any inventory. The will of the testator's mother, Isabella, daughter of Sir Hugh Annesley, has been printed in the first volume of the Testamenta Eboracensia. It is dated in 1415.

Johanni filiæ Nicholai

* The head of the great family of Wortley of Wortley, which is now represented by Lord Wharncliffe. I can add nothing to the very admirable account of this ancient and talented family which has been given in Mr. Hunter's History of South Yorkshire. John Wortley, Esq. the father of the testator, by his will dated on the 6th of December, 1436, and proved at York on the 3rd of September following, desires to be buried in the church of Hymmesworth. He makes John Wombwell his executor. The whole document is of a singularly uninteresting nature, and he mentions none of his relations eo nomine.

† Nicholas Wortley, the son and heir of the testator, married Isabel, daughter and heir of William Tunstall of Thurland. By her, among many other children, he became the father of the celebrated Sir Thomas Wortley, of whose public and private life Mr. Hunter gives us so many interesting details. Isabel Tunstall survived her husband and made her will at Newall on March 1, 1491-2, which was proved at York on the 21st of the same month. She desires to be buried in the church of St. Michael at Thornhill. To Nicholas her son she leaves 10*l.* "Item voluntas mea est ut habeam unam petram de marbull vel alabastro super me positam cum scriptura circa petram." Her son Thomas Wortley, Knight, is her executor.

* A gentleman who was connected with the ancient family of Sywardby of Sywardby, near Bridlington. He was the son of William Wartre, and his family appears to have been engaged in commerce at York. The will of his brother Richard, an alderman of that city, occurs hereafter. Agnes Wattre of York, by her will dated at York on the 8th of June, 1435, bequeathed to Sir Thomas Barlay an altarcloth with A in the middle, and a ring of silver with unicorn horn. To Sir John Maltster, a cushion covered with "purseledyr." To the Rector of the church of St. Saviour's, a ring of gold with unicorn horn. To Margaret le Smyth, an Agnus Dei.

† This chapel was not built till several years had elapsed. On the 5th of August, 1468, William Poteman licenses the chapel for the celebration of divine service, "as it has not been consecrated, and considering the pious devotion of Elizabeth Sewardby, deceased, who left in her will the residue of her goods for the maintenance of a chaplain there, and because the said manor (of Siwardby) is situated at so great a distance from the parish church (Bridlington) that it is difficult for one dwelling in and near it to go to the said church to hear daily service."—Reg. Neville, fol. 102.

‡ William Sywardby of Sywardby, Esq makes his will on the 9th of April, 1450, which was proved at York on the 22nd of December following. He desires to be buried in the Conventual Church of Bridlington, where his ancestors rest in the Lord. He leaves for his mortuary his best horse, saddle, bridle, &c. and his armour, and 10 pounds of wax for torches, to be burnt around his body on the day of his burial. To the Prior and Convent of Bridlington being at his burial, and that he may be received into their fraternity, 40*s*. To the chapel of St. Mary, at Melrose, and to the fabric of the church at Bridlington, 20*s*. For the bells, and for his burial within the said church, 13*s*. 4*d*. To the fabric of the Cathedral Church of St. Peter, at York, 20*s*. To Geoffrey Pigot his son his best horse after his mortuary, his best furred gown, and a

To Margaret, his dearly beloved daughter, another cup, plain, a salt with a cover of silver, one red hanging bed with costers belonging to it of red and green, one halling of red and green, and half of the stuff in the kitchen and brewhouse. To Juliana his sister 20*s.* and an annual rent of 40*s.* To John Sywardby his brother, for his life, whatever he has in the vills of Rudstane, Swathorp, and Brigham. To Peter Sywardby his brother all he has in Mowthorp. To Henry Vavasour, jun. Esq. a heart of gold. To Robert Lowthorp of Bridlington 20*s.* The residue to Elizabeth Sywardby, his most beloved bedfellow (conthorali suæ peramantissimæ,) for the health of his soul. The testator married a Vavasour of Haslewood, and appears to have left an only daughter who married into the family of Pigot of Clotherham. On the 28th of March, 1473. Lady Margaret and Ralph Pygott of Clotherham, with others, administer to the effects of Thomas Sywardby of Bridlington.

* The testator was the third son of John Wentworth of North Elmsal, Esq. and the founder of the house of Wentworth of Bretton. He married Cecily daughter and heir of John Tansley of Everton, by whom he left several children. There is a tradition that he became the husband of Matilda of York, the widow of Richard Earl of Cambridge, but this appears to be more than improbable. The Countess was certainly connected as a feoffee with the Wentworth property, and the testator may perhaps have been a gentleman in her suite, and these very circumstances probably originated the tradition. Mr. Hunter is also incredulous on this subject.

† Richard Wentworth of Bretton, Esq. the son and heir of the testator, made his will at Westbretton on the 3rd of October, 1488. He desires to be buried in the church of Silkeston. To each of his daughters, Cecily, Grace, and Alice he gives the sum of 40*l.* as a marriage portion, and to each of his sons William, John, Robert, Amery, and Thomas he gives 40s. He mentions Isabel his wife (a daughter of Sir Wm. Fitzwilliam of Sprotborough). He appoints Richard Wodroue, Amery Burdhede, Mathew Wentworth his son and heir, Ralph Bumby, and John Page his executors, and William Fitzwilliam and Thomas Wortley, Knights, his supervisors.

* A distinguished Yorkshire family, which was long seated at Kilnwick. Of its history, however, there is but little known.

† By her will, dated at Killingwick on the 20th of April, 1461, which was proved at York on the 10th of September following, she desires to be buried in the choir of the church of Killingwick. To Sir John Normanvill, Knight, her son, she leaves her best bowl of silver, her best cup with a cover gilt, and her best bed with one cistern at Smals, with a great brass cauldron there, and if it happen that Dame Margaret the wife of the said Sir John be pregnant and have a son, the said bowl, &c. to go to him. To her son William, if he be alive, 20 marks. To her son Thomas Normanvill, if his brother Sir John be alive and not dead, 20*l.* To Margaret and Alice her daughters 40*l.* each, on the condition that they marry with the advice and consent of their brothers and her executors. She wills that all the ornaments and garments belonging to her body be given to her daughters, and she wills that William Eliott sing for her soul during three years. William Crosse, &c. executors.

his death. On the 24th of November, 1427, he became Prebendary of Driffield, in the church of York, on the resignation of Thomas Kempe, who afterwards filled the see of London. He held many other ecclesiastical preferments, and he was also an officer under the Bishop of Durham. In addition to these ecclesiastical distinctions Rolleston was in the service of the State. In 1421 he was Keeper of the Great Wardrobe, and we find also that he was present with the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of St. Asaph when it was determined to raise the sum of 2,000 marks by pawning the King's "riche coler." A document in the Lansdowne MSS. in the British Museum would lead us to infer that he was no longer Provost at the day of his death; but, from the fact that his successor, John Barningham, the treasurer at York, did not receive his appointment till the early part of the year 1451, there is not much credit to be attached to it.

To Ellen Kelk his daughter another piece pounced with a chaplet "de treyfolez" and three leopards at the base. To Elizabeth Ardern his daughter another piece with three lions at the base.

* Stephen Wilton, Doctor of Laws, was appointed to the prebend of Tockerington, in the church of York, 17 Oct. 1434. On Nov. 10, 1441, he resigned this stall for that of Strensall in the same church. On the same day in the following year he was made Canon of St. Martin at Beverley; and on 16 April, 1443, he was appointed Rector of Hugate on the resignation of Robert Wiot, and he exchanged his Archdeaconry of Middlesex with the same person for the Rectory of Baynton. This latter piece of preferment he resigns in 1446 in favour of Thomas Wilton. On the 10th of February, 1449, he succeeds Thomas Kempe, who had been promoted to the see of London, in his stall of South Cave, resigning for it that of Strensall, and on the 20th of the same month he was appointed to the prebend of South Muskham, in the church of Southwell, which had been vacated by Mr. Hugh Pakenham; this he resigned in 1453. Finally, on the 18th of August, 1453, on the death of William Duffield, he became Archdeacon of Cleveland: this office he held till his death. He was also prebendary of Empingham, in the Cathedral of Lincoln. By his will, dated on the 4th of June. 1457, he desires that if he dies in any place within the realm of England he may be buried in the church of St. John at Beverley.

† Of Mollescroft, near Beverley, gen. His father, William Ledes of Mollescroft, gen mentions him as his son and heir in his will, which is dated on the 4th of September, 1436, and which was proved at York on the 7th of November following. He desires to be buried in the choir of the chapel of the Blessed Mary at Beverley, near his wife. He mentions Elizabeth his sister.

‡ Edmund Portyngton by his will, dated Dec. 16, 1463, directs his body to be buried in the nave of the church of St. John at Beverley, near the tomb of the said St. John. "I will that Ralph Heslarton, gentleman, my cousin, have five marks yearly for three years towards his exhibition in the Court at London."

§ His will was made on the 5th of September, 1458, and was proved at York on the 14th of the same month. He describes himself as John Rolleston (of Beverley, Esq.) son of Roger Rolleston, lately deceased. He directs his body to be buried in the Collegiate Church of the Blessed John of Beverley, near his father's tomb. To Margaret Gunnas his sister he leaves a silver cup covered, with this motto (racione) inscribed on the cover, drynke depe. To Ellen Kelk his sister he bequeaths a silver cup standing. To Elizabeth Ardern his sister a silver cup of the like size and make. To Margaret Gunnas his sister a certain woman's saddle which belonged to Margaret his mother. To Sir Thomas Halitreholme, chaplain, a new Psalter, which lately belonged to Margaret Tirwhitt. To William Rolleston (probably his brother) an annual rent of 40s. for life. To John Smyth, chaplain of the chantry founded in honour of St. John of Beverley and St. Katharine the Virgin in the aforesaid Collegiate Church, and to his successors, a croft called "Frary Close," in Beverley, opposite to the Friary or Hospital of St. Nicholas, to the augmentation of his salary, that the same chaplain and his successors may pray devoutly for the soul of that venerable man Robert Rolleston, clerk, late Provost of the aforesaid Collegiate Church, for the souls of the above mentioned Roger his father, Margaret his mother, for the souls of all his ancestors, and for his own.

* This lady was evidently a daughter of the house of Mowbray of Eseby in Cleveland. She was twice married; her first husband was William Selby, a wealthy citizen of York, who died before 1427. Her second husband was the head of an ancient and considerable family, Roger Aske of Aske, near Richmond. She survived him also, and after his death she retired to York to spend the rest of her days. This is the only will in existence of any member of the family of Aske of Aske, and it throws very great light upon the history and genealogy of that time-honoured house. The furniture and the jewels which the testatrix leaves behind her give us some idea of her wealth and taste, and she enumerates them with a careful precision which no one probably who had not presided over more than one household could possibly attain to.

* A wealthy citizen of York, who represented the city in parliament four several times. By his will, dated on the 20th of July, 1423, and proved on 3rd of August, 1427, he directs himself to be buried "in majori ecclesia Beati Petri Eboracensis," i.e. the cathedral, near the bodies of his ancestors, under his marble stone. To George Mowbray he leaves his tenement in Petergate, with its shops. To Hawisia his wife his tenements in Colyargate, &c. and the lands which he had by the bequest of William Mowbray her brother, with remainder to William son of the above mentioned George Mowbray, on condition that they and their heirs bear the surname of "Seleby." To Roger Selby his brother he bequeathes a plain silver cup covered, which formerly belonged to the Master of St. Leonard's. To three chaplains, to perform service for his soul and for those of his benefactors at the altar of St. Mary the Virgin in Belfreys church, 15*l*. To George Mowbray "optimum meum bacenet cum uno ventali et unam loricam optimam de calibe cum uno brestplate, leghernes, vaumbrace et rerebrace." To his wife Hawise all the ornaments belonging to his body and head "cum anulis, pirris et preculis." To his cousin Agnes a silver piece with a cover called flat. To Sir Thomas Housman, chaplain, a covered silver piece "qua idem Thomas utatur maxime in potando." To John son of George Mowbray a zone with a dagger of silver. To William Mowbray his best zone of silver, with his baslard. To Robert Bruse a breastplate of stele. To Hawise Wandisford 20*s*. He also mentions Hawisia daughter of his son Lawrence, his brother Roger Selby, his sister Agnes, and Robert Mowbray brother of William Mowbray. To Agnes daughter of Roger Selby his brother he gives 10 marks towards her marriage portion.

† Aske is in the parish of Easby. In that interesting old church, which nestles beneath the walls of the fair monastery of St. Agatha, there are no memorials of the Askes remaining, save a weather-beaten shield upon the outside of the porch. The earlier members of the family of Aske were probably buried in the nunnery of Marrick in Swaledale, which was founded by Roger de Aske the lord of Marrick in the twelfth century. In the prosperity of this little shrine in the wilderness his descendants took the deepest interest. The founder's choir was on the north side of the church ; it is now entirely destroyed, and exists only in that very valuable ground-plan of the nunnery which may be found in the Collectanea Topographica. The later lords of Aske deserted the bleak and stormswept hill of Marrick, and found a fairer resting-place within the stately monastery of Easby.

* Son and heir of Roger Aske, Esq. On the division of his grandfather Pert's lands in 7 Henry VI. among the representatives of his three daughters and coheiresses, Conan Aske obtains one share as the son and heir to his mother who was then dead. On 21 May, 1465, he obtains permission from the Archdeacon of Richmond to have service celebrated within his house at Aske. The maiden name of his wife is uncertain.

† Roger Aske of Aske, Esq., the second husband of the testatrix, died 18 Henry VI. He was twice married ; his first wife was Elizabeth the youngest of the three daughters and coheirs of William Pert, by Isabella daughter and heir of Stephen Scrope. She died before the 7th of Henry VI. After her death he married the testatrix, who was then the rich widow of William Selby of York. He would probably become acquainted with her in her youth at her home in Cleveland, and his intercourse with his southern cousins the Askes of Aughton would give him many opportunities for renewing his intimacy.

* The wife of Sir William Pudsey, Knight, an unrecorded member of the family of Bolton. He and his wife were buried under an immense slab of blue marble in the church of Gainford, which, according to popular tradition, was removed from the little chapel of Barford on the opposite bank of the Tees. In 1499, Bishop Fox grants a pardon to Jakettus (or James) son and heir of Sir William Pudsey, Knight, for an entry without license into his late father's lands in Darlington, Killerby, and Ingleton. In 1511 William, brother and heir of James Pudsey, Esq. has livery of the same lands.

† Wife of Robert Bruce, Esq. and probably own sister to the testatrix. Her will is dated at York on the 30th of July, 1477. She styles herself as "Isabella nuper uxor Roberti Bruce arm." and she desires to be buried in the cloisters of the Nunnery of St. Clement, in the suburbs of York, near the place of sepulture of Joan her sister, under the images of the blessed Mary and St. William there. She then bequeaths "feretro Corporis Christi in Eboraco unum tusshew nigrum cum pusculis, xxxj stipis et pendentibus argenti, et unum annulum auri cum lapide in eodem cum flagellis ex utraque parte, et unum annulum auri cum lapide in eodem vocato unum diamant capiti Ricardi Scrope." CXIII. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI JOHANNIS NEVILL MILITIS, FILII ET HEREDIS RADULPHI COMITIS WESTMERLAND.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Ye first day of Decembre, ye yere of our Lorde M'cccc.xlix. I John Nevill,† knyght, sone and here

* Robert Dobbes appears to have been high in the favour of the Archbishop of York, as there are few of his ecclesiastical proceedings in which he did not take a part. He was appointed to the office of Precentor in the church of York in 1439, which he held till 1447, when he resigned it for the rectory of Cottingham. In that year he was made Prebendary of Givendale, in the church of Ripon, which he held for barely eleven months. In 1450-1 he became Canon of South Newbald, in the Cathedral of York, which he held till his death in 1459. He was also Keeper of the Spiritualties, and Official of the Court at York.

† The testator, the hope of a princely house, was the eldest and only son of Ralph Neville second Earl of Westmerland, by his first wife Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Lord Percy (Hotspur), and widow of John Lord Clifford. In the civil wars, he adopted the cause of the House of Lancaster, and was slain at the battle of St. Alban's, in 1451. His wife was Anne, daughter of John Holland, Duke of Exeter, by whom he left no issue. After his death she re-married Sir John Neville, her first husband's uncle, who was killed at Towton, in 1461, ex parte regis. It is a somewhat singular fact, that the dispensation for the marriage of the Earl of Westmerland with Lady Clifford was not issued until the 28th of November, 1436. The contracting parties were related to each other in the third and fourth degrees of consanguinity. The marriage, therefore, must have taken place before this dispensation was granted; otherwise the testator could not have been more than fifteen years of age when he was killed. Lord Clifford died in the ninth of Henry V.

* John Crackenthorpe of Newbiggin in Westmerland, Esq., was the receiver to Lady Clifford of her revenues in Westmerland. His will is dated at York, on the 7th of November, 1462. In it he desires to be buried in the church of the Friars Preachers at York, near the grave of Anastasia his wife. He mentions John Crackenthorpe, his sons Edmund and Richard Crackenthorpe, and his daughter Alice. To John Crackenthorpe, of Holgill, Esq., he leaves his best covered cup of silver save one. To Joan wife of George Swale, his late wife's sister, he bequeathes a red bed. His deceased wife, Anastasia, was a Vavasour, of Weston, and Thomas Vavasour was one of his executors. Thomas and James Crackenthorpe, two of the testator's brothers, were killed at the disastrous battle of Towton, in 1461, fighting for the House of Lancaster.

† Probably a member of the family of Machel, of Crackenthorpe, near Appleby, in Westmerland, who was in the service of the family of Clifford.

‡ The testator, a scion in all probability of the great family of Mauleverer, was connected with one of its flourishing branches, which was settled at Letwell. In the year 1403 John Mauleverer (the father of the testator?) and Joan his wife obtain the manor of Cusworth from Richard Leeds. This manor was now in his possession, and descended to Alured, his son. Cusworth passed from the Mauleverers in the reign of Edward V.

§ Alured Mauleverer, the testator's son, to whom the manor of Cusworth descended, died in 1455. On the 5th of July in that year, the administration to the effects of Alured Malyverer, of Cusworth, was granted to Walter Calverley, of Calverley, Esq.

‖ The family of Davell, or D'Eyvile, was for a long time in possession of the manor of Warmesworth. On the 7th of November, 1466, Sir Edmund Mountford, rector of Warmesworth, administers to the effects of Edmund Davell of Warmesworth, gen. Mountford was presented to the rectory in 1432, by Thomas D'Eyville, the patron of the living; and he held it until his death, in 1471. There was a family of Davell, at Bilton, and another at Coxswold, in this century. From the latter descended the Davells, of Kirkby Fletham, in Richmondshire.

Willelmo de la River fratri duos boves et duas vaccas. Dominæ Margaretæ‡ sorori meæ vaccam. Ricardo § filiæ meo et uxori suæ duas ollas

* He was laid there about six months before the date of the present will. In 1459, James Kighley, a merchant of Calais, died, leaving Richard Wenslaw, Esq., his brother Sir Richard Kighley, Vicar of Mitford, in the diocese of Durham, and Alan Bird, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, his executors.

† Thomas De la River, of Brandesby, in Bulmershire, the head of an ancient Yorkshire family. Of its early history there has been but little ascertained: the following will however adds materially to the information which we possess. Elizabeth De la River, of Brandesby, the testator's grandmother, made her will on the 10th of February, 1404-5, in which she desires to be buried at Brandesby. To Marmaduke her son she leaves a silver cup with a cover. To Thomas her son she bequeaths another silver cup. She mentions Elizabeth, her son Marmaduke's wife, and Catherine his daughter, and she leaves to Sibil Cannsfeld a ring of gold, with a sapphire. The testator appears to have married a daughter of the house of Monkton, and he left by her several children. His son Richard did not long survive him, and I give some extracts from his will. John De la River, who seems to have been a younger son of the testator, carried on the family. By his will, dated "quarto nonas Aprilis, 1468," and proved in the month of August in the same year, he directs his body to be buried in the chancel of the church of Brandesby. He leaves to his son Brian the lands which William De la River, his (the testator's) uncle, holds for his life. He also mentions his wife Elizabeth, his children, and his son Robert, and he makes Thomas Witham his supervisor. Marmaduke De la River, his son, whose will is dated in 1484, heads the pedigree of the family in the visitation of 1584.

‡ Dame Margaret De la River, the testator's sister, was at this time a nun at Clementhorp, near York, and she afterwards became Prioress of that house.

§ Richard de la River, Esq., makes his will on the festival of the Assumption of the æreas, duo vasa plumbea, unam pelvim laton, optimam cistam meam, unum magnum fatt, et unum porr ferri. Elizabethæ Awnger unam equam cum pullo sugente, coloris badii. CXX. TESTAMENTUM DOMINÆ MARGARETÆ LA ZOUCH.

In Dei nomine, Amen. 6 Oct. 1449. Ego Margareta‡ nuper uxor domini mei Johannis la Zouche militis, in sana et integra memoria, cernens periculum mortis imminere, condo testamentum

Blessed Virgin, 1455. He desires to be buried in a certain chapel, situated within the parish church of Brandesby, which was newly built by Thomas De la River his father. He leaves to his most dear consort Alianor the share of his goods which reasonably belongs to her. To his brother John, a counter, a large pair of iron andirons, and all the implements which belong to him as heir-looms. To dame Margaret De la River, his aunt, a nun at Clementhorpe, 20*s*. He also desires that, after the payment of his debts, a priest may be found to pray for his soul, in the said chapel, during one year. He appoints as his executors his uncles John and Wm. De la River, and Sir Wm. Wyvill, parson of Dalby, Sir Alexander Neville, and Thomas Witham are his supervisors. [Pr. 29 Aug. seq.]

* Elizabeth, the widow of the testator, died in 1454. She was then residing with her sister-in-law in the nunnery of Clementhorp. Her will occurs shortly.

† Of the parish of Hinderwell, near Scarborough. His will is dated in 1464; and some notices of his family will be appended to it.

‡ Margaret, daughter and co-heir of John de Burgh, of Kirtlington, co. Notts, became the wife of Sir John De la Zouch, a younger son of William Lord Zouch, of Totness. By him she left an only child, Elizabeth De la Zouch, who married Sir Nicholas Bowett, of Ripingale, the father by her of two daughters and co-heirs, both of whom married into the family of Chaworth. After the death of her first husband, Lady De la Zouch became the second wife of Sir John Loudham, of Loudham, co. Notts, but she had no children by him. The codicil, which is appended to the will, contains the settlement of the estates of the testatrix.

* Sir Richard Bingham, a very eminent lawyer, was a Justice of the King's Bench. He was much concerned in all the legal proceedings in his native county. He married Margaret, relict of Sir Hugh Willoughby, of Wollaton, by whom he had many children.

† A younger son of Sir John Fitzwilliam, of Sprotborough, and the founder of the family of Fitzwilliam, of Adwick. He is said to have married Margery, daughter and co heir of John Tansley, of Tansley, co. Notts. In 1459 he had a license from the Archbishop of York to make an oratory in his house at Adwick. He must have died soon after this, as the same register contains a commission, dated on the 29th of August, in the following year, to veil Margery, widow of Nicholas Fitzwilliam. And on the 2nd of July, 1474, dame Margery Fitzwilliam, of Atwyk, widow, makes her will, which was proved at York on the 3rd of November, in the same year. She desires to be buried in the chancel of the church of St. Lawrence, at Adwick, before the image of St. Lawrence. For her mortuary, she leaves a horse of the value of 40*s*., with her saddle and bridle. She also gives the sum of 100 marks to be spent in services for her soul within the chapel of the Church of St. Lawrence, by William Gilliott, chaplain, at the discretion of John Fitzwilliam her son.

* Sir John Constable, of Halsham, in Holderness, the head of one of the most powerful branches of the great house of Constable, married Margaret, daughter and co-heir of Sir Thomas Umfreville. He had by her a son, Sir John, and three daughters; Agnes, who married —— St. Quintin, and afterwards Sir William Skipwith, Elizabeth the wife of Sir William St. Quintin, and Maud, who became the wife of John Routh, Esq. The will of Sir John Constable of Halsham, the father of the testator, occurs in the Testamenta Ebor. Part I. The present representative of this ancient house is Sir Clifford Constable, of Burton Constable, who, in addition to the immense estates and influence of his family, inherits some of the most gentle blood in Yorkshire.

† Sir John Constable, of Halsham, the son and heir of the testator, made his will nuncupatively on the 20th of December, 1472, which was proved 18th March, 1477. He orders his body to be buried in the church of Halsham, and two of his best horses to be given to the churches of Swine and Halsham for his mortuary. The residue of his goods he left to John, his son and heir, whom, together with Elen his wife, and John Dalkyn, he made his executors. At the making of the will he was "corporis ægritudine depressus." To the will is appended a long settlement, in English, which was written at Burton Constable May 20, 1469. It refers to lands in West Halsham, Dodington, Cornerynngton, Rihill, in Holdernes, and Mawneby and Thirnetoft, in Richmondshire. The feoffees are Richard Fitzhugh, son and heir to Henry Lord Fitzhugh, Robert Graistok, son and heir to Rawfe Lord of Graistok, Majori Melton, William Skipwith knyght, Robert Rither knyght, John Melton esquyer, William Sprotlay, parson of the kirke of Sprotlay, John Dalkyn and Robert Ingram, of Otrynngham In this document the names of Ralph, William, John, Jonet, Margaret, and Isabel, his children, are mentioned, and he directs that "Jonett, my doughter, CXXVI. TESTAMENTUM ROBERTI HOLME.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Die Ven. prox. post Fest. Assump. B. M. V. A.D. M.cccc.lij. Robertus Holme de Gyrston in Craven, videns eminens periculum pestilenciæ inter famulos et proles suos infra domum habitacionis suæ regnantis et duos proles ejusdem Roberti interficientis, ordinavit testamentum suum in hunc modum. —Legavit Abbati et Conventui de Fontibus xl s. petri de plumbo pro absolucione. [Prob. 3 Oct. 1452.]

* In all probability, the lady who is mentioned in this respectful manner was Eleanor Scrope, the testator's sister, and the widow of Richard Darcy, Esq. son and heir of Sir John Darcy of Hirst, Knight. Her husband had just died, leaving behind him an infant son and heir, William Darcy. She passed her widowhood in her father's house, but it was not of a long duration, as she remarried William Claxton, Esq. in 1460. Sir Harris Nicolas, in his invaluable publication the Scrope and Grosvenor Roll, adds Magistrix to the pedigree of Scrope of Upsal, as a lady's name, but in this he must certainly be mistaken.

* Thomas Wombwell of Wombwell, Esq. a gentleman of some rank and consequence, and the ancestor of a family which is still in possession of his estates. He was twice married. His first wife was (according to Mr. Hunter) Joan, a daughter of John Troutbeck. His second was Joan, daughter of Sir William Fitzwilliam. His widow did not long survive him, and her will occurs shortly. On the 12th of June, 1430, the Archbishop of York issues a licence for the marriage of Thomas Wombwell, Esq. and Joan Bosevyle. If this be the testator, some alterations in the pedigree of Wombwell are necessary.

† John Rockley, of Darfield, Esq. the head of the ancient family of Rockley of Rockley, made his will on the octaves of the feast of St. Agnes, 1451. He desires to be buried in the chapel of the Blessed Mary of Wyresburgh ; and he leaves to his three daughters 46*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* which John Waren owes him for the marriage of Robert his son. Robert Rockley of Wirsburgh, Esq. his father, by his will dated on the Sunday before Christmas day, 1448, directs his body to be buried in the church of Wirsburgh. He mentions his daughter Grace and his sons Roger and John. John Rockley married Isabel, daughter of Sir John Ashton.

[Prob. 10 Aug. 1453.]

* Sir Roger Warde of Givendale, near Ripon, Knight. He and his descendants were retainers under the Earls of Northumberland. His wife was a daughter of Sir Thomas Markenfield of Markenfield. I give below some extracts from her will. Roger Ward, the testator's eldest son, had a son, Sir Christopher Ward, who died on the 30th of December, 1521. He left behind him by his wife Margaret, daughter of Sir William Gascoigne of Gaukthorpe, one daughter and three granddaughters as his co-heirs. His daughter was Joan, wife of Sir Edward Musgrave of Hartley Castle, co. Westmerland, who was then of the age of 34 years. His three granddaughters were Catharine, Joan, and Clara, daughters and co-heirs of Ralph Neville, Esq. of Thornton Bridge, by his deceased daughter Anne Ward. Of these Catharine, then aged 22 years, was then the wife of Walter Strickland of Sizergh, Esq.; Joan, aged 21, was the wife of John Constable, Esq. of Burton Constable; and Clara, aged 14, was unmarried.

† Joan Lady Warde, the widow of Sir Roger Warde, senior, of Givendale, makes her will on the 14th of November, 1473, which was proved at York on the 20th of March, 1474-5. She describes herself as "in lecto egritudinis posita," and she desires to be buried within the Abbey of Esholt. To the fabric of the Collegiate Church of the Blessed Wilfrid at Ripon she gives 20*s.* To the Prioress and Convent of Esholt, to the profit of their establishment, she leaves 20*s.* and to the Nuns she bequeaths 10*s.* To the Abbey of Fountains 20*s.* To the fabric of the church of Kirkby-super-Moram 6*s.* 8*d.* To the fabric of the church of Knaresborough 6*s.* 8*d.* She then directs a jewel, called "an nowche," of gold, adorned with a precious stone, to be sold, and the money obtained for it to be given to a priest, who shall perform service for her soul, her husband's, and that of her brother Thomas Markenfield. To Christopher Warde, son of Sir Roger Warde, she gives a cup of silver with a cover called a "plane pece." For her funeral expenses she lays aside the sum of 10*l.*, and the residue of her estate she leaves to Nicholas and William Warde, her sons.

CXXXVI. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNÆ LITSTER DE RODERHAM.

In Dei nomine—Decimo die mens. Octobr. A.D. M.cccc.liij. Ego Johanna relicta Roberti Litster† de Roderham—scenciens his will at London in 1465, in which he directed his body to be buried in the church of the Friars Minors in that City, before the cross in the body of the church; if, however, he should die "in partibus vicinis patriæ" he desires to be buried in the church of the Blessed Mary at Beverley. To his daughter Margaret he gives 40 marks towards her marriage. To his son Roger Creyke he leaves lands in Beverley of the value of four marks per annum. He also mentions Thomas Creyke his son and heir and Isabella his wife.

* A family of rank and consequence, which had been seated at Stainbro', in the Deanery of Doncaster, from the reign of Henry III. It continued there until the latter part of the reign of Elizabeth, when the estate began to be gradually alienated by the Everinghams to the family of Cutler. Sir Gervase Cutler, a scion of this distinguished though short lived house, was one of the staunchest supporters of Charles I. He armed a large number of men at his own charge; he gave up the plate of his family, which was valued at 1,000*l.*, to feed the royal mint, and his estates during his lifetime and after his death were overburdened with fines and compositions. He died in Pontefract Castle in 1645. His will, which was made in 1638, when the testator was on his way to the wars in Scotland, and which was not proved till after the Restoration, is a peculiarly interesting one. It runs as follows:—

"March 23, 1638. I, Sir Gervase Cutler, of Stainburgh, Co. York, Knight, captaine and liefetenant collonell of this regiment here, beinge in my perfect good health, strengh, and memory, God be praysed, but beinge withall to goe to the warrs in Scotland, or to make defence against the Scotts, wherein yet God helpe, and then fiat Dei voluntas. To be buried in my St. James' quyre at Allhallowes churche in Silkestone. To honest Jo. Swinden 20*s.* for a memoriall ringe for me. To Tho. Denton my ayntient, true, and lo. servant for his sone Gervase use towards his education in learning at the University, if it may be, 100*l.*, and I do acquitt him of the 100*l.* for iron taken out of his keepinge at the iron workes. To every one of my servants halfe a yeare waige, but to him that goeth and serveth with my horse in the warrs for me 10*l.* To him that serveth in the warrs for me with my footearmes in the North 10*l.* I doe make my vertuous good wife my sole executrix, desiringe her care to my children, and I humbly beseeche God to blesse her and them all, and I hope Dominus providebit; and I desire my wife to use noe funerall pompe or cerimonie, but decent and Christian buryall for me onely, and noe tombe but a plaine stone with this word onely upon it, Christo Resurgam."

CXXXVII. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI GARVASII CLYFETON MILITIS.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Vicesimo sexto die mensis Novembris, Anno Domini Millesimo cccc. quinquagesimo tercio. Ego Garvasius Clyfeton* dominus de Hodesake, miles, compos mentis of the testatrix, by his will dated June 12, 1442, desires to be buried in the church of Rotherham. He mentions his wife Agnes, and John, son of Robert Dolphyn, his brother. To his son William he leaves "unam sicam argentatam et unum sicar' Anglice dagger." To his son Robert (his executor) "duas vasas plumbeas tunc Anglice wodfattes." Robert Litster of Rotheram, the husband of the testatrix, makes his will 23 August, 1450, which is proved at York on November 5 in the following year. He directs his body to be buried in the chancel of the Holy Cross. To John his son he leaves "ij wadfattes, optimum mortiferum et dociam zonam." To his son Thomas he bequeaths "mortiferum feriale, unum led quod stat extra domum ferialem." To his mother he gives five marks. To his uncle Robert Dolfyn (who died in 1466) 13*s.* 4*d.* He also mentions his wife Joan and his son Robert.

* The chief of a very ancient and illustrious family. He bears the favourite name of his house, Gervase, a name which was adopted from the Cliftons by many of the Nottinghamshire families. The testator was the lineal ancestor of Sir Gervase Clifton, one of the brightest stars of the Court of Elizabeth, whose courtesy won for him the title of "Gentle Sir Gervase." His grandson, another Sir Gervase, was the husband of seven wives, and we are indebted to Thoroton the antiquary, who was his family physician, for a very pleasing character of his friend and patron. "This Gervase," says the antiquary, "was certainly more gentle than his grandfather, being generally the most noted person of his time for courtesie. He was very prosperous and beloved of all. He generously, hospitably, and charitably entertained all, from the king to the poorest beggar. He was an extraordinary kind landlord and good master. His port and hospitality exceeded very many of the nobility, and his continuance in it most men, being almost fourscore years lord of this place, of a sound body and a chearful and facetious spirit, yet in his latter time timerous, so that his latter part was miracle enough to convert an atheist, to see his Christianity so far prevail over his nature that without the least shadow of fear, unwearied with pain, grief, or sickness, he left the choicest things of this world with as great pleasure as others enjoy them. He received from me the certain notice of his near approaching death as he was wont to do an invitation of good friends to his own bowling green, one of the most pleasant imaginable, and thereupon immediately called for his old chaplain, Mr. Robert Thirleby, to do the office of his confessor, as if it had been to attend him to that recreation he often used and loved, and when he had done with him, for his children, whom, patriarch like, he particularly blessed and admonished with the smartness and ingenuity of an excellent and well studyed orator." Sir Gervase died on the 28th of June, 1666, and was buried with all the pomp of heraldry in the choir of Southwell Minster. In his will, dated on the 2nd of October, 1662, he had directed himself to be buried in the vault near the chancel at Clifton. To his wife Lady Alice he left his coach and horses, his gold watch, and his house in St. Gyles near London, in Little Queen Street. To his son Sir Clifford Clifton he left his "gold broche haveing an aggott on one side and mother-of-pearle wrought and engraven, and my gold ring with a turcas stone in it, which was given me by my grandfather. To the right hon^ble the Marquesse of Dorchester my pretious stone, bequeathed to me by my deare and honored kinsman his father the Earl of Kingston."

* Catherine, daughter of Sir John, and sister and co-heir of Sir Hugh Cressy of Hodsock. Her first husband was Sir John Clifton, the father of the testator, who was slain at Shrewsbury. After his death she remarried Ralph Makerel. The parish church of Clifton is rich in monuments of the Cliftons, but the early memorials of that family are no longer to be found among the remains of the Abbey Church of Blyth.

† Isabella daughter of Sir Robert Francis, Knight, died on the 13th of June, 1457, and was buried in the church of Clifton.

* Thomas Wytham, the fortunate devisee of the diurnal of the testator, lived at Cornburgh, near Sherifhhutton, an estate which he became possessed of in right of his wife, the heiress of the family of Thweng. He was high in the favour of the Earl of Warwick, who seems to to have placed the greatest confidence in him, and his name not unfrequently occurs in the wills of the neighbouring gentry. He built a chapel in Sherifhhutton Church, in which he was interred "sub lapide marmoreo per me diu posito," which is still remaining. His will occurs hereafter, and some more particulars respecting him will then be given.

* The head of one of the sister houses of the knightly family of Stapleton. He was the eldest son of Sir Miles Stapleton of Wighill, in right of his wife, a co-heir of Sir Gerard Usflete. Sir John married a daughter of Mr. Justice Norton of Norton Conyers, by whom he had a large family. She survived him, and her will occurs hereafter. After her husband's death she took the veil. The Archbishop's commission to receive her is dated on the 9th of June, 1455. These two wills make considerable additions to the received pedigree of the Stapletons. By a licence dated 7th February, 1446-7, the Archbishop of York grants an oratory to John Stapleton, Esq. and Margaret his wife.

† The Priory of Helagh Park in the Ainsty is in the immediate vicinity of Wighill. Several of the Stapletons were buried there, and the family took great interest in the establishment.

She left issue by him, and was buried in the high choir of the church of Kirkdighton, on the north side near the wall, under the image of St. George. Her husband took to himself a second wife, and died in 1505, leaving a large family behind him.

† Afterwards Sir William Stapleton of Wighill, knight. He was twice married. His first wife was Margaret, daughter of Sir James Pickering. After her death he re-married Joan, widow of Sir Roger Warde of Givendale. The Archbishop allows William Stapleton of Wighill, Esq. and Margaret his wife, to have an oratory, by his licence dated 27th January, 1458-9. Sir William died in the month of December, 1503. His will is recorded in the registry at York.

‡ A cup made of the egg of the gripe. It was probably merely the egg of an ostrich, which was set in silver; but it was referred by our ancestors to the griffon. This piece was an heirloom in the family of Stapleton, and it is entailed as such in the wills of several generations. In 1538 Christopher Stapleton of Wighill, Esq. leaves to Robert his son and heir "a cuppe covered of the facyone of an nutte called grypeege." Cf. Prompt. Parv. ed. Way, pp. 212, 213.

CLI. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS DOMINI LE SCROPE.

Ego Johannes vulgariter nuncupatus dominus le Scrop,‡ senex ætate, debilis corpore, sanus tamen mente, et firmiter

* Sir John Melton, of Aston, a collateral descendant of William de Melton, Archbishop of York. The Meltons were in possession of Aston for many generations, and the magnificent alliances which some of them contracted are a sufficient proof of the high consideration of the family. Dorothy, the sole heiress of Melton, who came into the world in the same year that Henry VIII. came to the throne, married George Lord Darcy, and carried the large estates of her house into that illustrious family. The testator was born in the first year of the reign of Richard II. He married Margaret, daughter of Roger Lord Clifford, by whom he had two sons. Appended to this will is a settlement of his estates in the vills and territories of Aston, Aghton, Hardwik, Ulley Walis, and Walis Wood. The trustees are, Thomas Everingham, Esq., Thomas Barry, rector of Aston, Thomas Fox, and Anthony Melton, the testator's son.

† John Melton the younger, Esq., was 40 years of age at his father's death. In the same year he was sheriff of Yorkshire. He married Elizabeth, one of the coheirs of Sir Robert Hylton, of Swine.

‡ The testator, Sir John Scrope, fourth Lord Scrope of Masham and Upsal, was the fourth son of Stephen second Lord Scrope of Masham, by Margery, daughter of John Lord Welles. The commanding position which the house of Scrope occupied in sperans quod paucitas dierum meorum finietur brevi, condo testamentum meum in hunc modum. In primis, lego animam meam misericordiæ Dei Omnipotentis, Beatissimæ Mariæ matri suæ, Omnibus Sanctis et Angelis ejus, corpusque meum ad sepeliendum in sepulcro meo per me de novo facto, pro me et Elizabetha uxore mea, in boriali parte in capella Sancti Stephani, vulgariter vocata Scrop Chapell,* infra ecclesiam Cathedralem

the North was of itself sufficient to win for the testator a high place among the officers of the State, and he appears, also, to have inherited all that energy and decision of character, as well as those administrative talents, which had long been the goodly heritage of his princely family. He was sworn a member of the Privy Council, February 28, 1424; and was summoned to Parliament from 7th January, 1426, until the 26th of May, 1455. In July, 1428, he was appointed ambassador to the King of Spain and the King of the Romans; and, in the following year, he went to Scotland on a similar mission. He was engaged in many other embassies, on different occasions. On 26th February, 1432, he was appointed Treasurer of England, a post which had been occupied by many of his ancestors and kinsmen. This office he held for two years. Lord Scrope died on the 15th of November, 1455, and was buried, as he desired, in the chapel of his family, in the minster at York. A small portion of this will has been given by Dugdale, in his Baronage, and has been reprinted by Sir Harris Nicolas, in his illustrations of that most interesting document, the Scrope and Grosvenor Roll. The wills of several of the Scropes have been printed in the Test. Ebor. Vol. I., and I am glad to have it in my power to add to the memorials of that lordly house. The document before us was evidently drawn up with the greatest care, under the directions of the testator himself, and it will be read with considerable interest. Lord Scrope, according to Sir Harris Nicolas, was twice married. His first consort is said to have been Elizabeth, a daughter of Ralph Lord Greystock. She died without issue. His (second) wife, and the mother of his children, was the daughter of the head of a great Nottinghamshire house, Sir Thomas Chaworth, of Wiverton. She survived her lord some eleven years, and died in 1466. After her husband's death, she retired from the world and took the veil. The commission to receive her was addressed by the Archbishop of York to his suffragan, John Bishop of Philippolis, on the 18th of December, 1455. The register in which this document is recorded contains, also, a copy of the oath which was to be administered to the illustrious "vowess." It runs as follows: "In the name of God, Amen. I, Elizabeth Scrop, late wife to my worshipfull Lord, John newly Lord Scrop and of Masham, avow to be chaste fro this tyme forward, and I bihote to lefe stably in yis avow duryng my life. And in wittenes hereof, I with myne owne hand make this subscripcion +."

* The Scrope Chapel was at the east end of the north aisle of the choir in York Cathedral. Leland gives us several memorials of the Scropes, which he observed in this chapel. These, in his time, were in a most dilapidated condition, and they have now disappeared altogether. The monument of Richard Scrope, the martyred Archbishop, is the only record which the minster contains of a family to which it was so much indebted. The Scropes seem to have stood in the same position with respect to York, as the Nevilles did to Durham. The Nevilles, however, were not always on good terms with the Monastery of St. Cuthbert. The following singular letter will throw some light upon the connection which existed between the church of York and the family of Scrope. It appears from it, that in an affray which had taken place in the Minster at York, one Richard Hemingburgh, a cousin of the Prior of Durham, had been maltreated and wounded by Richard Lord Scrope of Bolton and his men. For this act of violence Lord Scrope conferred upon the sufferer an annuity of 40*s.*, and the letter which I subjoin was written by the Prior of Durham, to his Bishop, upon the subject. It is without a date, but it was probably written in 1423.

"Litera missa domino Episcopo pro Ricardo Hemyngburgh.

"Reverendissime pater et domine, humillima recommendacione premissa, omni subjectione et obedientia filiali. Pro vestris magnificis solatiis et benevolenciis pater-

* Eleanor Scrope, the daughter of the testator, was twice married. Her first husband was Richard son and heir apparent of Sir John Darcy, who died in the lifetime of his father. From this marriage descended the barons Darcy and Conyers. Her second husband was William Claxton, of East Bridgeford, co. Notts, who died in 1496. Some account of her is appended to the will of her brother John le Scrope, who calls her "Magistrix, soror mea."

And my codicell uppon

* It did "happen" the testator, to "make marriage" with Thomas (his son) "and the Baron doghter of Graystok." The nuptials were celebrated almost immediately after this codicil was made, and the result was, a family of four sons and three daughters. The sons, Thomas, Henry, Ralph, and Geoffrey, were each of them, in succession, Barons Scrope of Masham. The eldest son alone left issue a daughter, who by her marriage with her cousin Henry Scrope again united the houses of Masham and Bolton. The "Baron's doghter" survived her husband, and became the wife of Sir Gilbert Talbot of Grafton, co. Worc. Knt., by whom also she had issue.

And to performe yis my last will I make, name, and ordeyne myne executours Elizabeth my wife, Maistre William Scrop, my broder, Sir John Bernyngham, Tresorer of Yorke

* It would appear from this, that the Parliament robe of a peer became, upon his death, the perquisite of his servants, and that if his family wished to retain it, money was to be paid for its redemption.

† This little boy did not long remain unmarried. There is a licence at York, dated on the 23rd of January, 1460-1, authorising the marriage of William Darcy, son of Richard Darcy, the late son and heir of the Lord Darcy, with Eufemia, daughter of John Langton of Farneley, Esq. The marriage was to be celebrated in the chapel of Farneley. Young Darcy, at this time, was but eleven years of age. His mother had but a few months before taken to herself a second husband. When he grew up to man's estate, he recovered the honours and most of the lands of his family, which were his by inheritance, and which had been wrongfully detained from him by Lord Conyers and Sir James Strangeways, who had married the coheirs of his uncle, Philip Lord Darcy and Meinell.

CLII. TESTAMENTUM MARGARETÆ DAUNAY VIDUÆ NUPER DE WALMEGATE EBOR.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Duodecimo die mensis Maii, Anno Domini M.cccc.liiij. Ego Margareta Daunay† vidua—corpus sepeliendum ubi Deus disposuerit. Lego summo altari de Snayth‡

* The above are chiefly domestics. In some instances the precise nature of their occupation is stated, as nurysse, chambre, or chamberlain, &c.

† Margaret, daughter of Sir Alexander Lound, and widow of Sir John Dawney of Escrick, who died in 1424. Her family, which acquired additional wealth and consequence by the marriage of the grandson of the testatrix with the wealthy heiress of Darell of Sessay, is at present represented by Viscount Downe.

‡ The parish church of Snaith is an extremely interesting one in its architecture, as well as its associations. It was originally appropriated to the Monastery of Selby, and within the altar-rails there is laid the grave-stone of one of the Abbats of that wealthy establishment. The stone is of magnificent proportions, but it is unfortunately despoiled of the brass with which it was once adorned. The Dawney Chapel is an addition to the south aisle of the church, and it contains some memorials of the family which erected it. In addition to the fine altar-tomb of Sir John Dawney, who died in 1493, there are in the windows of the chapel the arms of his grandson, another Sir John, impaling the bearing of his wife Dorothy, daughter of Richard Neville, Lord Latimer. There is also to be seen a surcoat painted with the arms of Newton of Snaith, Darell of Sessay, and Percy of Kildale, quarterly, with a crest of wood, gloves, and spurs suspended to the wall. The arms of Dawney, cut in stone, appear above each of the pillars in the nave. On the tower is a shield charged with three swans. The church contains many other interesting monuments, including a very fine one by Chantrey, to the memory of John-Christopher Viscount Downe. There are also several early slabs, from which the brasses have been torn away. On the north side of the church, opposite to the chapel of the Dawneys, is another chapel, which is appropriated to the illustrious family of Stapleton of Carlton. There, among the ashes of his ancestors, rest the remains of Thomas Stapleton, F.S.A. a gentle scion of a noble house, and an antiquary of whom Yorkshire may well be proud.

* Sir John Dawney married Agnes daughter of Guy Rocliffe of Rocliffe, by whom he had Sir Guy Dawney of Cowick, the husband of the heiress of the Darells of Sessay. Sir John died on the 20th of October, 1493, and was buried in the Dawney Chapel, in the south aisle of Snaith Church, where a fine altar-tomb, which still remains, was erected to his memory. This tomb is adorned with shields of arms, among which that of Dawney impaling Rocliffe is still conspicuous in its original colours.

* Thomas Arden of Marton, near Bridlington, Esq., married Margaret daughter of Nicholas Gascoigne of Lasingcroft, by whom he had several children. His widow made her will on June 15, 1458, in which she desired to be buried at Bridlington, near her husband. To Anthony, her dearly beloved son, she left a gold ring with a diamond. To Nicholas, her son, all the arrears of her rents. To her daughter Elizabeth she bequeathed 40 marks and two gilt zones, one white and the other red. To her daughter Cecily 20*l.* and two gilt zones, one blood colour and the other black, and she desires that her said daughter may be advised and governed by Lady Anne Constable or Lady Isabel Greystock. To her daughter Margaret 20 marks. To her daughter Joan, a nun (monacæ), 40*s.* She leaves the residue of her property to her daughter Elizabeth, and she appoints as one of her executors Robert Constable of Flamburgh. CLIV. TESTAMENTUM DOMINI RADULPHI DOMINI DE CROMWELL.

In nomine Sanctissimæ et Individuæ Trinitatis, et Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, gloriosissimæ Dei Genetricis semper Virginis Mariæ, ac Beatissimorum Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, Michaelis Archangeli ac Sanctorum Fabiani et Sebastiani et tocius celestis curiæ, Amen. Lacrimosæ semper mutabilis humanæ vitæ condicio in hac valle miseriæ statum firmum et permanentem non agnoscit, sed in perpetuo motu consistens occulto quodam et considerato cursu dierum ad finem naturaliter preordinatum continue labitur, non revertens; et qui visibilem pretendunt essenciam invisibiliter tendunt ad non esse, testante propheta, "quia homo vanitati filius factus, ut flos egrediens, cito conteritur, et velud umbra pertransiunt dies ejus." Premissa perpendens, Ego Radulphus dominus Cromwell,* miles, et ad recentem

* Ralph, last Lord Cromwell of Tateshall, in Lincolnshire, an illustrious statesman and a distinguished man. He was sixteen years of age at his grandmother's death, in the 7th of Henry V. He was then found to be her heir, his father Ralph Cromwell having died previously. In 1434 Lord Cromwell was appointed to the responsible post of Lord High Treasurer of England: this office he held for ten years. In 1437 he became Master of the King's Mews and Falcons, and, in the same year, he was retained by the king to serve for the relief of the siege of Calais. So great and so numerous were his services to the State that, in addition to the annuity of 40*l.* which had previously been granted to him out of the Manor of Washingbro' in Lincolnshire, the king, in 1446, made a grant to him and his heirs of the office of Constable of Nottingham Castle and Steward, as well as of the Wardenship of the Forest of Sherwood with the parks of Beskwood and Clipston, to be held by fealty alone. After a long life spent in the highest honours of the State and in the possession of a princely fortune, of which he made a princely use, Lord Cromwell died on the 4th of January, 1454-5, and was buried, according to his wish, in the collegiate church of Tateshall, which he had himself erected. The brasses which were placed above him and his lady are still preserved, but the noble temple which he raised has been miserably desecrated. Lord Cromwell married Elizabeth daughter of John Lord Deincourt by the heiress of the Greys of Rotherfield, and co-heir of her brother William Lord Deincourt. She died before her lord on the 15th of September, 1454, and was buried in the church of Tateshall. As there was no issue from this match, the estates and representation of the family of Cromwell passed away to the three co-heirs of Sir memoriam reducens et intra se mentis egritudo assistens, de bonis Divina clementissima bonitate michi collatis ad Ipsius laudem et dispensacionis meæ meritoriam racionem reddendum disponere et ordinare, ac meæ mortis indubiæ horam incertam testamentaria faccione prevenire decrevi, et de eis ordino et dispono in eum qui sequitur modum. Inprimis, si quidem in puritate et sinceritate fidei Catholicæ existens, Omnipotenti Deo et Domino nostro Jhesu Christo, per quem accessum habemus ad Deum, animam meam quam suo precioso cruore redemit lego, et eciam sibi humiliori et intenciori devocione qua possum omnimodis desideriis commendo; et corpus meum sepeliendum in medio chori ecclesiæ Collegiatæ de Tatteshall,* quousque dicta ecclesia Collegiata de Tatteshall de novo sit edificata et constructa; et tunc, postea meum corpus sit remotum et in medio chori ecclesiæ, de novo construendæ sit, sepeliendum; ita quod impedimentum in aliquo non fiat eundo et redeundo ministrantibus circa divina officia in choro predicto. Item volo et ordino primo et principaliter persoluta absque dilacione quibuscumque omnia debita mea cognita et probabilia, et ulterius cum debitis meis volo et ordino omnimodam restitucionem et reformacionem fieri ex omnibus injuriis seu gravaminibus quibuscumque scientur per me aut meos nomine meo sive proficuo meo in aliquo perpetratis. Proviso tamen, quod non propter inoportunitatem alicujus gravidam seu avidius insequentis acclamantis nulli fiat restitucio nisi ubi per venerabiles et credibiles personas injuriæ seu gravamina, ut predicitur, clare et veraciter probari possunt. Item lego custodi sive gardiano Collegii de Tatteshall predicti pro decimis meis oblitis quadraginta libras ad usum Collegii predicti distribuendas. Item lego cuilibet domui Fratrum quatuor ordinum infra villas de Lincoln et Boston decem marcas monetæ Angliæ. Summo altari ecclesiæ Cathedralis Beatæ Mariæ Lincoln. duas pelves argenteas et deauratas ibidem semper serviend'.

Richard Stanhope of Rampton, the husband of Maud, the only sister of the testator. Some account of them is appended to the will of Joan Lady Cromwell, No. XXXII.

* The church of Tateshall found a constant and zealous patron in Lord Cromwell, and it was raised by his piety and munificence to a state of splendour and magnificence which has deserved a better fate. In 1440 he obtained a licence from the king to make it collegiate. It was to contain seven priests, six secular clerks, and six choristers; and at the same time he obtained permission to found an hospital near the churchyard for thirteen poor people. This church was rebuilt at the testator's expense, and must have been a magnificent structure. The tombs of the Cromwells, which still remain, are very fine, and the windows blazed with the armorial insignia of that illustrious family and its connections. A sad tale of plunder must now be told: the greater part of this beautiful glass was removed from the windows by a Lord Fortescue, the lord of the manor, and was sent to St. Martin's Church, in Stamford Baron, as a present to the Earl of Exeter, who generously undertook to supply its place with plain glass! In the Topographer, vol. I. p. 326, there is an interesting description of the church and castle of Tateshall.

Abbathiæ de Loco Christi quadraginta libras monetæ Angliæ pro edificacione Abbathiæ predictæ. Predictæ Abbathiæ de Loco Christi unum vestimentum panni aurei rubei coloris cum tribus capis, opera ejusdem cum cervis albis. Ecclesiæ Prioratus de Markeby unum vestimentum panni aurei rubei coloris cum tribus capis et opera ejusdem sunt cum volucribus parvis. Abbathiæ de Welbek unum vestimentum viride et blodii coloris, opera sunt cum parvis volucribus. Prioratui de Kirkeby Villers in Comitatu Leicestrensi unum vestimentum de vellwet figulæ blodii et viridis coloris cum una capa et cum rubeis offris. Prioratui de Beauvale ordinis Cartusiensis in Comitatu Notynghamiæ unum vestimentum albi coloris precii quadraginta librarum monetæ Angliæ. Item volo quod die sepulturæ meæ celebrentur pro anima mea in ecclesia Monasterii de Loco Christi predicti tres missæ cum nota, et fiat cum nota in ecclesia Collegiata de Tatteshall, una videlicet de Trinitate, alia de Sancta Maria, et tercia de Requiem; et eodem die sepulturæ meæ disponatur per executores meos pro solempnitate circa corpus meum secundum eorum discreciones et ordinaciones, prout eis melius videbitur ordinare; ita quod non sit nimia vanitas in gubernacione ejusdem. Item volo cum omni festinacione immediate post mortem meam celebrentur pro anima mea tria millia missarum in Comitatibus Lincoln, Notinghame et Derby, quarum volo quod mille sint de Trinitate, mille de Sancta Maria, et mille de Requiem. Hujusmodi autem testamenti mei facio et constituo executores meos reverendum in Christo patrem Willelmum Episcopum Wintoniensem, Johannem Fortescu militem, Capitalem Justiciarium de Banco Regis, Johannem Portyngton unum Justiciariorum de Communi Banco, Thomam Tirell militem, Robertum Beaumont clericum, Willelmum Gulle clericum, Johannem Tailboys seniorem armigerum, Willelmum Venor, Johannem Saucheverell armigerum, Willelmum Stanlow et Johannem Leynton. Item facio et ordino reverendissimum in Christo patrem Johannem Archiepiscopum Eboracensem et Cardinalem, supervisorem hujusmodi testamenti mei.—Volo eciam quod statim post mortem meam infra tres menses, si possibile sit, omnia bona mea et catalla tam infra regnum Angliæ quam alibi in uno loco tuto et securo ponantur et custodiantur.—Et volo quod predictus Episcopus Winton. habeat unum ciphum auri precii quadraginta marcarum; Johannes Fortescu miles, Johannes Portyngton justiciarius, Thomas Tirell miles, Robertus Beaumont clericus, Johannes Tailbois senior et Willelmus Venour habeant, quilibet, unum ciphum argenti et deaurati precii viginti librarum monetæ Angliæ; Johannes Saucheverell armiger, Willelmus Stanlow et Johannes Leynton habeant, quilibet, unum ciphum argenti precii decem librarum. Item volo quod predictus Cardinalis habeat pro supervisione testamenti mei predicti unum ciphum auri precii quadraginta marcarum. Item lego omnia alia ornamenta capellæ meæ superius non legata predicto Collegio de Tatteshall, excepta talia (sic) ornamenta quæ in quodam codicello voluntatis meæ ultimæ sigillo meo sigillato sunt ibidem ordinata et disposita. Residuum—in dicto codicello non distributum, illud expendi volo in reparacionibus pontium et viarum in Comitatibus Lincoln, Notingham et Derbiæ magis usitatorum et ruinosorum ac relevamine magis indigencium, liberacione sive redempcione mercatorum in dictis Comitatibus, — necnon in relevamen pauperum tenencium meorum. Datum apud Colyweston* 18 Dec. 1451.

Codicillus.—In Festo Sancti Michaelis Archangeli 1454.—Volo et ordino quod ecclesia Collegiata de Tatteshall et omnes mansiones et domus ejusdem Collegii necessariæ, cum clausuris ejusdem necessariis et convenientibus, de novo sint edificatæ et sufficienter ac decenter constructæ de bonis meis.—Et volo et ordino quod ecclesia parochialis de Lamley† cum cancello ejusdem

* A favourite residence of the testator. Lord Cromwell, who was a great builder, began to erect a stately mansion at Coly-Weston, which was afterwards completed by Margaret Countess of Richmond, the mother of Henry VII. It, as well as all the buildings which he erected, was adorned with "divers baggs or purses cutt on the stone-work of the chapel and other places." This was an allusion to his office of Lord High Treasurer. I subjoin a letter which was written from this place by Lord Cromwell to the Prior of Durham respecting an exchange of some ecclesiastical preferment:—

"Right worshipfull Sir and myn entierly betrusted frend, I recomaunde me to you. And in asmuch as Lambton and also Rodes have labored unto you as for yeschaunge of ye patronage of ye church of Kyrkeby upon Bayne in Lincolnshyre, though ye which messagez and wryttyngis at diverse tymez yf well conceyved, y^t, if so were, y myght accorde yerof w^t your brother Pryor of Seynt Leonardis in Staunford ye were well assented and agreed yerto, accordynge to ye which messagez y have comoned w^t your said broyere, ye Pryour of Seynt Leonards; and foyermore have shewed onto hym certayn lande to ye valewe of vj marc yerely, liggynge nere his lyflode in Leycestr' shyre which y^t he shall have of me in eschaunge of ye patronage of ye said church w^t ye xl s. of pencion, in so moch yat he and y bey upon ye poynt of a full agrement w^t yat, yat he may have ye good will and assente of you and of your house; wherfore y pray you, if so be y^t ye kan yink y^r self agreable herto, y^t ye will, in all ye goodly haste ye kan, sende yor wryttyng agayn of yor entent, and what ye wold yink y shulde do yerin, or ellez let hit be lefte of. † Lamley, in Nottinghamshire, had been in the possession of the Cromwells for many generations. The mother of the testator, who died in 1434, was interred in that church. The estate after Lord Cromwell's decease passed away to the family of Clifton.

* The testator was probably connected with the Gartons of Garton in Holderness. On the 5th of August, 1468, Thomas Garton of Garton, Esq. makes his will, in which he desires to be buried in the church of St. Michael the Archangel, at Garton. He mentions his brother, William Garton. Agnes, sister and co-heir of William Garton, married into the family of Gower, who thus became possessed of the manor.

† The family of Hercy of Grove was equalled in antiquity and distinction by few of the great Nottinghamshire houses. The testator married Elizabeth, one of the daughters and co-heirs of Simon Leeke, of Cotham, Esq. by whom he had issue. The will of Sir Thomas Hercy, the father of the testator, has been printed in the first volume of the York Wills. His widow Catherine is said by Thoroton to have remarried Sir John Constable of Flambrough. He calls her a daughter of Sir Thomas

CLXI. TESTAMENTUM MAGISTRI JOHANNIS BARNYNGHAM NUPER THESAURARII ECCLESIÆ CATHEDRALIS EBOR.

In Dei nomine, Amen. 29 March, 1457. Ego Johannes Barnyngham,† thesaurarius ecclesiæ Cathedralis Eboracensis, com-

* Son of Sir William Fulthorp of Tunstall, in the Bishopric of Durham, by Isabella, daughter of Ralph Lord Lumley. On the 8th of November, 1439, he was appointed one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas. This office he held till his death.

† The aged treasurer of York, a man of no ordinary ability and energy of character. On the 25th of October, 1426, soon after the accession of his patron Archbishop Kempe to the see of York, John Berningham was appointed to the prebendal stall of Wetwang. He succeeded Robert Wolveden in the office of treasurer on the 17th of September, 1432. On the 26th of March, 1435, he was chosen a canon of Beverley in the place of John Wodham, and on the 8th of February, 1449-50, he became rector of the rich living of Bolton Percy. The last office to which he was preferred was the Provostship of the College of St. John of Beverley, which was vacated by the death of Robert Rolleston, whose will has previously occurred. He received his appointment on the 14th of January, 1450-1. In addition to these offices Berningham held many other benefices. Berningham was now growing old, and the remainder of his days seems to have been spent in comparative retirement. His will, which is drawn up with the greatest care, is evidently the result of many an hour of thought and deliberation, and it is a fitting termination to the career of its pious and energetic writer. He died shortly after the making of his will, and was buried, as he desired, among his brother treasurers in the Minster at York. His executors were not released from their duty till the 22nd of August, 1459. The testator left a legacy of 50*l.* to the fabric of the cathedral, and the south-west tower, in which the bells are hung, probably owes its erection in a considerable degree to his munificent bequest. His name is inscribed pos mentis et sanus corpore, cernens occulata fide varios eventus qui indies accidunt humanæ miseriæ, advertensque senectutem meam grandem ac alia multa signa mortis vitæ meæ imminencia, et nolens decedere intestatus, set volens de bonis michi a Deo collatis ad exoneracionem conscienciæ pro salute animæ meæ disponere, facio, ordino et condo testamentum meum, ultimam meam voluntatem continens, in hunc modum. * Sir Alexander Neville of Thornton Bridge, son of Sir Ralph Neville of Cundal, in Richmondshire, and grandson of Ralph Lord Neville of Raby. This branch of the great family of Neville, about which there is but little known, did not flourish long. It ended in the early part of the reign of Henry VIII. in three co-heirs. The testator appears to have kept up some state in his household, but the declaration of his executors does not impress us with any high notion of his providence. His widow, the Lady Catherine Neville, whose maiden name has not yet been ascertained, did not long survive her husband. On the 31st of August, 1459, Richard Percy, son of the Earl of Northumberland, administers to her effects.

Linc. cum toto harnasio eidem

* This lady was a sister of Thomas Crosse, and in her earlier years was connected with the establishment of the last Lady de Mauley. She became the last of the many wives of Sir John Portington of Portington, one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas. No other will of any member of this family has as yet occurred. The present document makes many alterations in the pedigree which is given by Thoresby. After Sir John Portington's death the testatrix took the veil. The Archbishop of York sanctions her resolution by his licence, dated 20th July, 1454.

† Sir John Portington was an eminent lawyer. He is stated in his will to have been a Justice of the King's Bench. He appears however in the printed list as a Justice in the Court of Common Pleas. Sir John was intimately connected with the Prior and Convent of Durham, who were eager to avail themselves of his patronage and legal knowledge. He held several offices under them in Howdenshire, and the treasury at Durham contains his correspondence with the officers of that church.

‡ Thomas Portington, M.A. received the licence of the Archbishop of York to take orders Feb. 11, 1453-4. He did not remain long without preferment, for which he was probably indebted to the patronage of Sir John Portington. On the 7th of March, 1457-8, we find him resigning the rectory of Bliburgh, in Lincolnshire, and the chaplaincy of the free chapel of "Sheryng," near London, for the provostship of the College of Hemmingbro'. On the 29th of July, 1470, he was made Canon of Apesthorpe in the Church of York, and in 1477 he became treasurer of that church. He died in 1485.

§ Robert Portington, Esq. of Barnby Don, in right of his wife Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Robert Paslew. He was a warm partizan of the house of York, and was killed in his own house at Barnby in an attack which was made upon it by the officers of the county, who had been commissioned to arrest him after the battle of Stoke. His widow Margaret Portington, a second wife, strove in vain to obtain redress. Mr. Hunter gives an interesting account of this incident, which the reader will find detailed in the History of South Yorkshire, i. 202.

Item I will that my moder dame Jane of Boynton† have the reule and gubernaunce of all my landes, tenements—in the Counte of Yorkshire and in the Cite of York, duryng hire lyve, for the sustentacion and mareyng of my childre. Item I wite for my sone Cristofere‡ that he have the principalles of my gudes as the custome of the countree is, and no more of my gudes. Item I will that the money of the mareage silver of my sone Cristofor unepaide at my deth I will at it be yeffin to my moder and othere of my executours to be keped to ye mareage of my doghtter Elizabeth.§

* Richard Barton of Whenby, Esq. the head of a respectable Yorkshire family, which records its pedigree in the Visitation of 1585. His wife was Isabel, a daughter of Sir John Norton of Norton Conyers, by whom he had several children, one or two of whom are new to the genealogist. The testator desires to be buried at Kirkby Fletham, in Richmondshire, in which parish he was probably residing.

† The mother of the testator, and a daughter of James Strangeways of Skelton. After the death of her first husband, Conan Barton of Whenby, she remarried Christopher Boynton of Sedbury, Esq. the junior justice for the palatinate of Durham during the episcopate of Bishop Neville. By each of these husbands she had issue. She survived her second husband and spent the latter part of her life in retirement at Yarm, where she makes her will in 1486. She desires to be buried in the choir of the church of the Friars in that town.

‡ Christopher Barton of Whenby, Esq. the testator's eldest son, married Margaret, a daughter of Robert Danby of Farneley, Esq. By his will, dated on the Feast of the Decollation of St. John the Baptist, 19 Edw. IV. he desires, "to be beryd in the church of Quenby if it fortone me ther to decesse. To the hallowyng of the said chirch 40*s*. To my wife during the nonage of John Barton, my son and heire, the yssues of Qwenby and the profetts of an house called Temple House in Qwenby whiche I have of my brothir James Danby, the annual rent of 26*s*. 8*d*. which I have of certane lands of my granndame, Dame Jane of Boynton, in Grynston.—An indentor of mariage made betwix Sir John Pykering, knyght, and me of the mariage of his doghter and my son.—My feffes to make a state to Robert, Thomas, and Christopher Barton my sonnys in lands of the yerely valowe of x li. The residew to my doghters. —My wiffe to se my yonger childre be honestly keped and put to lernyng. My wyffe, John Norton, knyght, Thomas Witham, James Danby, Christofer Boynton, and Thomas Gower, esquiers, my brother Richard Danby, and Thomas Danby, executors." [Pr. 17 April 1480, and adm. granted to Margaret his widow.] In the Visitation three other children are assigned to this Christopher, Richard, Philip, and Anne.

§ According to the Visitation she became the wife of William Denham.

I will and yeffe all my other gudes, whike and dede, movable and on movable, to ye sustentacion and houlpyn of myn other childre, yat is to say, my doghter Elizabeth, John, and Thomas. Item I will that myn executours fynde Agnes my doghtter gettyn on playng with parte of my gudis to she come to the age of xiiij. yere, and yf she be not mared be myn executours with in xiiij. yere of age, than I will myn executours yeffe hire x. marcs to hire mareage, and so be my gudes will suffice yare to. Item I wille that my doghtter Elizabeth have the gudes that longed to hire moder.* Item I gyff to my moder dame Jane of Boynton iiij. marcs, and so be she will take administracion. Item I gyve to my broder John of Norton xxvj s. viij d., and so be he will take administracion—I gife to my broder Conand Barton† a blew gowne furred with bever and the horse whilke was his aune, and so be he will take administracion—I gyffe to Jonett Richardson ij. key, j. mare and a fole, x. shepe, ij. litill bestes, iij. qu. of whete. iij. qu. of rye, iiij. qu. of malte, a coveryng of a bede of blew, and I gife her terme of hire lyfe, tenement in Whenby w^t^ a garth and a croft next vicarage. To John of Holme a lytill grecelled nage. I make myn executours my moder Dame Jane of Boynton, John of Norton and Conand Barton for ye grett treuth and affiance yat I have in yame.

Feoffment.—I have in feffite John of Norton, Thos. Gowere squyere, Conande Barton and Thos. Kelcy in my manere of Whenby and my lands in Yorkeshire and in the Cite of York, and haife also relesede and white clamed all ye reghte yat I have in ye forsaide landes to Jane my moder, yat she haulde3 for terme of hire lyffe of my gifte or of John of Barton‡ my grannce-sire.—I require them to infeffe Robt Danby one of ye Keng Justice in x. marce for my sone and my doghtter, and if it happyn me for to dy, they to have v. marce more as it is more playnly writen in one indenture of mareage between ye saide Robert and me—my son Chr. a minor—my broder John Norton —my father Conand Barton.§ [Prob. 9 Sep. 1458.]

* It seems probable from this that the testator had had more than one wife.

† Conan Barton, one of the younger brothers of the testator, married Joan, only child and heir of Robert Dolphanby of Gateshead. Through this marriage the family of Barton became possessed of extensive property in the counties of Durham and Northumberland, which they long retained. Joan Dolphanby was left fatherless at a very early age, and she became ward to Robert Strangeways the younger, Esq. She did not attain her majority till Dec. 17, 1457.

‡ John de Barton, the testator's grandfather, married Christian, daughter of . . . . Aske of Aske, and it was from her family that the Bartons adopted the baptismal name of Conan. The visitation of 1584 gives two sons as the issue of this match, Thomas, who died without issue, and Conan, the testator's father.

§ Conan de Barton, of Whenby, Esq. by his will dated on the 8th of April, 1436, which was proved at York on the 24th of the same month, desires to be buried in the church of Whenby. He leaves to the vicar for his mortuary his best horse and

He gives another similar cup to his son Conan, and a third to Elizabeth his daughter. The residue is left to his executors, Robert Strangeways and Richard Barton. The Visitation of 1584 gives to this Conan a son John, who died without children; Richard, the testator; a daughter, Elizabeth, the wife of . . . Tailbois; and a daughter (Christian) who married Gerard Widdrington.

* A curious and affecting document. It is appended as a codicil to a will, which is dated on the 26th of October, 1450, and both were proved on the 3rd of October, 1458.

† A Yorkshire gentleman, who married a Fitzhenry of Kelfield. John Fitzhenry of Kelfield, Esq. in his will, dated on the 17th of Sept. 1440, mentions his brother William Banke, his son Henry, his daughter Alice, and his brother Conan. He desires to be buried in the church of St. Ellen at Stillingfleet.

* Sir Thomas Chaworth of Wiverton, co. Notts, the head of a most ancient and illustrious family. He was twice married. By his first wife, Nichola, daughter of Sir Reginald Braybrook, he had an only child, Elizabeth, who married John Lord Scrope of Upsal. His second consort was the heiress of a wealthy and distinguished house, Isabel daughter of Sir Thomas, and co-heir to her nephew Hugh, Aylesbury. The testator in the 24th of Henry VI. had the King's licence to make the park of Wiverton, and he was probably the builder of the princely mansion at that place which was unhappily dismantled during the Great Rebellion. The Chaworths adopted the royal cause, and their house at Wiverton was made a garrison for the King. By his second wife Sir Thomas Chaworth had several children, who will be noticed as they are mentioned in his will. Sir Thomas was the son and heir of Sir William Chaworth, who died in 1398, and whose will occurs in the Test. Ebor. I. No. CLXXX. Alice his mother was the daughter and heiress of Sir John Caltoft, and her will, which was made at Wiverton on the Monday after the feast of the Epiphany, 1 Henry IV. was proved at York on the 12th of July, 1400. She desires to be buried in the Abbey of Beauchief (in Derbyshire, where her husband was buried). To Thomas her son (the testator) she leaves an ouche of gold set with pearls and diamonds, a bed of blue and its costers with her arms, and a book called Placebo and Dirige (a book which Sir Thomas mentions hereafter). To Nichola, the wife of her son Thomas, she bequeaths a ring of gold with two diamonds "cum meliori fyleto meo et perill." To the altar "de novo yle" in the church of Estbrig a vestment of cloth of gold.

† In the Archbishop of York Sir Thomas found a friendly adviser and assistant. Archbishop Boothe was connected with Nottinghamshire in several ways, and was buried in the Abbey Church of Southwell in that county. His will occurs shortly.

‡ Sir Richard Bingham was appointed one of the Justices of the Court of King's Bench on the 9th of May, 1457. He married Margaret, one of the daughters and co-heirs of Sir Baldwin Freville, and the widow of Sir Hugh Willoughby of Wollaton. By her he had a large family. One of his children, Sir Richard Bingham, was made a Justice of the King's Bench on the 9th of October, 1471.

§ The name of Master Gull is constantly occurring in the legal proceedings of his county. His position was one of importance, and it was generally filled by men of worth and ability.

* William Fitzwilliam of Sprotborough, Esq. the husband of Elizabeth Chaworth, one of the daughters of the testator. She had a sister Elizabeth, wife of John Lord Scrope of Upsal, who took the veil at her husband's death. Fitzwilliam died at Haddlesay on the 1st of December, 1474, and was buried with his wife in the church of Sprotborough, where a brass to their memory is still remaining. His will was dated a short time before his death.

† Robert, afterwards Sir Robert, Clifton of Clifton, the husband of Alice Boothe, sister of William Boothe Archbishop of York, and the father of Sir Gervase Clifton, who was married, by licence dated Nov. 7, 1456, to Alice, widow of Richard Thurland of Nottingham. He began to build the college at Clifton, which was completed by his son, and, dying on the 9th of April, 1478, was buried in the north aisle of the church at Clifton.

‡ Of Wollaton, Esq. the eldest son of Sir Hugh Willoughby, whose will has been already printed, by his first wife Isabel Foljambe. He died in 1469, in which year his will was dated, leaving no issue by his wife Anne one of the co-heirs of Simon Leke of Cotham.

§ Of Thribergh, co. Ebor, Esq. the husband of Agnes, one of the daughters of Sir John Stapleton of Wighill, and the ancestor of a long line of Knights and Baronets. Sir William Reresby, the third Baronet, squandered away the estates of his family in gambling and dissipation, and was reduced to the low estate of tapster in the Fleet prison.

‖ The head of the family of Staunton of Staunton. He died on the 9th of January, 1517-18, and was buried with Anne his wife in the choir of St. Laurence in the church of Staunton. His will, which is dated on the 30th of December, 1517, was proved at York on the 28th of April following. He mentions his daughters Millicent, Elce, and Annas, his wife Anne, and his son John. He leaves to the church of Staunton 26*s.* 8*d.* to buy a cross with, 40*s.* to make the desks, and to "the battlelyng of the same" 20*s.* He bequeaths to the chapel of Staunton to buy a cross cloth with, 6*s.* 8*d.* His father Thomas Staunton in his will dated on the 29th of March, 1447, mentions his wife Margaret and Thomas his eldest son. He desires to be buried in the chapel of St. Laurence at Staunton.

* William, afterwards Sir William, Chaworth, the testator's eldest son, married Elizabeth, one of the two daughters and co-heirs of Sir Nicholas Bowett of Ripingale, by Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir John de la Zouch. Sir William had two children by her: Thomas, who married Margaret, daughter of John Earl of Shrewsbury, a lunatic, by whom he had no issue; and Joan the wife of John Ormond. Joan Ormond left three daughters and co-heirs, Elizabeth, the wife of Sir Anthony Babington of Dethick, Anne married William Meering, and Joan the wife of Thomas Denham of Eythorp, co. Bucks. The will of Lady De la Zouch, which has already occurred, contains some interesting notices of the family of Chaworth.

† George Chaworth married Alice daughter and heiress of John Annesley, and it was through his son Thomas Chaworth of Crophill Butler that the Viscounts of Armagh descended. On the 10th of October, 1466, Richard Woodwarde of Annesley Woodhouse administered to the effects of George Chaworth of Annesley, Esq.

* Margaret, daughter of Sir Simon Leeke. She was twice married. Her first husband was Sir Godfrey Foljambe of Kinalton, co. Notts, who died on the 2nd of December, 1388, aged 21. By him she had a daughter and heiress, Alice, the wife of Sir Robert Plumpton of Plumpton. After Sir Godfrey's death his widow remarried the celebrated Sir Thomas Rempston, K.G. by whom she had several children. Sir Thomas died in 1406, but his widow survived him for nearly half a century. At her death, on the 21st of April, 1454, she must have been extremely aged. Her will, which is dated at Nottingham, Nov. 14, 1453, was proved at York on the 5th of May, 1454. She desires to be buried in the chancel of the parish church of Bingham, under the tomb in which her late husband Thomas Rempston was buried. She left the residue of her estate to Sir William Plumpton, Nicholas Wymbish, clerk, Robert Rempston, Esq. her son, John Leek of Holom, Geoffrey Knyveton of Nottingham, and Gregory Lovet her servant, whom she appoints her executors. The supervisors are Archbishop Boothe and William Lord Roos of Hamlake.

† Sir Thomas Rempston of Rempston, co. Notts, a very distinguished and illustrious statesman. In the year 1400 he was made steward of the king's household. On 20th April, 1401, he was appointed Admiral of the Fleet in the west and south parts of England. In July, 1401, he was made a conservator of the truce with France, and constable of the Tower. On 1st November, 1401, he was selected with several others to settle the ransom of John, late king of France. In the month of April, 1406, he was one of the ambassadors by whom a peace with France was concluded. In 1404 he was sworn a member of the Privy Council, and in the same year the House of Commons recommended to the consideration of the king the services which Rempston with others had rendered at his accession, he having landed with Henry IV. at Ravenspur, previously to the dethronement of Richard II. In the first year of the reign of the new monarch he was made K.G. He did not however live long to enjoy his many honours, as his death occurred shortly afterwards. It was an accidental one, and we are indebted to the inquest of the city coroner for a very graphic description of the mishap which was the cause of it. It appears that on Sunday the 31st of October, 1406, Sir Thomas, with his servants, entered into a boat at Paul's Wharf, in the ward of Baynard, intending to row under London Bridge to the Tower; as the tide was strong and against them the boatmen told him they dared not row under the bridge, when he commanded them to proceed on pain of losing their heads. This threat made them try to shoot the bridge, but in the attempt the boat ran against one of the piles. Sir Thomas tried to catch hold of it; but in so doing he upset the boat, and was thrown into the water and drowned. The coroner sat upon the body on the following day, and it was found that the accident had been caused by the recklessness of the deceased. His remains were hurried down into Nottinghamshire, and buried in the chancel of the church of Bingham. His tomb was opened after the lapse of nearly half a century to receive the remains of his aged widow, who was laid by the side of her lord.

* The eldest son of Sir Thomas Rempston, K.G. and a famous warrior. In 1415 he served in the expedition to France, with 8 men-at-arms and 24 foot archers. He was present at the capture of Harfleur and at the battle of Agincourt. In 1418 he was at the siege of Rouen, and he took a part in most of the sieges and battles in France during the reign of Henry VI. He was taken prisoner by Mons. Tanguy de Chastell about the year 1435. He died on the 15th of October, 1458, leaving by his wife Alice, the daughter and heiress of Thomas Bekering, Esq. by Isabel, daughter and co-heir of Sir John Loudham, three daughters and co-heirs, Elizabeth, the wife of John Cheyney, Esq. In nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, Amen. Ego Johannes Dautre,‡ sanus. Lego et commendo animam meam Deo Omnipotenti, Creatori meo, adjuvante et mediante gloriosissima Maria, regina cœli, domina et matre misericordiæ; et corpus meum, verius cadaver putridum, sepeliendum coram altari Sanctæ Trinitatis in ecclesia mea par. S. Michaelis juxta pontem Use, coram ymagine Sanctissimi Johannis Baptistæ, founder of the house is a certain Reginald Flandrensis, a name which plainly tells us of the origin of its bearer. The testator does not appear in any of the recorded pedigrees of the family. On the 17th of September, in the 38th of Henry VI. William Fleming of Wath, Esq. makes his will, which was proved at York on the 4th of May, 1461. In it he left 10*l.* for the jointure of William Fleming, his son and heir, and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of John Wombwell, Esq. together with a rent of 66*s.* 8*d.* after his decease out of his farms of Croston and Mawdesley in Lancashire. To his daughter Eufame he left the sum of 80*l.* He likewise mentions his son John Fleming, his son John Caterall, his wife Anne, and his brother John Wombwell. William Fleming, who is mentioned in the will which has just occurred, and who became Lord of Wath after his father's death, left two daughters and coheirs. He was killed at Wath, but we are unacquainted with the cause of his death.

* Robert Fleming, Dean of Lincoln, in all probability a near relative of the testator. His brother Richard Fleming was Bishop of Lincoln, and was translated to the see of York, but the King refused to sanction the appointment which the Pope had made. He was the munificent founder of Lincoln College, Oxford. The two brothers were scholars of no ordinary ability, and they ranked among the most learned men of the day.

† There is some little uncertainty as to the maiden name of this lady. According to Glover, she was the daughter and heiress of Robert Fleming of Woodhall, in Methley, the testator, and the wife of Sir Robert Waterton of Methley, a distinguished warrior and statesman. If this be true, and the prominent position which Dame Beatrix occupies in the present will makes it extremely probable, Sir Robert was twice married, as he mentions his wife Cecily in his will. The Countess of Cambridge in her will, which has already occurred, mentions her niece Dame Beatrix Waterton. Sir Robert's sister-in-law was a daughter of John Lord Clifford, the brother of the Countess.

‡ A gentleman of high legal attainments and extensive practice. The will of his father, Thomas Dautre, has been already given (No. XLIV.). That document has much in it to interest the reader, but it is greatly inferior in value and curiosity to the will which is now before us. The testator whilst he followed the profession of his father at the same time inherited his taste, and this will, the last perhaps that he was permitted to draw out, gives us a very pleasing picture of its compiler.

‡ William Langton, who was evidently on terms of great intimacy with the testator, was rector of St. Michael's Ousebridge, in York. Some extracts from his will have been already given in a note to No. LXXX.

† A personal relic of one of the most popular prelates that ever sat upon the bench. It is probably the same book which was bequeathed to the testator in his father's will as "librum parvum vocatum Scropp." The murdered Archbishop is here spoken of in such reverent and affectionate terms that we may be sure that there had been some intimate connection between the Archbishop and the testator's family. His father, Thomas Dautre, probably owed his success in life to the kind offices of that prelate, and had many opportunities of experiencing that courtesy of demeanour and that fascinating affability of manner for which the deceased Archbishop was so especially distinguished. The book which is here bequeathed may have been taken from the bosom of the sufferer by the father himself, and we cannot therefore wonder at the son inheriting with the precious relique all his father's feelings of affectionate regard for the patron he had lost. He may perhaps have witnessed that act of cruelty, and the strong feelings of the boy still clung to the gray-haired man. The memory of the Archbishop was held in the greatest veneration in his native county, and we cannot be surprised at it. Although he was himself a Yorkshireman, and a member of a powerful family which generally enforced rather than required respect, he did not owe his popularity to the splendour of his birth or the greatness of his position. The courtesy and kindness which he showed alike to all won for him the love and esteem of all, and when he, the common idol, died a martyr to a popular cause, almost before the gates of his own palace, we can readily understand how greatly the veneration of his admirers would be increased. After his death he was considered and worshipped as a Saint, and so great was the number of persons that flocked to his tomb that the King ordered the place to be covered over with logs of wood. The body of the Archbishop was interred in St. Stephen's Chapel in the Minster at York, where a plain altar tomb still marks his grave. Many were the honours which were paid to his memory, but I shall have occasion to refer again to the subject ere the volume closes. The will of a custodier of his sepulchre will soon occur.

‡ St. William, the canonized Archbishop of York, died in 1154. After his decease miracles are said to have been performed at his tomb. When he was canonized his bones were removed from their old resting place by Archbishop Wickwane in the presence of Edward I. his Queen and Court, and were deposited in the nave of the Minster. A splendid shrine was erected over the tomb, which was enriched by many costly bequests and gifts of plate and jewels. Drake (p. 420) gives an interesting account of the opening of the Saint's tomb which he himself witnessed. It appears from the present will that the reliques of the saint were carried processionally through the city in a shrine.

CLXXXIII. TESTAMENTUM AGNETIS BEDFORD.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Ego Agnes Bedford † de Kyngeston super Hull vidua, xiiij. Sep. M.cccc.lix.—sepeliend. in capella S. Trin. infra dictam villam, ante ymaginem Sanctæ Mariæ de Pyte. Mortuarium meum viz. meam togam nigram cum gray penulatam, curatis meis, juxta ritum villæ predictæ; et pro decimis meis oblitis xl s., et fabricæ capellæ pro sepultura mea xl s. Summo altari j. burdcloith et j. towell de twill. Johanni Dalton ‡

* Robert Pudsay of York was admitted to the order of Subdeacon by the suffragan of the Archbishop on the last of February, 1449-50. There was a respectable family of that name engaged in commerce in York in the 15th century, an offshoot probably from the house of Pudsay of Bolton.

† Agnes, successively widow of John Strother, Richard Dalton, and John Bedford. Her last husband was a wealthy merchant at Hull, and the testatrix herself died there, although she appears to have had some property in Newcastle, where, no doubt, she had previously resided. She died in affluent circumstances, and makes a valuable will. Her last husband, John Bedford, was a wealthy merchant at Hull. By his will, dated on the 23rd of December, 1450, which was proved at York on the 14th of May in the following year, he desires to be buried in the choir of the chapel of the Blessed Trinity, near the body of Elizabeth his wife. He leaves for his mortuary, "collobium penulatum cum martors." He bequeathes to Agnes his wife two covered silver pieces, twelve silver spoons with lions for knops, gilt, in recompense of a certain sum of money belonging to John Dalton, which the said Agnes his wife, the mother of the said John, lent to him. He also leaves to her his best cup, called, "le nutte," of silver and gilt, "unum hallyng paly grene et light grene," with three banquers of the same pattern. To his son Nicholas Bedford he gives a silver piece covered and gilt. To Master Thomas Bedford his son a silver piece covered and gilt, called "flat peece." To Richard Bedford his son he leaves a blood-red vestment for a priest, a silver chalice, a book called "le Portus," and a Missal. To John Dalton he gives another cup of silver and gilt, called "le nutte." To Helen Gare his daughter he gives a colored silver piece, called "flat pece," chased "cum signo vocato fonnez." He mentions Elizabeth and Anne the daughters of Richard, and John and Nicholas the sons of Nicholas, Bedford, his sons. He then makes provisions for the foundation of a chantry of the value of 100*s.* a-year together with eight marks for his yearly obit for his soul, the souls of Elizabeth and Agnes his wives, those of John late Duke of Bedford, John Tutbury, merchant, deceased, and for those of all his benefactors, for ever, in Trinity Church, Hull, and he desires that the priests who officiate may be taken from the rell (or table, as it is generally called) of the chapel of the Blessed Trinity.

‡ John Dalton of Hull the son of the testatrix by her second husband. He is mentioned with his mother in the will of Agnes widow of William Dalton of York, in 1445 (No. xc.). There was certainly a connection between his family and that of his namesake John Dalton of Hull, the ancestor of the Daltons of Hauxwell in Richmondshire, but I have not hitherto been able to unite them. I believe that both of them sprang from York, where there was a respectable family of merchants of that name. These two Johns cannot be identical, as the ancestor of the Hauxwell line died in 1458, but if more evidence be attained, it will probably be found that they were cousins. It will perhaps be discovered that John Dalton, the son of the testatrix, was the ancestor of a family of that name, which lived in the neighbourhood of Newcastle, where the second husband of the testatrix seems to have died.

* Probably John Dalton, who was vicar of All Saints on Peaseholme Green, in York. His nuncupative will, dated 15 April, 1433, was proved at York, two days afterwards. Robert Dalton his brother was his executor.

† Sir John Dalton of York, chaplain, died in 1438. He occurs in a matrimonial suit in the year 1432. It appears that his sister Margaret Dalton, whom all the witnesses flatteringly describe as "virgo juvenis, pulcra et formosa," was, in the year 1432, a ward of Robert Clenyng of Burneby, and Margery his wife, who was her godmother. The fair damsel had been contracted to one John Warde of Burneby, who had been faithless, and had deserted her for one Alice Skelton. This desertion begets a suit for breach of promise of marriage, in which it is stated, I presume as a proof of the respectability of the complainant, that Sir John Dalton of York, chaplain, was her brother. Her brothers, Richard Dalton of Burneby, then of the age of 30 years, and Robert Dalton, of the age of 28, appear as witnesses for their sister. She had another sister, who bore the curious name of Ibbota ; she was then wife to Robert Pirles of Hayton.

* John Strother, the first husband of the testatrix, bears the name of a good Northumberland family. He was probably a merchant at Newcastle, where he seems to have been interred.

† Richard Dalton, the second husband of the testatrix, and the father of her son John Dalton. We may perhaps infer that he had died in Newcastle, from the fact that his obit was to be celebrated in the church of the Friars Minors in that town. There was also a family of Dalton in the vicinity of Newcastle during the sixteenth century. But, supposing that Richard Dalton did live and die in Newcastle, I am still inclined to believe that he was of Southern extraction, and connected with the York family to which I have already alluded. There was always an intimate connection between the great commercial towns; and the family of Bird, which attained to such wealth in Newcastle, is known to have migrated from Hull. In 1436, Beatrix, wife of Richard Dalton of York, tanner, died and was interred in the church of All Saints, North Street. Her husband was then surviving.

* Widow of William Gelyot of Hull, roper. He made his will on the Feast of the Epiphany, 1448, in which he desired to buried in the chapel of the Blessed Trinity. To his son John, the canon, Abbot of Newsom, he left his white zone, adorned with silver. To Joan his daughter he bequeathed a red bed, with swans and leopards' heads. To Margaret, the wife of Bertin his son, he left his black zone of leather, with heads of angels of silver. He mentions his wife Ellen, the testatrix.

* John Saville, of Copley, Esq. married Maud Trafford, by whom he had several children. His father, Henry Saville, acquired the estate by his marriage with Eleanor, daughter and heiress of Thomas Copley. His will, dated on the 21st of November, 1437, was proved at York on the 26th of November, in the same year. He desired to be buried in the church of Halifax, and he left the residue of his estate to John, Thomas, and Nicholas Saville, and Richard Littester, draper.

† Nicholas Saville of the Bank married Joan, daughter of John Lacy of Cromwellbotham.

‡ John Lacy, of Cromwellbotham, Esq. was connected by marriage with the family of Saville. On the 5th of April, 1474, he makes his will, in which he desires to be buried in the church at Halifax. He mentions the children of his sons and daughters—his sons Richard and Gilbert Lacy, Joan daughter of Gilbert, and John son of Richard Lacy.

* This will contains an interesting bequest to the church of Wilberforce. I have always extracted with great care any notices which bear upon the architectural history of the period.

† Richard Earl of Salisbury, one of the many scions of the princely family of Neville, and the founder of a short-lived house, which was fairer even than the mother from which it sprang. He was the eldest son of Ralph Neville, first Earl of Westmerland, by his second wife Joan Beaufort, daughter of John of Gaunt. The immense influence of his father secured for him an illustrious consort. She was the sole heiress of the great house of Montacute, with the queenly dower of the ancient Baronies of Montacute and Monthermer. The title of her sire was revived in the person of her lord by letters patent dated on the 4th of May, 1442. Richard Neville was now in right of his position one of the greatest nobles in the realm, and the restless energy of the Nevilles made him maintain it well. His honours were numerous and great. In the 1st and 2nd of Henry VI. he was Warden of the West Marches, and a commissioner to treat for peace with Scotland. In the 11th of Henry VI. he was Warden of the West Marches, and in the following year he was made Warden of both the East and West Marches. In the 14th of Henry VI. he was retained by the King to serve in his army in France and Normandy with 3 bannerets, 7 knights, 249 men-at-arms, and 1040 archers. In 26 Henry VI. he was again Warden of the West Marches and Governor of Carlisle. In 29 Henry VI. he was once more appointed a commissioner to treat for peace with Scotland. In 32 Henry VI. he, in conjunction with several other nobles, undertook the guardianship of the seas. The wars of the Roses now broke out, and the immense influence of the Earl of Salisbury was one of the main supports of the house of York. To this side he uniformly adhered, and he gave to it the warmest and the strongest assistance. At the great battles at St. Alban's and Blore Heath he contributed greatly to the success of the Yorkists. In the 38th of Henry VI. there was a strong reaction in favour of the House of Lancaster, and the Earl of Salisbury was obliged to cross the seas. He was attainted in his absence. In the following year he returned to England, and was present at the great battle of Northampton. He was now constituted Lord Great Chamberlain of England, in reward for his services to his party. In the very next engagement, however, the fortunes of the contending parties were reversed. It was the fatal fight at Wakefield, so disastrous to the Yorkists and their adherents. The Duke of York himself was slain, and the Earl of Salisbury was taken prisoner and beheaded. His head was afterwards fixed upon one of the gates of the city of York—a mournful termination of the career of one of the greatest and most able of our English Barons. He fell in December, 1460, and on the 13th of April in the following year the permission to administer to his effects was granted to his widow the Lady Alesia, to Richard Earl of Warwick, John Lord Montacute, Sir James Strangeways, Kt., Thomas Witham, William Ireland, and Sir John Middleton, chaplain. In the Wills and Inventories, published by the Surtees Society, p. 69, several of the letters of this great nobleman have been printed, and a specimen of his autograph has been given.

* The monastery of Bustlesham or Bysham Montague, now Bisham, in Berkshire, was originally a Preceptory of the Knights Templars. It afterwards came into the possession of William Montacute Earl of Salisbury, who in 1338 built a Priory here for Austin Canons. Many of the family of Montacute were interred there. The founder's son William was buried there, and his widow Elizabeth de Mohun desires to be laid beside her lord in 1414. John de Montacute the next Earl was buried at Cirencester, but his remains were removed to Bustlesham by royal licence in the 5th Henry V. The last of the old Earls of Salisbury, the father-in-law of the testator, desires to be interred among his ancestors at Bustlesham. The testator and his wife were buried there, and their son the kingmaker laid his bones beside theirs. At the Dissolution, the abbey, with its buildings, was converted into the mansion of the family of Hoby.

† Alesia, the only child and heir of Thomas Lord Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, and Lord Monthermer, by Alianora, daughter of Thomas, and sister and coheir of Edmund Earl of Kent. Her father, a famous warrior and a distinguished man, was killed at the Siege of Orleans on the 3rd of November, 7 Henry VI. His daughter was now one of the wealthiest heiresses in England, and she was wooed and won by a man who was well fitted by his birth and talents to fill the loftiest position that the realm could offer. She had a large family by the testator, whom she survived. Her own dignity and power were not extinguished by the titles of her Lord, and we can easily understand how so many of the Yorkshire gentry were desirous of securing the patronage of the lady of Middleham and Sheriffhutton for the fulfilment of their wills.

* Joan, daughter of John of Gaunt. Her first husband was Sir Robert Ferrers, and after his death she became the second wife of Ralph Earl of Westmerland, to whom she bore the testator, &c. After the death of her lord, who died in 1425, she seems to have spent the greater part of the remaining years of her life at Sheriffhutton Castle. She died on the 13th November, 1440, and was buried in Lincoln Cathedral. Her will, dated 10 May, 1440, is given in the Appendix to the Hist. Dunelm. Scriptores Tres, No. ccxx.

† Ralph, first Earl of Westmerland, the father of the testator, died in 1425, and was buried under a splendid altar-tomb in Staindrop Church. His will, to which an interesting account of him is appended, occurs in the "Wills and Inventories," one of the earliest of the publications of the Surtees Society, No. 21.

* Robert Neville, Bishop of Durham, was the testator's brother. Thomas Langley, who died Bishop of Durham in 1437, is here spoken of. Robert Neville died in 1457, and was interred in the Neville Chapel in the Cathedral of Durham. His will is given in the Appendix to the Hist. Dunelm. Scriptores Tres, No. cclv.

† Richard Neville, Earl of Salisbury and Warwick, the eldest son of the testator, the greatest subject that ever lived, upon whose exploits and grandeur the historian and the novelist have alike dwelt with pleasure. His marriage with the heiress of the Beauchamps added to the splendour of his inheritance, and his valour and extraordinary energy, combined with his profuse liberality and fascinating manners, rendered him the idol of the nation. He was, in good truth, the setter up and the putter down of kings. The brilliant career of the kingmaker is too well known to be detailed here. Suffice it to say that he fell on the field of Barnet in 1471, fighting not for the cause for which his father died, but for the House of Lancaster. In the Auditors' Office at Durham, singularly enough, there is preserved one of the rolls which was annually made out by the keeper of the live stock of the great Earl. It is a valuable document, and fully confirms the accounts which we have received of the magnificence of his establishment. I add a document of a different nature which occurs in the contemporary register of the Archbishop of York. It tells its own tale, and will be read with interest.

Most Reverent Fader in God, right worshippfull and my gode Lorde. After due recommendacion to yor gode Lordship, please hit the same to witte, y^t^ I knowe for certain that the Scotte3, the kynges auncien grete enemyes, with his traitours and rebelle3, have entred this lande w^t^ grete puissance, entendyng to do therto and to the inhabitante3 of ye same all the hurt and damage that thay can ymagine ; wherfore I, as the kings lieutenant, charge you on his behalfe, and beseche and require yow on myn own, that ye doo ordeine ye clergie of yor diocise and province of York to come forth in all hast possible in thair moost defensible arraie, in as grete nombre as thai godely may be, to assiste me to the resistence of the malice of the saide enemye3, traitours and rebelles, so that thai be with me at Duresme on Friday next comyng, as ye woll ansuer to the Kyngs Highnesse, and upon all perill that ther of may fall. ‡ Margaret, the sixth and youngest daughter of the testator, married John Vere, Earl of Oxford.

‖ Thomas Wytham of Cornburgh, near Sheriffhutton, was a confidential agent and adviser of the testator. He looked after his stock, farms, and leases, and transacted most of his legal business. His connections appear to have been very extensive. He married the heiress of the Thwengs of Cornburgh, but he had no children. From his brother the Withams of Cliffe, and through them the present Mr. Witham of Lartington, are descended. Thomas Wytham founded a chauntry in Sheriff hutton Church, near the burial-place of his patron's family. He is interred in it himself, and a brass plate still commemorates him. Some notices of him have been already given.

¶ Richard Roos, a retainer of the testator, was a member of the family of Roos of Ingmanthorp.

* Sir John Headlam of Nunthorpe in Cleveland, the husband of Agnes, daughter of Sir John Clervaux of Croft. The Headlams possessed extensive estates in the Bishoprick of Durham, and their first seat was at Stainton in that county. All these estates passed away with the heiress of the Headlams into the family of Bowes in the reign of Elizabeth. This will is probably the composition of the testator himself. It is a very characteristic document, and will be read with much interest.

† Sir William Bulmer of Wilton in Cleveland, the head of the noble house of Bulmer, married Elizabeth Eure. He died in 1463, and his widow was allowed to administer to his effects on the 14th of November in that year.

though unhappy, family. His father Sir William Harrington, a famous warrior, bore the royal standard at the field of Agincourt. His mother was Margaret, daughter of Sir Robert Neville of Hornby, and co-heir of her niece Margaret Duchess of Exeter. Sir Thomas was 40 years of age in the 19th of Henry VI. when we may presume his father died. He was high sheriff of Yorkshire in the 26th of Henry VI. As he held so prominent a position in the North, Sir Thomas could not hope to be allowed to remain neutral in the civil wars of the time. He seems to have been closely connected with the great Earl of Salisbury, and it was his powerful influence that induced Sir Thomas to draw his sword for the house of York. Soon after All Saints' Day, 1458, the Earl of Salisbury sent for him to his castle at Middleham ; there he met a large number of influential men, who resolved to take the side of the Yorkists. Sir Thomas Harrington, on his return from Middleham to Hornby, adroitly conveyed his estates to the Archbishop of York, the Earl of Shrewsbury, John Lord Clifford, and others, all of whom were stout partizans of the house of Lancaster. His will is dated in the autumn of 1459. At the end of the following year the sanguinary conflict at Wakefield took place, which was indeed a disastrous day for the house of Harrington. Sir John Harrington, the testator's eldest son, was slain upon the field, and his father, the testator, was so severely wounded that he died on the following day. By Elizabeth, daughter of . . . . Dacre. Sir Thomas Harrington left several children, but none of them retrieved the fortunes of the falling house. Sir James Harrington, his second son, was attainted for his adherence to the house of York, upon the accession of Henry VII. and his only son John Harrington died by poison. Sir Robert, the third son of Sir Thomas Harrington, was attainted with his brother after the battle of Bosworth. So much misery did the civil wars entail upon one family within a very short space of time. The cloud which had settled over the house never deserted it, and the very name of Harrington became soon extinct. The immense possessions of the family, most of which were derived from the Duchess of Exeter, passed away to the noble house of Stanley. Dr. Whitaker gives a most interesting account of this illustrious family, which he compiled from their records at Hornby Castle, and to this account Mr. Hunter has made some valuable additions in his History of South Yorkshire, ii. 402.

Item lego Johanni Hodilston ‡ debita quæ Henricus Fenewike, nuper defunctus, michi debet. Item lego Isabellæ filiæ Alexandri Radcliff et Agnetis § sororis meæ xl. marcas ultra xl. libras quas Alexander Radcliff michi debet, ad maritagium predictæ Isabellæ,

* Probably one of the Crofts of Claughton in Lancashire.

† Sir John Harrington, the eldest son of the testator, fell with his father at Wakefield. He married Maud, daughter of Thomas Lord Clifford, by whom he had two daughters and co-heirs. These two children, who were very young when their father and grandfather fell, were put under the guardianship of Lord Stanley. He soon found husbands for the wealthy heiresses in one of his own younger children Edward Stanley, Lord Monteagle, and in his nephew John Stanley of Honford. Lord Monteagle has been charged with poisoning his cousin John, son of Sir James Harrington, but there appears to be no ground whatever for this suspicion. It was a deed contrary both to his honour and interest.

‡ Sir John Huddlestone, together with Sir James Harrington assumed to themselves the guardianship of the two heiresses of Sir John Harrington. This act seems to have been an encroachment upon the rights and privileges of the crown, and we find that in the 8th of Edward IV. the two self-constituted guardians were committed to the Fleet. Lord Stanley immediately suceeeded them in their office.

§ Agnes, daughter of Sir William Harrington, and sister to the testator, married Alexander Radcliffe of Ordesall.

Item volo ut voluntas Petri Talbot perimpleatur, secundum quod bona sua in mea custodia existencia se extendant. Item volo ut si Conventus de Ergham et Cawode inveniant presbiterum celebraturum in capella de Ergham, videlicet Johannem Girsyngham capellanum, tunc volo quod executores mei solvant vel solvi faciant predicto Johanni quinque nobilia quolibet anno pro sex annis proxime futuris, si vixerit. CXCVI. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS TALBOT COMITIS SALOP.

In Dei nomine, Amen. Octavo die mensis Septembris, anno domini Millesimo quadringentesimo quadragesimo sexto. Ego Johannes Talbot, miles,‡ filius et heres Johannis Comitis Salopiæ,

* Sir Thomas Neville did not live to execute this trust. He fell with his friend at Wakefield, a field which was so disastrous to the house of York.

† Edmund Southworth was rector of Halton, in Lancashire, and Oliver Bland was rector of Claughton in the same county. They were two of the feoffees of Sir Thomas Harrington.

‡ One of the noblest among the chivalry of England. He was the eldest surviving son and heir of the famous warrior John Talbot, the great Earl of Shrewsbury, and he proved himself to be by no means unworthy of his illustrious sire. He was born about the year 1413, and on Whit-Sunday, 1426, he was knighted at Leicester, on which day the king himself received that honour at the hands of his uncle, John Duke of Bedford. In 1444 he was in the wars in France, and in 1446 his father made him Lord Chancellor of Ireland. In 1457 he was made Knight of the Garter and Lord Treasurer of England. In 1460 he received a grant of an annual pension of 100 marks as a reward for his loyalty to his unfortunate master. This pension, however, he did not long enjoy, for on the 10th of July in the same year he, with his brother Sir Christopher, was killed at the battle of Northampton, "ante signa strenuè pugnans," proponens iter facere versus partes Hiberniæ, condo testamentum meum in hunc modum. In primis comendo animam meam Deo, Beatæ Mariæ et Omnibus Sanctis, corpusque meum sepeliendum in capella Beatæ Mariæ Monasterii Sancti Cudberti de Wirkesop, inter altare et tumbam Matildæ * matris meæ; et quod executores mei faciant ibidem unam tumbam secundum status mei exigenciam. Item lego Monasterio Sancti Cudberti predicti post decessum meum omnia terras et tenementa mea quæ quondam fuerunt Johannis de Whiston in Comitatu Ebor. Item lego fabricæ ecclesiæ de Sheffeld quadraginta solidos. Residuum vero omnium bonorum meorum superius non legatorum do et lego Elizabethæ uxori meæ, ipsamque Elizabetham,† Thomam dominum de Clifford,‡ Thomam Harington § militem, Johannem Preston vicarium ecclesiæ de Wakefeld, Johannem Barnby et Johannem Kersford ordino, facio et constituo meos executores; et Radulphum dominum de Cromwell ‖ istius testamenti supervisorem. In cujus rei testimonium huic testamento meo sigillum meum apposui. Hiis testibus, Thoma Everyngham,¶ Willelmo Oxspring, Willelmo as his epitaph proudly tells us, but even his strong arm could not save the fair white rose from the spoiler's hand. His remains were brought, as he desired, to Worksop Abbey, and were interred there amongst his maternal ancestors. His epitaph will be found in Thoroton's Nottinghamshire. His will was evidently made when he was setting out for Ireland to take possession of his chancellorship It is dated at Sheffield, which, amongst other vast possessions, he inherited through his mother from the Furnivals, the ancient Lords of Hallamshire. When the will was made, in 1443, he was heir apparent to his father ; at the date however of the probate he had succeeded to the earldom, his father having fallen at Chatillon, in 1453.

* Maud, the first wife of the great Earl of Shrewsbury, was the only child and heir of Sir Thomas Neville, by Joan his first wife, only daughter and heir of William Lord Furnival. By this match the rich lordship of Hallamshire and the castle of Sheffield came into the family of the Talbots. When the editor of the present volume was at Worksop some time ago he regretted much to see that the marble effigies of the ancient lords and ladies of Hallamshire were lying exposed in the churchyard in a most neglected condition. The church was then being restored, and they have not been replaced.

† A daughter of James Earl of Ormonde. The testator left by her a large family. After the death of her husband she took the veil, and on the 19th of July, 1460, nine days only after the death of her lord, Archbishop Boothe issues his commission to his suffragan, John Bishop of the Isles, to receive her. She died on Sept. 11th, 1473.

‡ Thomas Lord Clifford of Skipton, the friend and executor of the testator, died also in battle. He took up the cause of the house of Lancaster, and was killed with his uncle, the Earl of Northumberland, at the battle of St. Alban's, in 1455. The testator therefore could not avail himself of his services, as he survived him five years.

§ Sir Thomas Harrington of Hornby, the head of an ill-fated house, was another victim to the violence of the times. He fought for the Duke of York, although his interests and connections ought to have inclined him to the other side. He was at the battle of Wakefield in 1460, and was so severely wounded that he died on the following day. His son and heir Sir John Harrington was left dead upon the field. Truly these were troublous times for our Northern chivalry. The will of Sir Thomas has just occurred.

‖ Lord Cromwell did not live to fulfil the trust imposed upon him. He died in 1455-6, and his will has been already printed in No. CLIV.

¶ The families of Everingham and Swift were closely connected with the history of Sheffield.

Barkar, Roberto Reysyn capellano, Willelmo de Barley, Willelmo Swyft et multis aliis. Datum apud Sheffeld die et anno supradictis.

To all that this writing cummes to, I John Talbot, knyght, sonne and heire of th'erl of Shrowsbery, gretes wele in God. Knowes ye me uppon my passage in to the parties of Irlond for to have ordined and made my will in the forme undrewritten: that is to say, that my feoffes in fee and in the reversione of all the londis and tenementis in the which thai ar enfeoffed to myn use and [God] visite me, that thenne after my decees the saide feoffes make astate unto Elizabeth my wyf to have, terme of hir lif; the remayner to the right heires of me, except lands and tenements late Johnes of Whistan, with in the Counte of York, the which I will, after my deces, my feoffes yive to the Prior and Covent of the howse of Saint Cudberds of Wirkesop and to thair successours there, thei for to do devyne service for me, my brothir * and myn auncestours. Also I will that the said Elizabeth my wif have all my godes after my decees, wheresoevir thei may be found, paing my detts. In witnesse wherof I have set my seal. These witnesse: Sir John Preston vicar of Wakeffeld, John Barnby, John Kersford, William Swyft and many othir. Made at Sheffeld the viij. day of Septembre, the xxv. yere of the regne of Kyng Henry the Sixt. [Prob. 24 Nov. 1461, and adm. given to Eliz. Countess of Salop, his executor.]

CCVI. TESTAMENTUM DOMINÆ MARGARETÆ COKEFELD.

15 kal. Julii, 1462. Ego domina Margareta Cokefeld †—sep. in capella Beatæ Mariæ infra ecclesiam Beati Patricii de Nuthall

* The hospital of St. Leonard's, a wealthy establishment in its day, was one of the oldest institutions of the kind in England. Some time after the dissolution of the religious houses it passed into the hands of the Lord Mayor and the Commonalty of the City of York. It was applied by them to ordinary purposes, and the cellars were used as common wine vaults. Little else was supposed to be in existence, but a few years ago, when the house which occupied the site was being removed, a large portion of the hospital was recovered, as it was merely concealed in the walls of the modern dwelling-house. The site has been carefully opened out and the remains of this once flourishing establishment are now one of the many ornaments of the gardens of the Yorkshire Philosophical Society.

† Margaret daughter of . . . Foljambe, and widow of Ralph Monboucher, Esq. married John Cockfield of Nuthall, Esq. by whom she had no issue. An extract from the will of her husband John Cockfield, Esq. who died in 1453, has been already given. The representation of the ancient family of Cockfield now centred in the issue of Agnes Cockfield, who married John Talboys, and Margaret Ascough, who is mentioned by the testatrix, was her great-niece through this match. Lady Margaret, when she made her will, must have been well stricken in years. She was probably staying with the Willoughbies at Wollaton, and the bequest of the remainder of her substance to Richard Willoughby was no doubt an acknowledgment of the kindness and attention of his family.

CCVIII. TESTAMENTUM HENRICI SALVANE ARMIGERI.

In Dei nomine, Amen. xv. Sep. A. Dom. M.cccc.lxiiij. Ego Henricus Salvan* armiger et civis Eboracensis—sepeliend. in eccles. Conventuali Fratrum Minorum Eboraci in choro ubi frater meus Johannes miles jacet. Item lego unum lapidem precii iiij. marcarum subscriptum nomine fratris mei et mei ibidem

* It is difficult to discover the parentage of the testator. He was, I believe, a younger son of the house of Salvin of Hersewell, who had settled in York as a merchant. Sir John Salvin of North Duffield, a brother of Sir Roger Salvin of Hersewell, died about thirty years before the date of the present will. If the testator was a brother of this Sir John he must have been of a considerable age when he made the present will. In the Test. Ebor. I. cccv. is the will of Isabella Salvin, who was probably the testator's sister. On the 1st of April, 1440, Henry Gascoigne, Esq. administers to the effects of Roger Salvin of York, Esq.

CCIX. TESTAMENTUM REVERENDÆ MEMORIÆ DOMINI WILLELMI BOTH NUPER EBORACENSIS ARCHIEPISCOPI.

In nomine Summæ et Individuæ Trinitatis, Patris, Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, precelsæque Dei genetricis Mariæ, ac omnium celestium civium. Ego Willelmus Both* permissione divina

* William Boothe, fifty-first archbishop of York, was the third son of John Boothe, Esq. of Barton, in Lancashire. In his earlier years he began to study the common law at Gray's Inn, but having the chancellorship of St. Paul's offered to him he accepted it and took orders. In 1447 he was elevated to the see of Lichfield and Coventry, and in 1452, upon the translation of Cardinal Kempe to the archiepiscopal see of Canterbury, Boothe was removed from Lichfield to York. The papal bull authorising his translation was dated at Rome, 12th August, 1452, and the primate elect received the pall at Fulham on the 24th of September in the same year. Boothe was Archbishop of York for twelve years, but his career was not distinguished by any very remarkable acts. He appears to have been of a quiet and peaceful disposition. In the wars of the Roses, which occurred during his primacy, he adopted the cause of the house of Lancaster, and although he took no active part in the politics of the time he still felt severely the reverses of the party to which he had attached himself. It must have been a mournful sight to the peaceful prelate to see his diocese rent by the civil convulsions of the time and deluged with the best and noblest blood of which England could boast. Yet even in the midst of war and commotion he did not neglect the arts of peace. His liberality was profuse, and he spent large sums of money upon his palaces at York and Southwell. At Southwell he had his favourite residence. It was at Southwell that the present will was made, and there he died on the 12th of September, 1464. His remains were interred in the chapel of St. John Baptist in Southwell Minster, where a plain and unpretending monument was placed to commemorate him.

Archiepiscopus Eboracensis, Angliæ Primas, et Apostolicæ sedis Legatus indignus; in mentis acie considerans quam fragilis et infirma est humana natura, quam breves dies hominis, tamen . . . . niis et miseriis pleni; quam certa mortis preoccupacio, quam incerta hora ejus; quæ omnes disc . . . . . rapit divitem sicuti et pauperem, juvenem ac senem, nec etati sexui parcit aut honori, et volens propterea, Ego Willelmus Archiepiscopus, predicens secundum doctri . . . . . operari dum lucem habuero, ne superveniente nocte ulterius non possit operari'. In . . . . cia et misericordia, atque intercessione Beatissimæ Virginis Mariæ matris suæ ac Beatissimi Petri Apostoli patroni mei, insimulque Omnium Sanctorum meritis et precibus, ac tocius universæque ecclesiæ suffragiis confisus, solique Deo laudes reddens, sanus memoria, condo testamentum meum in hunc modum. Inprimis lego animam meam Deo Omnipotenti, et corpus meum, si moriar infra Comitatum Notingham. ad sepeliendum in ecclesia Collegiata Beatæ Mariæ Suthwell,* in cancella Sancti Johannis Baptistæ, in parte australi dictæ ecclesiæ. Summa M marcas, quæ quidem mille marcæ volo ut custodiantur in aliquo loco certo et securo per avisamentum executorum meorum ad custodiendum pro maritagiis dictarum filiarum et non ad aliquem alium usum. Et si aliqua vel aliquæ dictarum quatuor filiarum moriatur vel moriantur antequam maritetur vel maritentur, tunc volo quod dictæ ccl. marcæ pro maritagio illius sic mortuæ legatæ dividantur equaliter ad maritagia illarum non ad tunc maritatarum. Item do et lego Seth de Worseley‡ quingentas marcas argenti. Item do et

* The palace at Southwell was a favourite residence of the archbishops of York, and several of them rest in the adjacent minster. Laurence Boothe, Archbishop of York, was also interred at Southwell. It is a very remarkable circumstance that two brothers of this distinguished family rose to the Primacy, whilst several other members of the family were promoted to high offices in the church.

† Sir Nicholas Byron of Clayton, co. Lancaster, the ancestor of the Byrons of Newstead, co. Notts, married a Lancashire lady, Alice, daughter of John Boteler of Beausey. These four daughters are new to the Byron pedigree. Sir Nicholas was a kinsman of the Archbishop. Margaret, the sister of the testator, is said to have married John Byron of Clayton, co. Lancaster.

‡ The family of Worsley appears to have been intimately connected with the Archbishop. Seth Worsley, although he seems to have held no distinguished office under the see of York, was evidently in the confidence of the testator, and his name appears in many of his acts and proceedings.

* Ralph Radclyffe, a Lancashire gentleman, was connected by marriage with the Archbishop. That prelate's sister Catherine was the wife of Thomas Radclyffe of Wymersley, in Lancashire.

† Sir Robt. Clifton of Clifton, Co. Notts, the testator's brother-in-law and the head of an ancient and illustrious family. He was the eldest son of Sir Gervase Clifton of Hodsack, whose will has already occurred (No. cxxxvii.) At his father's death, in 1453-4, he was 30 years of age. He married Alice, daughter of John Boothe, Esq. and sister to the Archbishop, by whom he had several children. He died on the 9th of April, 1478, and was buried in the church of Clifton, near his wife, who died on the 9th of September, 1470. Sir Robert had several children. Gervase, his eldest son, was one of the witnesses of the testator's will; his younger brother, Robert Clifton, was more immediately under the patronage of the Archbishop. On May 13, 1454, the Archbishop presents him to the stall of North Muskham, in the church of Southwell, which was vacant by the resignation of Robert Clifton his father, who was the guardian of Gervase Clifton, the last canon. On the 13th of March, 1463-4, the Primate raises his nephew Robert Clifton to the Archdeaconry of the East Riding, and on the 28th of May following he was appointed canon of the stall of St. Michael in the church of Beverley, which was vacant by the death of William Scrope. Clifton all this time was merely an accolite, but twelve days before his patron's death, on the 12th of Sept. 1464, he received his permission to proceed to the more advanced sacerdotal degrees. Whether he did so or not cannot be now ascertained, but we know that he did not survive the Archbishop long, as the permission to administer to the effects of Master Robert Clifton, Archdeacon of the East Riding, was granted on 27th August, 1467, to Robert Hill and William Heseham.

CCX. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS MONKETON ARMIGERI.

In Dei nomine, Amen. iiij. die mensis Dec. A.D. M.cccc.lxiiij. Ego Johannes Monkton,‡ armiger—sepeliendum in ecclesia par. de Hynderwell. Lego pro mortuario meo optimum meum equum cum certis pertinenciis, ac uno apparatu armorum, ut moris est. Lego cuilibet capellano ad exequias et missam existenti viij d. Et cuilibet clerico ministranti ij d. Item lego duobus capellanis celebraturis incontinenti post decessum meum per unum annum integrum pro anima mea et animabus benefactorum meorum, ac pro bono statu Isabellæ uxoris meæ, alteri eorum vj. marcas; ea condicione, quod unus eorum celebret continue, cum dispositus fuerit, in ecclesia de Hynderwell, et alter permaneat in loco quo Isabella uxor mea moram traxerit, si velit, vel in alio loco ubi magis videbitur expedire. Lego fabricæ ecclesiæ de Hynderwell unam togam penulatam de cremycyn et ij. pannos viridis coloris de novo preparandos secundum modum pannorum pertinencium ad altare de Synnyngton, et hoc ex sumptu bonorum meorum. * William Worsley was made Prebendary of Overhall de Northwell in the church of Southwell, 30 March, 1453. On the 27th of July, 1457, he became Canon of South Cave in the church of York. In 1476 he was removed to the archdeaconry of Nottingham ; and when he died in 1499 he was Dean of St. Paul's, London, in which cathedral he was interred.

† William Brande, domestic chaplain and registrar to the archbishop, was promoted by him on 12 Aug. 1457, to the archdeaconry of Cleveland, resigning his prebend of Oxton-cum-Crophill in the church of Southwell, to which he had been appointed 3 Nov. 1454. On the 30th of Jan. 1460-1, he became Canon of Holme in the church of York, which he resigned on the 10th of March in the following year for the stall of Barnby in the same church. On the 26th of Sept. 1470, he was made Prebendary of Wighton in York Cathedral. He died in 1475.

‡ The testator has been already mentioned in the will of Thomas and Margaret De la River of Brandesby (Nos. cxviii. and cxli.), to whom he was related. The present will is unfortunately imperfect.

Thomæ Monkton fratri meo j. galeam. Christianæ uxori Willelmi Delarever sorori meæ j. vaccam et j. vitulum. Lego Thomæ Delarever j. armillam de auro. * A York clergyman who bears the name of a distinguished family in Craven, with which he was probably connected. Some extracts from the will of Alan Hammerton of York, merchant, who died in the year 1405–6, and from that of his wife Isabel, who died in 1432, may be found at No. XVII. The name of the testator does not occur in the list of the rectors of St. Mary Bishophill Senior, which is given in Drake's Eboracum.

† William Neville, of Thornton Bridge, Esq. He had a house in York in the testator's parish. He died in York in the early part of 1469, and was buried in the choir of St. Mary's, near his father, Sir Alexander Neville.

CCXIV. TEST. JOHANNIS WARTHILL CLERICI.

Sep. xij. M.cccc.lxv. Ego Johannes Warthill ‡ de Civ. Ebor. clericus.—Do et lego Matildæ uxori Johannis Radclyff § gentilman et Johanni filio eorumdem, sub condicione quod idem Johannes filius portet cognomen meum et parentum meorum, ut vocetur Johannes Warthill, totum capitale messuagium meum in quo inhabito in Walmegate.

* A younger son of the family of Crathorne of Crathorne in Cleveland. The head of the house, whom he mentions in his will, was probably his nephew. On the 5th of July, 1395, Thomas Crathorne administers to his brother Nicholas de Crathorne. A Nicholas Crathorne, who was a chauntry priest in St. George's Church in York, died in 1432-3. Thomas Crathorne was one of the Sheriffs of the City of York in 1442, and Lord Mayor in 1445. He was also one of the representatives of the city in the parliament held at Cambridge 25 Hen. VI.

† Sir Ralph Crathorne of Crathorne in Cleveland married Isabel daughter of Sir Thomas Mountford. He seems to have had by her a very large family, very few of whom are recorded in the pedigrees of his house. Sir Ralph died intestate, and his widow Isabel administered to his effects, March 17, 1489–90.

‡ John Warthill was rector of St. Margaret's in Walmegate for many years. His family had been connected with York for several centuries, and the testator was evidently wishful to perpetuate the name.

§ The family of Radcliffe, which was settled at York, was of Lancashire extraction. Some extracts from the will of the father of this gentleman, John Radcliffe, who was a citizen and merchant of York, have been already given, No. LXXXII.

CCXV. TESTAMENTUM WILLELMI RICHE CIVIS EBOR.

was the last token betwixt my wyffe and me." The wills of the Stapletons are all of them interesting. There were many splendid heirlooms in the family, which are often carefully described.

* The little house of Sinningthwaite was, if I may be allowed to use the term, the most aristocratic of the Yorkshire nunneries. Ladies who had in their veins some of the best blood in the north of England were always to be found within its walls. The nunnery of Clementhorp near York was also similarly favoured.

† The head of a family of some consideration in the East Riding of Yorkshire, which ended during the reign of Elizabeth in two co-heirs, who married into the families of Calverley and Saltmarsh. The testator, according to the Visitation of 1585, was the husband of Elizabeth daughter of John Ellerker of Moretowne. This does not tally with the present will.

The father, or perhaps the grandfather, of the testator, John Thornholme of Hasthorpe, Esq. made his will May 2, 1431. Prob. 19 March, 1434–5. He desired to be buried in the church of Burton Annas, and he left the sum of 14*l.* to have services performed for his soul, and for those of Margaret his wife, and his boys. To John Thornholme, his younger son, he bequeathed his lands in Wakefield. To John Thornholme, his elder son, he left his lands in Driffield, Baynton, Foston, and Brigham. His brother, William Thornholme, is indebted to him in the sum of 20*l.* He mentions his daughter Isabel and his wife Margaret.

Margaret Thornholme of Hasthorpe made her will at Hasthorpe 14 April, 1445. Prob. 7 Dec. 1446. She desired to be buried in the church of All Saints at Annas Burton. The residue of her estate she left to her son Thomas Thornholme (the testator).

* Richard, son of William and Alice Wartre, an alderman and citizen of York. He was one of the sheriffs for the city in the year 1431, and Lord Mayor in 1436 and 1451. He also was one of the representatives of the city in the Parliament holden at Cambridge, 13 Hen. VI. The will of his brother, Thomas Wartre, has been given (No. CVIII).

† The Moretons were a wealthy family of merchants in York. On the 20th of July, 1434, John de Moreton, son and heir of Roger de Moreton, late of Moreton, citizen and alderman of York, desires to be buried in the church of St. Martin's in Micklegate, in the choir of St. Nicholas, near Margaret his wife. To his daughter Ellen he leaves 100 marks for her marriage, "et totum perle quod habeo." His son John de Moreton is his executor.

* A daughter of Sir Robert Ughtred of Kexby, knight, by Margaret, daughter and coheir of Sir John Goddard, knight. She married Richard Aske of Aughton, Esq. who died in 1460, aged forty, and was buried in the priory of Ellerton. In the chancel of Aughton Church portions of a brass and of an inscription to commemorate the testatrix and her husband are still remaining. The family of Aske of Aughton sprang from a younger son of the house of Aske of Aske, who came into Howdenshire as seneschal of that district under the Bishop of Durham. The family soon took a firm root at Aughton, and acquired great wealth and distinction by allying itself with some of the noblest of the Yorkshire houses. Robert Aske, the illfated leader of the Pilgrimage of Grace, was the great-grandson of the testatrix; and Richard Aske of Aughton, the last of the family of whom we have any record, disgraced himself and the honour of his house by standing counsel to the regicides at the trial of Charles I.

† Sir John Aske of Aughton, knight, was seventeen years old at his father's death in 1460, and he then became a ward of his mother. By his will, dated on 8th of April, 1497, and proved on the 5th of June following, he desired to be buried in the chancel of the Monastery of Ellerton, before the image of the Blessed Mary, where the Gospel is wont to be read by the deacon. His wife Elizabeth was a daughter of the distinguished house of Bigod of Settrington, and by her he left a large family.

* Elizabeth Aske took the veil, and when her brother, Sir John, makes his will in 1497, she was a nun at Watton.

† Afterwards Sir Robert Aske of Aughton, who had livery of his estates in 1498. His will is dated the 10th of March, 1529-30, and was not proved till the 16th of March, 1541-2, as his children had other things to think of in the interval, which was indeed disastrous to the house of Aske. He desires to be buried in the choir of Aughton, near his wife, who was a daughter of John Lord Clifford. He was fortunately spared from witnessing the loss of his son Robert, for he died on the 21st of February, 1530-1.

CCXXIII. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS LANGTON ARMIGERI.

This is the last will of me John Langton,§ squyer, son and heir of John Langton, knyght, made the xxij. day of December,

* William Thwaite of Marston, in the Ainsty of York, Esq. the head of a family which afterwards rose to some eminence. This will makes considerable additions to the pedigree of the family, of the early history of which there is but little known. The will of William Thwaite of Marston, the testator's father, adds another generation to the pedigree. It was proved at York 10 Feb. 1434–5. In it he desires to be buried in the choir of the church of Marston, with the permission of the rector. He then orders Sir Thomas Marshall to make an estate to his son William Thwaite (the testator), of all his lands in Bikerton, and another to his son Robert, of his lands in Hoton, together with the chapel croft. He appoints as his executors Agnes his wife and William his son, and he makes Guy Rocliffe the supervisor of his will. Marston is at a short distance from York, and it is there that that fatal fight occurred which was so ruinous to the hopes of the Royalists, and so disastrous to Charles I.

† Thomas Thwaite, the eldest son of the testator, married a Middleton of Stokeld, and was the progenitor of the family at Marston.

‡ There was evidently some connection between the families of Thwaite and Rocliffe, but where it was I have been unable to ascertain.

his mother Euphemia has occurred (No. CCII.). The pedigree of the family in Thoresby's Ducatus Leodiensis is full of such glaring inconsistencies, that even Whitaker turns aside to notice them. In it the testator is said to have married Eleanor, daughter of William Saltmarsh, of Saltmarsh, Esq. The name of his wife, as we gather from her monument and the present will, was Agnes. This will is unfortunately imperfect.

* Whitaker alludes to this monument in his History of Leeds. He describes it as a large black marble stone, with the effigies of a male and female figure upon it, which have been originally surrounded by twelve escutcheons. At the feet of the figures is the inscription of which he professes to give a copy. His version must be an incorrect one, as he makes both husband and wife to die on one day, "probably," as he says, "of some pestilential disorder." This by no means tallies with the present will, which is dated some years after Langton and his wife are said to have died. Whitaker has evidently read the inscription incorrectly.

York vj s. viij d. I have made a state to Sir Henry Vavasour knyght and to other in and of my maners of Farneley, Gargrave, Multhorp and Clakheton and of othir landes and tenements in Farnelay, Gairgrave, Multhorp, Clakheton, Okenshagh, Scoles, Wyksay, Lutton upon the Wolde and Lillyng, and also of certeyn landes in Tange and in the Cite of York, and of certyne rent in the county of Lancastre—I will that if naythir Sir Robert Danby knyght, James * his son, nor Annes doghtir to John Langton † my son newe dede and wife to the same James—Also I will that the said Annes have astate in like wise of the revercion of an annuite of xx. marcs going out of the maner of Hoton Longvilers, after ye decese of Thomas Langton and William Langton bredir to me the seid John, or elles of the same maner, yf it may be goten for as much as it is taild of olde tyme to me be endenture of marige made betwix Sr Robert Nevill ‡ and Margaret his wyfe doghtir to Sir William Pole.—bro^r Henry Langton.

* Sir James, eldest son of Sir Robert Danby, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas. He married the testator's granddaughter, Agnes, daughter and heir of his eldest son John Langton, Esq. From this match descended the knightly family of Danby of Farneley, an estate which Sir James received with his wife. Sir James Danby, by his will dated on the 6th of March, 1496-7, which was proved at York on the 28th of June following, desired to be buried in the church of Leeds. His wife, the heiress of Farneley, survived him, and is mentioned in her husband's will.

† John Langton, Esq. the testator's eldest son, whom he speaks of as "newe dead," had been gathered to his fathers some ten years before the date of the present document. By his will, dated Dec. 4, 1452, he ordered himself to be buried in the church of All Saints in the Marsh, in the city of York. He left to Joan his sister three milch kine, and to a midwife (sic) of Stockton 3*s*. The residue of his estate he bequeathed to John Langton his father.

‡ The heiress of the Nevilles brought the estate of Farneley into the family of Langton.

* A York gentleman, and in all probability the father of William Senows, Bishop of Durham. That prelate is said to have been the son of a sieve-maker, and to have been born at the little village of Shincliffe, near Durham. It may, perhaps, seem ungenerous for a native to subtract even one name from the scanty list of local worthies of whom the County Palatine of Durham can boast; but I should like to see this statement of the bishop's origin and birthplace rest upon some other authority than Browne Willis. We have probably before us the will of the prelate's father. Senowes (his name has been written in many ways) began life as a monk of St. Mary's Abbey, York. His rise must have been a rapid one, as he was successively Warden of Merton College, Oxford, Provost of Eton, Chancellor of the University of Oxford, Abbat of St. Mary's Abbey, York, and Bishop of Carlisle. His last piece of preferment was the bishoprick of Durham. He died in 1505, having held the see of Durham for three years, and was buried in St. Mary's Abbey in York.

† Walter Calverley, of Calverley, Esq. the head of a distinguished and ancient house. He is said to have married Elizabeth, one of the daughters of Sir Thomas Markenfield, of Markenfield, 2 Henry V. In his will he mentions his wife Catherine. The testator appears to have discarded the name of Scott, the ancient patronymic of his family, which for some time waged war with Calverley. In the Test. Ebor. I. CCXXXIII. the will of Sir Walter Calverley, the father, or perhaps the grandfather, of the testator, may be found.

‡ A Catherine Calverley, whom I believe to be the widow of the testator, made her will in 1481, which was proved at York three years afterwards. She appears to have lived at Milford, and she desires to be buried on the north side of the church of Sherburne, before the image of St. Mary Magdalene. There is nothing in her will to identify her with any degree of certainty as the widow of the testator.

§ Beatrix, the testator's daughter, became the wife of Tristram Bolling of Bolling.

CCXXVII. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS FITZWILLIAM.

In Dei nomine, Amen. x. Sep. M.cccc.xlvj. (sic). Ego Johannes Fitzwilliam ¶ de Waddesworth—sepeliendum ubicunque Deus disposuerit. Lego nomine mortuarii mei optimum meum animal vicario eccles. de Waddesworth. Lego eidem vicario pro decimis meis oblitis iij s. iiij d. Lego idoneo et honesto capellano ad celebrandum pro anima mea et anima uxoris meæ, ac animabus omnium pro quibus orare teneor, xiiij. marcas. Lego Aliciæ filiæ Margaretæ uxoris meæ unam ollam eneam, j. pelvim cum lavacro. Elizabethæ Stirlay unam ollam enneam, j. pelvim cum lavacro. Item lego fabricæ ecclesiæ de Waddesworth vj s. viij d.

* William Calverley, Esq. the testator's son and heir, married Agnes, a daughter of Sir John Tempest of Bracewell. His marriage articles are dated 20 Henry VI. On the 12th of April, 1488, he made his will, which was proved at York on the 31st of January following. He desires to be buried in the church of Calverley. He mentions his wife Agnes, his brother Robert, his sons William, John, Richard, Robert, Thomas, and Nicholas, his daughter Alice, and his sister Elizabeth, both of whom were then nuns at Esholt. He calls himself "senior" in his will.

† Robert Calverley (the elder) of Calverley, Esq. one of the younger sons of the testator, survived till 1498-9. He then made his will, in which he desired to be buried in the choir of the church of Calverley, under his stone. He mentions his daughters Catherine and Alison, with the children of his brother Thomas, and Sir William Calverley and his lady. His wife had died before him.

‡ Ralph Wentworth was probably a kinsman of the testator. Elizabeth, the testator's daughter, married John Wentworth of North Elmsal.

§ One of the testator's daughters was the wife of Richard Kighley.

‖ Margaret Calverley, a daughter of the testator, married Thomas Clapham.

¶ The testator does not appear in the pedigree of Fitzwilliam of Wadworth which is given by Mr. Hunter. From the date he might perhaps be a son of that Edmund Fitzwilliam who died in 1430.

Residuum Aliciæ uxori meæ, Arnaldo Reresby * et Willelmo Wynsterlay vicario de Cunesburgh. Lego utrique dictorum Arnaldi Reresby et Will. Wynsterlay pro eorum laboribus xiij s. iiij d. [Prob. 1 Ap. 1467.]

* Arnald Reresby of Rotherham, Esq. was probably a younger son of Sir Thomas Reresby of Thribergh, who died in 1439. His will, which is dated on 28 Nov. 1485, was proved at York on the 4th of January following. He desires to be buried in the church of Thribergh. He leaves 24 marks to a suitable priest who shall do service and pray specially for his soul, and for those of William Reresby his brother, and Isabella his sister, for the space of four years. To the making or glazing of a window in the chapel of the Blessed Mary upon Rotherham Bridge, 6*s.* 8*d.* To Elizabeth, Margaret, and Alianor Reresby 6 marks each. To Thomas Reresby 20*s.* To Isabel Westby 10*s.* To Elizabeth Fitzwilliam 13*s.* 4*d.* To Arnald Wardrop, 13*s.* 4*d.* To Richard Reresby 13*s.* 4*d.* To Arnald Tak 6*s.* 8*d.* To the Abbot and Convent of Roche 13*s.* 4*d.* To John Greenwood, Vicar of Rotherham, 10*s.* To John Treyton 20*s.* He appoints his cousin Ralph Reresby his executor. Arnald Reresby died 2 Dec. 1485, and was buried in Thribergh Church, where his monument is still remaining. His name was formerly recorded in one of the windows in Rotherham Church.

Of Sir Thomas Reresby, the father of Arnald, there is but little known. He married Maud Bosvile of Chevet, and, dying 28 March, 1439, was buried near his wife in Thribergh Church. His wife died in June, 1430. Sir Thomas made his will 7 Dec. 1431, which was not proved till April 28, 1439. He orders himself to be buried in the church of St. Leonard at Thribergh, and he desires that a chaplain may be found to do service for his soul, as well as for that of Matilda his wife, with others. His sons Ralph and Arnald Reresby are his residuary legatees and executors, and his cousin Peter De la Pole is the supervisor of his will. His father, another Sir Thomas Reresby, died in 1394.

Also I wite to ylkon of my sonnes v. twynters

* The family of Laton took up its abode at Sexhoe in Cleveland, at the close of the 14th century, in right of Elizabeth, one of the coheirs of Nicholas Gower, who became the wife of Thomas Laton of Laton in Richmondshire, the father of the testator. On the 20th of June, 1431, the testator had a grant of lands in Brawith made to him by his father and mother. The maiden name of his wife has not yet been ascertained. He had by her a large family. His eldest son, Robert Laton of Melsonby and Sexhoe, Esq. died in 1480, and his widow Eleanor in 1503. The main line of the family became extinct towards the close of the 17th century.

† On May 11, 1480, Roger Laton, Esq. was allowed to administer to the effects of Elizabeth Laton of the city of York, widow, and of Sir Robert Laton, late Rector of St. Saviour's in that city, both of whom had died intestate.

‡ Sir Christopher Conyers of Hornby, about whom much has been already said.

§ Christopher Conyers, Rector of Hutton Rudby in Cleveland, and the parish priest of the testator, was one of the younger children of Sir Christopher Conyers of Hornby. He died in 1483 ; and his will, which is dated in that year, throws considerable light upon the much-disputed genealogy of the house of Conyers of Hornby. He was instituted to the rectory of Rudby penult. Feb. 1456-7, on the presentation of Sir John Conyers, Knight. The living was then vacant by the death of John Castell.

‖ Maud daughter of Henry Lord Fitzhugh of Ravenswath Castle, by Elizabeth heiress of Sir Robert Grey of Rotherfield and the widow of Sir William Eure of Witton Castle in the bishoprick of Durham. Her mother Elizabeth, the Lady of Ravenswath, mentions her in her will, which was dated in 1427, and leaves to her "a Primer covered in blew." (Wills and Inv. 211.) By Sir William Eure the testatrix had a large family. The manor house of Old Malton was the favourite residence of the Eures, and many of them were interred in the adjacent monastery. Her eldest son, Sir Ralph Eure, was killed at Towton in 1461.

* Margery wife of Sir Christopher Conyers of Sockburn, Kt. by whom she had many children.

† Catherine married Sir Robert Ughtred of Kexby, Kt.

‡ About this lady there is some little obscurity. She may, perhaps, have been the wife of Sir John Ogle, a younger son of the house of Bothal, who took the name of Bertram. He had a wife Jane, about whom Mr. Hodgson in his History of Northumberland can give no information. She remarried a Pennington.

§ Henry Eure of Old Malton, Esq. the second son of the testatrix, took to wife Catherine Danby the widow of Robert Lascelles, Esq. of Sowerby near Thirsk. By her he left a daughter Margery. In his will, dated at Old Malton, 17 Oct. 1476, he desires to be buried in the "Monastery of our Lady in Olde Malton before the medys of the alter of Seynt John of Baptist, where the prest usith to saye Confiteor." The will is too interesting to be compressed within the narrow compass of a note.

‖ William Eure, S T.B. one of the younger children of the testatrix, occurs as rector of Brompton in Pickering Lyth in August 4, 1453. He then obtains a licence to preach from the Archbishop of York. On Sept. 20, 1460, he exchanges his living of Brompton with John Gisburn for the precentorship in York Minster, and on the 28th of July, in the following year the Archbishop grants him a dispensation for non-

And of this my last will and testament to be fulfillede, I make myn executoures my saide sonnes Herre Eure, Maister William Eure and John Eure. Also I ordan and mak surviors of my saide will and testament, that my will aforesaid may be fulfilled, my especiall good lord my lorde of Graystoke and my lorde Fytheughe.* Yeven the day and the yere abovesaid. Theys wittenes, Prior of Malton, Sir William Turnor, Sir Thomas Slake and William Bady the elder. [Pr. 30 May, 1467.]

CCXXXII. TESTAMENTUM JOHANNIS SMYTH DE NEWERK CAPELLANI.

Jun. vj. M.cccc.lxvij. Ego Johannes Smyth de Newarke capellanus—sepeliend. in eccles. par. B. Mar. de Newarke coram ymagine Beati Nicholai, more presbiteri cantar. ejusdem loci. Quatuor capellanis portantibus funus meum ad ecclesiam, cuilibet v d., in honore quinque vulnerum Domini nostri Jhesu Christi. Et volo quod quilibet sacerdos veniens ad sepulcrum meum procumbens sub stola in tempore absolucionis habeat ij d. Lego ad altare S. Nicholai unum vestimentum de damask et unum crucifixum de argento ibidem imperpetuum permansura in memoriam mei et omnium benefactorum meorum.

residence, as, in obedience to the King's mandate, he was unable to be far distant from the city of London. Eure was Vicar of Leeds for some time, and he founded the chantry of St. Mary Magdalen in that town. He was living in 1476, when he is mentioned in his brother Henry's will.

* The nephews of the testatrix. To illustrate the relationship which existed between these two noble houses, I append a document which may be found in the Register of John Kempe, Cardinal Archbishop of York, fol. 158-9. It appears that Ralph the eldest son and heir of John, Baron of Greystock, was desirous of contracting an alliance with Elizabeth one of the daughters of William Lord Fitzhugh of Ravenswath. He finds that she is his cousin, a relationship which in those days was fatal to matrimony if no dispensation from some ecclesiastical authority could be obtained, and accordingly he obtained a dispensation from Pope Eugenius IV. Armed with this instrument young Greystock goes at once to the Archbishop of York and obtains an audience of that prelate in the Hospital of St. James, near Westminster, on the 22d of November, 1434. He was accompanied by John Catterick, who acted as proctor for his betrothed. The Archbishop, who was perhaps annoyed at Greystock's going to the Papal court for a dispensation which he could have granted himself, requires the production of witnesses to prove the exact relationship between the two parties. The witnesses who are produced were all of them Yorkshiremen by birth, and one of them at least was a distinguished man. They were, William Ayscough, gentleman, learned in the law, Richard Burgh (domicellus), and Richard Seggeswyk. The witnesses assert that Henry Fizherry, knight, was the father of Henry Fizhugh and Joan, that Henry Fizhugh was the father of another Henry who was the father of William Lord Fizhugh, whose daughter Elizabeth was the wife of the said Ralph Greystock. (It does not follow from this that the marriage had already taken place). The witnesses now proceed to give the pedigree of the lady. Joan the daughter of Henry Fizherry, knight, was the wife, as they say, of William Baron Greystock, and the mother by him of Ralph, the father of John the petitioner's sire. The Archbishop confirmed the papal dispensation, and we are indebted to his scruples for the preservation of an interesting record, a curious specimen of a kind of documentary evidence, which is very rarely to be met with.

ERRATA ET ADDENDA.

P. 10.—For "this family were owners of," read "this family possessed."

P. 30.—Note. Guy Rocliffe was Recorder of York: his son Brian was made a Baron of the Exchequer in 1458.

P. 40.—Note, line 3. For "daughter and coheiress," read "sister and coheiress."

P. 67.—Note, line 4 from foot of the page. For "Hatham," read "Hotham."

P. 79.—Line 12. For "Metrodoro," read "interdicto."

P. 85.—No. lxxiii. In 1390 the Prior and Convent of Durham borrow 100 marks of Thomas de Blenkensop, knight, Dame Margaret, his wife, and John, their son. On Nov. 17, 1397, they borrow 50 marks of Alexander, son of Thos. de Blenkensop, knight, who was then living at Semer, near Scarbrough.

P. 105.—Note. This lady appears, after all, to have been a Hamerton of Hamerton. Dr. Whitaker, in his History of Craven, p. 127, gives her monumental inscription.

P. 110.—Note. The first wife of Sir Giles Daubeny was a daughter of Philip Lord Darcy. His grandson, another Giles, was created Lord Daubeny in 1486, and his great-grandson Earl of Bridgewater in 1538.

P. 121.—Line 3 from foot of the page. For "filiolo meo" read "filiolæ meæ." This lady was a daughter of Thomas Lord Clifford, and she afterwards became the wife of Sir John Harrington of Hornby.

P. 170.—Note. Sir Gervase Clifton was buried in the chancel of his own church, at Clifton, and not in Southwell Minster.

P. 187.—I am glad to have it in my power to add an engraving of the signet of John Lord Scrope.

THE SURTEES SOCIETY.

REPORT FOR THE YEAR MDCCCLV.

The Surtees Society celebrates to-day its 21st Anniversary, and its past career has been so prosperous and encouraging, that it looks forward to the future with confidence and pleasure. The field of historical literature on which it has been engaged is still inexhausted, and the success that has hitherto attended the undertakings of the Society gives it fair reason for hoping that its future efforts will be still more appreciated and still more successful.

The Surtees Society was established in 1834, as a tribute of respect to the memory of Robert Surtees, Esq., the historian of the County Palatine of Durham. His many friends and admirers thought that the institution of a Society to perpetuate the name and to follow in the footsteps of that distinguished antiquary, would be the fittest monument that they could rear to commemorate him. The object of the Society which was thus begun was to secure the publication of MSS. which threw light upon the religious, moral, and social condition of the Northern parts of England, and in this it has been eminently successful. When our Society commenced its labours twenty-one years ago, it stood almost alone in the literary world, now, happily, there are many other publishing societies which have copied our rules and followed our example. The Surtees Society found the North rich in MSS. which none of our Northern Antiquaries would venture to publish on his own individual responsibility,—now it has given to the world a series of Works, not merely of local, but also of national interest—a series of Works which adds greatly to the long-established reputation of our Northern Antiquaries, and to which every modern writer on the manners and customs of our ancestors is more or less indebted.

The Surtees Society is at present in a much better position than it has ever yet occupied, and for this it is indebted to the judicious alterations in its constitution which were effected some six years ago. It was then deemed expedient to dissolve the original Society, and to re-establish it with a wider field for action, and a more liberal constitution. Since that fortunate re-formation the Society has yearly increased in numbers and efficiency. In 1849, the year of its re-establishment, the Socsety had only 90 members, it now numbers 180. The volume of York wills which is laid before the Society to-day, is the 30th that it has published; and it is most satisfactory to observe that the Society derives a large and rapidly increasing annual income from the sale of its publications, notwithstanding the high prices which are necessarily put upon the volumes.

One of the publications of the Society for 1856, is the elaborate survey of the County Palatine of Durham, which was prepared during the Episcopate of Thomas Hatfield (1345-1381). This document, which has never yet been published, is of the greatest interest and value. As the publication of this record will necessarily entail upon a Society a very serious outlay, it has been deemed advisable to solicit the assistance of the public at large to enable the Society to publish a work of public interest and importance. This appeal has been liberally responded to, and the Society trusts that it will shortly be enabled to give forth to the world an accurate imprint of this most important document.

THE SURTEES SOCIETY,

ESTABLISHED IN THE YEAR 1834.

In honour of the late Robert Surtees, of Mainsforth, Esquire, the Author of the History of the County Palatine of Durham, and in accordance with his pursuits and plans; having for its object the publication of inedited Manuscripts, illustrative of the intellectual, the moral, the religious, and the social condition of those parts of England and Scotland, included on the East between the Humber and the Frith of Forth, and on the West between the Mersey and the Clyde, a region which constituted the Ancient Kingdom of Northumberland.

NEW RULES AGREED UPON IN 1849.

At a General Meeting of the Surtees Society, held in the room of the Warden of the University of Durham, on Thursday, May 31, 1849, the Rev. TEMPLE CHEVALLIER, one of the Vice-Presidents of the Society, in the chair.

The Report of the Committee appointed at a General Meeting, held on the 7th February last, to revise the Rules of the Society was taken into consideration, and the following Rules were adopted for the future government of the Society:—

I. The Society shall consist of an unlimited number of members.

II. There shall be a Patron of the Society, and the Right Reverend Edward Maltby, D.D., F.R.S., Lord Bishop of Durham, shall be the first Patron.

III. The Warden of the University of Durham for the time being shall be the President of the Society.

IV. There shall be twenty-four Vice-Presidents, of whom four shall be such of the Professors, Tutors, or Fellows of the University of Durham as shall be members of the Society. There shall also be a Secretary and two Treasurers.

V. The Patron, the President, the Vice-Presidents, the Secretary, and the Treasurers, shall form the Council, any five of whom, including the Secretary and a Treasurer, shall be a quorum competent to transact the business of the Society.

VI. The twenty-four Vice-Presidents, the Secretary, and the Treasurers, shall be elected at a general meeting, to continue in office for three years, and be capable of re-election.

VII. Any vacancies in the offices of Secretary or Treasurers shall be provisionally filled up by the Council, subject to the approbation of the next general meeting.

VIII. Three meetings of the Council shall be held in every year, one in each academical term of the University of Durham, at such place, and on such a day, as shall be fixed upon by the President, to be communicated by the Secretary to the members of the Council.

IX. The meeting in the Easter Term of each year shall be the anniversary, to which all the members of the Society shall be convened by the Secretary.

X. The President shall have the power of convening extraordinary meetings of the Council.

XI. Members may be elected by ballot at any one of the terminal meetings, upon being proposed in writing by three existing members. One black ball in ten shall exclude.

XII. Each member shall pay in advance to the Treasurer the annual sum of one guinea. If any member's subscription shall be in arrear for two years, and he shall neglect to pay his subscription after having been reminded by the Treasurer, he shall be regarded as having ceased to be a member of the Society.

XIII. The money raised by the Society shall be expended in publishing such compositions, in their original language, or in a translated form, as come within the scope of this Society, without limitation of time with reference to the period of their respective authors. All editorial and other expenses to be defrayed by the Society.

XIV. One volume, at least, in a closely printed octavo form, shall be supplied to each member of the Society every year, free of expence.

XV. If the funds of the Society in any year will permit, the Council shall be at liberty to print and furnish to the members, free of expense, any other volume or volumes of the same character, in the same or a different form.

XVI. The number of copies of each publication, and the selection of a printer and publisher, shall be left to the Council, who shall also fix the price at which the copies not furnished to members shall be sold to the public.

XVII. The armorial bearings of Mr. Surtees and some other characteristic decoration connecting the Society with his name, together with the armorial bearings of the University of Durham, shall be used in each publication.

XVIII. A list of the officers and members, together with an account of the receipts and expenses of the Society, shall be made up every year to the time of the annual meeting, and shall be submitted to the Society to be printed and published with the next succeeding volume.

XIX. No alteration shall be made in these rules except at an annual meeting. Notice of any such alteration shall be given, at least, as early as the terminal meeting of the Council immediately preceding, to be communicated to each member of the Society.

(Signed) TEMPLE CHEVALLIER.
